Canada Delivered The Year Round

Queries Kettle Tests

TORONTO (CP) — A major battle manufacturer Friday questioned federal government testing methods used to determine whether some kettles are unsafe because of their lead emissions.

John Heeney, corporate marketing manager for Sunbeam Corp. of Canada, said in a interview there are "many inaccuracies with their testing in terms of data that was released."

He questioned the methods used to assess the amount of lead emitted by the kettles and whether the government standard of 50 parts of lead per billion was the right one.

Mr. Heeney said the 50 parts per billion figure is regarded by the government's consumer and corporate affairs department as "an acceptable standard."

But so far no figure has been given to say at what point a kettle's lead emissions are dangerous "in terms of a health hazard."

He said the technical committee of the Portable Appliance Makers' Association met scientific officers of the department in Ottawa Thursday and the department is to issue a statement to clarify its findings.

Drafting New Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — The consumer and corporate affairs department is drafting regulations to prohibit the importation, advertising and sale of electric kettles that pose a danger to health, a department spokesman said Friday.

"We hope to issue the regulations very soon," he added.

The department announced Wednesday that 32 of 51 electric kettles tested released unsafe amounts of lead into water boiled in them.

Only three were found to produce no lead contamination.

Joyous Crowds Welcome PoWs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Joyous crowds in Damascus said Tel Aviv greeted the first returning prisoners of the October war today as Israel and Syria began the exchange of wounded PoWs promised in their disengagement pact.

Red Cross medical planes left the two cities minutes apart today carrying 38 repatriated prisoners, some legless or in casts.

An hour later, 12 wounded Israeli soldiers stepped off the chartered Fokker Friendship plane at Ben-Gurion airport near Tel Aviv to kisses, tears and flowers from miniskirted women soldiers.

At about the same time 25 Syrians and one Moroccan arrived to an emotional welcome in Damascus. Red-bereted military police forced a mob of hundreds from the plane to enable the PoWs to disembark.

Women wailed and men cheered in Damascus as the plane taxied to a halt. But a hush fell over the mob as the first wounded man was carried out by stretcher. Legless, he sat rigidly upright, his right hand cocked in a military salute.

Premier Golda Meir, Defence Minister Moshe Dayan and Chief of Staff Lt.-Gen. Mordechai Gur were among hundreds who greeted the returning Israelis.

"This is the first stage of the end of the war," said Dayan as the men, some in bandages and on casts, boarded ambulances for a brief drive to Tel Hash omer hospital.

He pledged that Israeli troops will not budge from the Syrian front "until all our prisoners are back."

The scenes of joy contrasted sharply with the earlier departures. Reporters were barred from the Damascus airport as the Israelis were led on board. The wounded men sat in a small plane for an hour under a broiling sun before it left.

The Arab Arabs were transported to Ben-Gurion airport from an Israeli prison hospital in ambulances with painted-over windows. They filed on board, some on crutches and one on a litter, under the gaze of 300 Israeli soldiers.

In related developments, Syria and Israeli generals planned to meet today in Geneva on other details of the agreement, forged by United States State Secretary Henry Kissinger and signed by the two sides Friday.

The Golan Heights front, scene of 81 days of Israeli and Syrian battles, has been quiet since shortly after the signing. Israel and Syria agreed in the disengagement pact to exchange wounded prisoners of war within 24 hours of the signing of the agreement. The remaining prisoners are to be exchanged after the generals finish their discussions in Geneva, for which five days have been allotted.

No More Troops Needed

SASKATOON (CP) — External affairs minister Mitchell Sharp said Friday night Canadian troops will be deployed along the Israeli-Syrian cease-fire line, but no additional troops will be sent to the Mideast.

The troops necessary to fulfil Canada's obligation in the Golan Heights will be drawn from the 1,000-man Canadian peacekeeping contingent with the United Nations force along the Israeli-Egyptian ceasefire line, he told a news conference.

Canadians will provide engineering, communications and transportation services for the United Nations force in the Golan Heights, the same function they fill along the Suez frontier.

He said Canada may be asked by the UN to provide strategic materials for the Golan Heights force.

Mr. Sharp declined to estimate the cost of the Canadian operation.

He described the ceasefire agreement as "a remarkable achievement" while cautioning that it is merely a step toward total settlement of the conflict.

"It's far more hopeful that it has been at any time in the past 25 years. At least now they are negotiating."

Three Peace Obstacles Remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Henry Kissinger has told congressional leaders that three obstacles remain in the way of a permanent Middle East peace.

"In order, they were rectification of frontiers, Palestinian refugees and the question of Jerusalem," Senator John Tower (Rep. Tex.) told reporters Friday after emerging from a briefing by the United States state secretary.

Kissinger met separately with President Nixon and the congressional leaders at the White House within hours of returning from a 34-day diplomatic marathon in the Middle East that produced a disengagement pact between Israel and Syria. The agreement was signed in Geneva.

During the afternoon, Kissinger also conferred in private for nearly two hours with the Senate foreign relations committee.

Acting committee chairman Frank Church (Dem. Idaho) said afterward that the committee is "well satisfied . . . with this singular achievement, bridging "the wide gulf of mistrust" that separated Israel and Syria, but said "I new believe the two sides have learned to listen" to each other.

Nixon is expected to visit the Middle East beginning next weekend, and Kissinger is dicated to reporters that he will accompany the president.

Claims Publicity Stimulates Crime

KANSAS CITY (AP) — FBI Director Clarence Kelley suggested today that extensive news coverage of sensational crimes stimulates similar crimes.

He urged the news media to take a hard look at the methods of reporting such crimes as the Patricia Hearst case, kidnappings, skyjackings, riots and other incidents committed by those claiming political motives.

He noted that a number of kidnappings were reported soon after the abduction of Miss Hearst, and said that news media "must examine the possibility that part of the effect of publicity attending such crimes is to cause more of the same."

"Certainly I do not suggest the suppression of legitimate crime news," he said. "Perhaps it is the price we must be willing to pay for a free and unencumbered press in our democratic society."

Kerr Inquiry May be Public

TORONTO (CP) — Details of an inquiry into a police drug raid and search of patrons at a Fort Erie hotel are still to be worked out, Solicitor-General George Kerr said Friday.

Replying to opposition questions in the legislature, Mr. Kerr said he is considering an investigation under the Police Act which would allow for public hearings.

Forty-three persons, including 36 women, were stripped and searched by police during the May 17 raid at the Lakefield Hotel.

Mr. Kerr said he has rejected the idea of a royal commission inquiry because a report would be too long in coming.

"I want a report within three or four months."

Niagara Regional police were in charge the night of the raid, assisted by RCMP, Mr. Kerr said.

"We're dealing with a specific incident that took place in Fort Erie and that's where we want to get the information."

He said the chairman now is looking for a lawyer, or judge—"somebody outside that would be outside the government"—to run the investigation.

Jacques Rose Arrested After Bail-skipping

MONTREAL (CP) — Police today announced arrest in suburban Montreal of Jacques Rose, who disappeared in February while free on bail after being convicted last July of being an accessory after the fact in the October, 1970, kidnapping of Pierre Laporte.

Rose was arrested at 5 a.m. in an apartment in suburban Ville Emard and offered no resistance, police told a news conference. His girlfriend, Colette Therrien, was with him.

Rose was acquitted of kidnap and murder charges laid after the October, 1970, kidnap-murder of Mr. Laporte, then Quebec labor minister. Mr. Laporte was found slain Oct. 17, 1970, a week after becoming the second man to be kidnapped by the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Negotiations Fizzle For Great TV Debate

THE CANADIAN PRESS

A CBC spokesman confirmed Friday that negotiations to arrange a face-to-face televised debate of party leaders before the July 8 federal election have broken down.

Gordon Cullingham, acting Ottawa area supervisor for the network's public affairs programming, said efforts to reach agreement among the four major parties have been abandoned.

In Rouyn, Que., Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, released Friday from hospital after three days of diabetic tests, said he was anxious for a debate.

"I think whoever is stalling is guilty of treason to the people of Canada."

The last nationally-televised politics debate among major party leaders was in 1968 when Prime Minister Trudeau, Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, former NDP leader T.C. Douglas and Mr. Caouette met on the same platform.

Brian Robert Brunton, of Thornhill, and Robert Kirk Armstrong, of Kitchener, have been charged with possession of marijuana and with a series of lesser act offences after police found what they believe to be approximately $30 worth of marijuana in the car.

The Brunton car was eastbound on Highway 401 when PC Don Searry pulled it over for speeding.

Tyendinaga Taxes Down

MELROSE — Tyendinaga township 1974 taxes will be lower by 7.7 mills on farm and residential properties and 8.4 mills on commercial properties.

The reduction is possible because of a decreased Hastings County mill rate.

On farm and residential properties the county rate this year is 18 mills, down 11.4 mills. The township rate is 15 mills, up one mill. Secondary School rate is 20.8 mills, up 2.8 mills, elementary school rate is 25.7 mills, up 2.1 mills. Separate school rate is unchanged at 23 mills.

Increased costs for fire protection, garbage collection and the new assessment bill are the one-mill raise for township purposes.

Tax notices are expected to be mailed during the last half of June with instalments again becoming due by July 31 and December 1.

Hydro Crews Kept Busy

A cold front moving through the Quinte district Friday night caused severe localized thunder storms and strong winds that sent Hydro crews out for most of the night.

A falling tree limb cut power lines in Foxboro and surrounding district, causing a three hour blackout. Power was cut at 8.49 p.m. and restored at 11.43 p.m.

A Hydro spokesman said "a couple of transformers" were out at other locations and crews worked most of the night to restore power.

The cold front, preceded by thunder storms, moved out of the area about midnight, said the Trenton weather office, and is now located along the St. Lawrence River valley.

Family Medicine Centre Proposed for Belleville

A teaching centre for students of family medicine has been proposed for Belleville.

The project — suggested by Queen's University faculty of medicine — is being studied by Belleville General Hospital administration and physicians.

The concept would create an extended university campus development in the city. It includes construction of a teaching centre and involvement of community physicians with whom students would serve apprenticeships.

The proposal will be defined in detail June 11 at BGH when medical professionals and hospital representatives meet.

The concept is part of a program designed to emphasize family medicine as a career goal for medical students. It was suggested by Queen's University faculty of medicine — is being studied by Belleville General Hospital administration and physicians.

The concept is part of a program designed to emphasize family medicine as a career goal for medical students. It was suggested by Queen's University faculty of medicine — is being studied by Belleville General Hospital administration and physicians.

A letter from H. Garfield Kelly, vice-principal, Queen's health sciences, sent this outline to BGH board of governors Friday.

Major objective of the extended campus concept would be to train second and third year students in a community environment.

The Belleville project would involve a centre — with about 10,000 square feet of space — financed under the province's Health Resources Development Program. This would be an academic focus for students, housing conferences seminars and case presentations. Community teaching practices would be conducted by family physicians on a master-apprentice basis.

Any move toward realizing the proposal must await discussion of its "fundamental" concepts, wrote Dr. Kelly.

The initial move will come at the June 11 discussion between hospital physicians, staff and governors with Queen's representatives.

Hospital officials also hope for attendance by professionals from other provincial medical teaching centres at Ottawa, London and Hamilton.

Solandt Commission Ends First Set of Hearings

The Soland Commission, which is investigating possible objections to the construction of a 113-mile long 500 kilovolt bulk power transmission line across segments of Quinte area, concluded a three-day public forum at the Four Seasons Motor Hotel here yesterday.

Friday, the commission heard the testimony of 11 Sidney and Thurlow Township residents who sought clarification of or objected to issues raised in Ontario Hydro's proposal to build the bulk power line from the Lennox Generating Station to Oshawa.

Hydro's recommended route is one of three options presented during a series of public meetings held in the fall of 1973 by a team of Hydro officials and Commonwealth Associates Inc. consulting engineers.

The proposed line, to be located in a 425-foot strip, runs north about a mile from Mount Pleasant Junction where the egress from Lennox Generating Station terminates, before jogging west for five miles parallel to Highway 401. It crosses the Salmon River about a mile southwest of Lonsdale and travels west through Tyendinaga Township's third concession.

Through Thurlow Township the power line runs through the fourth concession, crossing Highway 37 just south of Honeywell Corners before moving south across the Moira River.

In Sidney Township, the line parallels the Trans-Canada Pipeline for about six miles and then dips into the third concession before crossing the Trent River north of Glen Miller.

From this point, the proposed power line jogs northward to end at the Oshawa area transformer station.

The general consensus of those appearing before the commission yesterday was that the proposed Hydro route should be shifted northward so that it could be placed on poor farm land.

Of the 11 witnesses who testified yesterday, at least six recommended that the proposed Hydro route be shifted northward so as not to interfere with productive farm lands in the south.

Hydro officials explained that if a northern route were chosen, the length of the transmission line would be increased and a greater number of people would be affected.

One Hydro official told the commission that if the proposed power line route were to be extended into the Canadian Shield to the north, the cost of supplying power to the Oshawa area would jump by as much as $25 million.

In other briefs presented to the commission yesterday, the Quinte Planning Board, represented by Bert Kenny, told the commission that it felt the proposed route was the least objectional and would be more generally acceptable, if it were realigned to follow under concession roads and rear property boundaries, where applicable, in order to reduce the effect of severance.

Quinte Cablevue Ltd. noted that the proposed power line might interfere with the reception of the company's television antennas, located on Lot 18 of the Fifth Concession, Sidney, and asked for the co-operation of Ontario Hydro in minimizing the effect the Hydro line would have on cable-television reception.

Roy Taylor, Cablevue's general manager, told the commission that the proposed Hydro line would be located directly in the path of his company's receiving antennas and could possibly cause some problems. The signal from television station CFTO in Toronto would be the most susceptible to interference, Mr. Taylor said, but all other television station receivers, excepting Peterborough, might also be affected.

The Solandt Commission will return to the Quinte area to hold two more public meetings early in June so that farmers and other persons affected by the proposed Hydro Power line might present their views on the location of the project.

On June 11, the commission will hold a meeting at 8.30 p.m. in the Shediake Public School and, on June 12, a meeting will be held at Harwell Corners, also at 8.30 p.m.

Following the hearings and study, the commission will present its recommendation for the most plausible power line route to the provincial cabinet.

Only Survivor of Landslide To Meet Long-lost Brothers

VANCOUVER (CP) — An 18-year-old girl plans to return this summer to the scene of the most important moments in her life—a moment she cannot remember.

Selma Murray of Flin Flon, Man., was only 18 months old Nov. 22, 1957, when a evacuee-beard her cries and saw a tiny hand sticking out of a pile of debris near Prince Rupert, B.C.

About an hour before, thousands of tons of rock had roared down a mountainside above the street, destroying three houses, one of them belonging to Selma's family.

John and Merle Murray and their five-months-old son James died in the rockfall, which swept the houses more than 300 feet from their foundations. Four persons in the other two houses also died.

Lee Intermela, a truck driver who now lives in Nanaimo, B.C., heard Selma's cries and saw her hand. She had apparently been carried along on the crest of the slide.

"I don't remember anything about it," said Selma in an interview from Flin Flon, where she lives with her adoptive parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Schuman. "All I know is what I've seen in the clippings I have in a scrapbook."

She plans to return to Prince Rupert to commemorate her escape from death.

The visit will bring "another kind of important moment in my life"—meeting three triplet brothers she has never seen and knew nothing of until she found out about them three years ago.

"I would like so much to see my brothers and talk to them, although it will be a bit weird after all the years I didn't know I had any brothers left."

The brothers are about two years older than Selma. One, born blind, remained in a Vancouver-area foster home when his parents moved to Prince Rupert.

The other two also stayed in Vancouver. Their foster mother, Mrs. John Duncan, said the brothers, Peter and John, are looking forward to meeting Selma.

"They had heard vaguely that there was a sister somewhere and so did I," said Mrs. Duncan. "But we didn't know for sure until we were advised that she was looking for her brothers.

"We didn't know, either, that Selma had been in that terrible slide in Prince Rupert and was the only survivor."

Selma's dream of meeting her brothers surfaced when Prince Rupert News ran a story following a snowslide west of Terrace, B.C., Jan. 22 that killed seven persons. The story mentioned the 1957 slide and said the whereabouts of the sole survivor were unknown.

Selma said she and her adoptive parents plan to drive to Prince Rupert in late July, then will ferry and motor to the Lower Mainland and probably go on to Vancouver Island to visit Mr. Intermela.

"It would be nice to see her after all these years," said Mr. Intermela. "I hope she finds time to drop around so I can tell her first-hand about her rescue.

"It's still vivid in my mind. It was a real miracle that she lived through it."

Mr. Intermela found Selma on her back in the tangled wreckage of her house.

"I remember hurrying to get her out of the slide because it had clogged up the creek and the water was already up to her shoulders.

"Her little brother was only a few yards away but he was buried under debris."

Selma said she wants to meet anyone who took part in the rescue but that the big thrill will be meeting her brothers in Vancouver.

"It's going to be something to see them together," said Mrs. Duncan. "I'm sure they're all going to get along fine."

Oyster Festival

The three-day oyster fun festival in Galway, Ireland, in September will feature the annual international oyster-opening championship. After the event, everyone joins in the fun, downing oysters off the half-shell and washing them down with a glass of stout. (CP Photo)

Galway Bay Is Place to Be At Oyster Festival Time

GALWAY, Ireland (CP) — "For oysters and his mother were the only things he loved," wrote W. S. Gilbert in one of his Bab Ballads, popular more than a generation ago. If oysters are your dish, there are oyster fun festivals to attend from midsummer into September.

The three-day festival at Galway, opening Sept. 14, features the annual international oyster opening championship, in which national champions try to outdo one another in the number of oysters they can open in a given time. Britain, France, West Germany, the Netherlands, Switzerland and, for the first time, Prince Edward Island competed last year.

After the event, everyone joins in the carnival spirit and dancing, tossing raw oysters off their half-shells into the tilted mouth and washing them down with a glass of Guinness.

It's a grand (a favorite word with the Irish) month to be in Galway, gateway to the Connemara district with its rugged terrain of lonely coastline, towering mountain ranges and small farms with the famous black-faced sheep and Connemara ponies. At the mouth of Galway Bay are the Aran Islands of the bulky, hand-knit Aran sweaters.

The French oyster beds around Arcachon Bay, some 50 miles south of Bordeaux, are worth a visit to see how their transplanted Canadian oysters are making out and in mid-July there is an oyster festival at Ares, just around the bay from Arcachon.

A few years ago the oysters were not doing well at Arcachon, where 6,000 families depend on the oyster export trade and 15,000 tons are exported in a good season. Young oysters from Canada, the nearest in quality and shape to the local product, were introduced. They mature at least a year earlier than the three to four years needed here.

All the oyster beds belong to the French government but oyster farmers can pass on rentals to their heirs. Several farmers welcome tourists and show them around.

Arcachon is a pleasant tree-shaded seaside resort with a large harbor that is home base to some 12,000 yachts. From there, tourists can drive into the wine-producing areas or to Biarritz, some 40 miles south.

In Canada, Prince Edward Island is the leading oyster province in the Maritimes and its Malpeque oysters are considered the best in North America. Tyne Valley village holds an annual oyster festival in midsummer and sent its champion oyster opener to Galway as part of last year's P.E.I. centennial celebrations.

Ulster's Troubles

Now that the power-sharing Assembly of Protestants and Catholics in Northern Ireland has fallen apart — broken by a crippling strike brought on by a Protestant workers' group, the prospects of orderly self-government in the British province are more remote than ever.

Irish unity, which is anathema to the Protestants, is even more remote.

On the face of it, it looks like victory for the Protestant factions who saw in the recent Sunningdale agreement and the proposed establishment of a Council of Ireland a step by the British to push Northern Ireland into an all-Ireland republic.

In fact though it could be a formula for further violence, if not all out civil war.

Meanwhile, the leftist-oriented IRA scenes a victory too — a victory for anarchy, fragmentation and continued uncertainty which is in line with all Communist political programming, this to precede an ultimate breakdown of community life and leave the people ripe for a left-wing takeover.

On the other hand, aside from the strike which undoubtedly caused a lot of harm, the impression we get from people living in Ulster is that life is far from being as chaotic as might be supposed. Before the strike, life went on as usual, industrial production was constant (in 1971 it was reported to be the highest of all the leading industrial nations on a per capita basis) and absenteeism and work stoppages were extremely low.

The media, it was complained, had been blowing the situation out of all proportion.

Be that as it may, this latest event, contains the seeds of more than usual trauma. If Britain again tries to rule the provinces directly, with representatives from Westminster in cooperation with the Ulster civil service, it could be an unenviable task. However, the Protestant majority wants no part of Irish unity, and are demanding new elections. This of course would seal the fate of power-sharing with the Catholic minority. Furthermore any hopes the Irish republic may have entertained about a united Ireland have been dashed for the time being at least.

If the worst comes to the worst and Britain finds itself either unwilling or unable to maintain security in Ulster, perhaps this is the time, finally, to consider sending a United Nations force to the province.

No Losers

Many a parent today is intrigued by the "no-lose" school of dialogue as between parents and children.

This theory is the basis of a Parent Effectiveness Training program outlined in a book by Dr. Thomas Gordon which in turn has become the foundation of an eight-week course at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

A Belleville couple, Mr. and Mrs. Don Raddon, have been presenting the course and quoted it is planned for fall as well.

There can be no doubt, especially these days, that there is a polarization of upbringing that manifests itself in over-strictness on the one hand and permissiveness on the other.

The "no-lose" concept presumably is a doctrine that makes for improved dialogue all round. It reminds us of the view held in human relations that people are persons in the process of becoming adults. A picture in a recent issue of The National Geographic Magazine showed a table and chair arrangement in a household where elderly adult and child faced each other across the table on the same level; it was by way of showing adults how the child feels in an adult world.

The Raddons, which we have described more fully in our news pages recently, seems to fit in with this way of thinking, extolling the virtues of a balanced, common sense style of dialogue between parents and children and allowing for the personal worth and dignity of all concerned.

Kissinger Did It

The remarkable Henry Kissinger has done it again. With his shuttle diplomacy, Dr. Kissinger has given new meaning to the art of negotiation and the achievement of détente. Seldom has ever worked with such determination, with such skill, or with such belief in an ultimate peaceful solution as he has. First, Vietnam; now the Middle East. Whether the peace agreements hold indefinitely is another matter, but for the moment it is Henry Kissinger's day of triumph.

Bilingualism And The 'French First' Hassle in Quebec

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA—Bilingualism was one of the largely unspoken, if not entirely under-the-surface issues of the last election.

Bilingualism is — if you define it on the basis of language population — far more the process of English-speaking public servants learning French, than of French members of the federal civil service brushing up on the English so very many of them already know.

It was enough of an issue the last time that two Liberal cabinet ministers, one of them Prime Minister Trudeau, and a government backbencher blew their cool over & after the votes were counted and the administration escaped defeat by only two seats.

The Prime Minister, charging that some of the Opposition candidates had been concealing what he saw as their bigotry, persisted to drive them out from cover with a declaration in Parliament reaffirming the principles of the Official Languages Act.

Whether he drove any out from cover — if, indeed, any had been hiding — was open to question.

But the Languages Act was reaffirmed.

It was not so much the doing of this that bothered the Opposition, it was the abrasive way he did it with his thinly veiled reference to bigotry.

Last election night, his majority severely cut and the Liberals all but wiped out of the West, Energy Minister Donald Macdonald blew his stack in front of a hailstuff of his Toronto Rosedale supporters, and lambasted the party's disaster all on what he, probably regarded as "rednecks, backbenchers and bigots."

Defeated, Liberal MP Murray McBride of Lanark-Renfrew-Carleton probably raged against what he cried was "bigotry, pure and simple," lashed out against his own constituents as "anti-French," and loudly lamented he was "ashamed of being an English-Canadian."

Not daring to go back to his old riding after that emotional outburst, Mr. McBride is trying his luck, in this election, in a Toronto constituency.

Well, all that was the language runoff under the bilingual bridge.

And now, at least $400 million later — the obvious and approximate cost of bilingualism runs to around $200 million, this is by way of determining the largely unseen, hidden price of it — under real estate taxes, and reserve.

Who is contributing to it?

Again the Prime Minister.

The whole bilingual rationale basically is that everyone Canadian should feel at home anywhere in Canada, with both "official languages" on an equal footing, and, possibly, use.

Federal public servants would speak French in English-Canada, to make their tiny French-Canadian community more comfortable.

And in Quebec, of course, French-Canadians would talk English — a great many of them do, anyway, it being only good business to be able to speak the English-Canadians at ease.

It sounded great, looked fine on paper, provided for by the National Capital, English-speaking public servants have had to learn real quickly, and resent it, to speak French—and the civil servants in the rest of Canada was discovering that bilingualism more and more was a job requirement for promotion to head office in Ottawa.

Then Quebec premier Robert Bourassa, acting as if he never had heard of bilingualism, proclaimed French as the official language of Quebec — and that's just right about all his fellow Liberals in Ottawa had been pushing for nearly 10 years.

So Prime Minister Trudeau was "asked how he liked that, and was this single provision the whole purpose of the Act?

What a time, during the election campaign, for this to begin to be asked — the question for the Prime Minister!

How did he respond?

Well, after all, he had given the benefit of the doubt to Premier Bourassa.

Well, after all, said the Prime Minister, French WAS the working language of Quebec, but it might have been better to have used the phrase "first language" instead of "official language."

Say it "first" yourself! It's a bilingualism? And is Quebec getting the same language treatment as the rest of the country?

Airlines Have A Plan To Fill Those Empty Seats

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Some relief from the high cost of air travel between Canada and Britain has been proposed by the two major airlines on the North Atlantic route.

If it comes, however, the relief is unlikely to apply to 1974 travel.

Scheduled carriers flying the North Atlantic fill only half their seats, on average. In a nutshell, Air Canada and British Airways want to sell the empty seats at cut-rate fares.

"Passengers who are willing to book early, to stand by until flight time, or to fly off-peak periods should be accommodated on scheduled services that might otherwise fly with 150 empty seats," says J. E. S. Hullah of British Airways in To Toronto.

Air Canada has approached the Canadian government with a similar proposal to the one that British Airways has placed before U.K. authorities.

According to Mr. Hullah, many other members of the International Air Transport Association share the cartel of international airlines—also support the "participation" concept.

At first glance, the concept makes sense. By selling seats that would otherwise be empty, the airlines would generate badly needed extra revenue, and many people would have the exciting experience of overseas travel when they would otherwise have stayed home.

But IATA, like other cartels, operates on the basis of unanimity. Each member country—Some member airlines may oppose the plan when it is presented to the IATA meeting in Florida in June, in the interests of maintaining regular fares.

They could argue that few passengers, other than business men, would pay the relatively high regular fares when they could have the same flight for one-third or one-half the price.

Certainly, standby arrangements in domestic travel have been abused by people who make several reservations under assumed names, to be assured of last-minute vacancies.

The travelling public, and the airlines themselves, might be better served by a simultaneous lowering of the proportion of the air fares that make such abuses possible, rather than by opening up the possibility of flights at cut-rates.

A Canadian flying to Britain on a scheduled flight is faced with 16 fare options. When combined with the pertinent rules and restrictions this is too much. these result in just over 100 different fare possibilities.

The airlines' objective in creating such a complex fare picture is to discourage off-peak seasons and vastly of travel. If there were to be a single fare, flights could be filled many times over while others would be almost empty.

The proposal by Air Canada and British Airways to sell cut-rate seats on scheduled flights is based on the assumption that the passenger load more evenly distributed throughout the year. A misnomer since it has nothing whatever to do with charter flights).

But the public would be still able to purchase the seats that were in open their doors to just a little competition in fares. After all, commercial aviation is no longer an infant needing to be protected in the interests of the cartel.

Yugoslavia Ponders A Future Without Tito

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

A third South European nation after Spain and Portugal is about to face a crisis in one-man leadership. Yugoslavia is coming closer to the day when Marshal Tito resigns or passes away.

In Portugal Gen. de Spinola's new provisional government of all parties may find the answer in almost 50 years of strong, one-man style rule.

In Spain the formula for succession from a now quickly aging Generalissimo Francisco Franco was literally blown skyhigh in the bombing death of the late President Luis Carrero Blanco last summer.

And in Yugoslavia where one-man rule in a Communist rather than an Fascist political framework is drawing to a close there is no clear heir apparent as in Spain.

Moreover Yugoslavia's geography, strategic relations with Western capitalist countries and especially with her neighbor Italy, have been good for many years.

But now a dispute has flared up again over the major port city of Trieste and surrounding territory ceded to Italy by agreement in 1950 into so-called Zones A and B.

Zone A is under Italian administration and includes the 800,000 population international port of Trieste. Zone B is under Yugoslav administration and is largely rural land and with growing country.

Trieste, severely hit by the long-ago closing of the Suez canal in June, 1967, is looking for a new commercial life from its expanding and has become a valuable place again for Italy and Yugoslavia alike.

But the renewed Trieste crisis is a microcosm of the larger regional issues Yugoslavia over the future of Croatia, a distinct racial and geographical component since the federated Balkan state was formed from the ashes of World War I and Central Europe in 1919.

Croatian resistance, bitter and unrelenting and not unlike Basque separatism in Spain, has always threatened the life of the Yugoslav state. Tito in Belgrade and the nationalist Croats in France in Madrid, has built harshly with separatist tendencies.

No strongman ruler of the Franco and Tito variety can afford sich threats to the basic political system of their regimes.

But this does not mean these regional crises will go away. In fact centralist suppression by ethnic leaders who will not be here to solve them in the long term, merely exacerbate the problem.

The Croat-Serb feud has plagued Yugoslavia since its founding. The split was made worse during the Second World War when the conquering Germans and Fascist Italian armies installed puppet states, openly placing Croatia under a member of the Italian Royal Family as a separate monarchy.

Croatian Fascist units fought with the Germans and Serb Chetnik SS battalion committed unspeakable atrocities against Serb prisoners and Tito's Communist partisans.

The Croat ruling Catholic sastiy slipped into temporary limbo rule, but today want a separate Croatian state, authoritarian and Catholic as far as one can tell.

The paradox in all this is that Tito the longtime ruler of Yugoslavia, and a Communist since the separate 1920s is a Croat.

A Serb as the country's next leader would probably have the support of the more stateless Croats are concerned. Possibly more satisfactory with the Yugoslav system would be some kind of future answer.

Premier And The Politics Of Oil

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — The Liberals have been trying to goad Premier Davis into a direct confrontation with Alberta over the oil question and the Sarnia Petrosar project.

They have implied that political considerations have held back the premier from meeting with Premier Lougheed face on and pressing the Ontario case.

And they hint further than a Davis consideration could be that he and Lougheed probably are the leading contenders to succeed national Leader Robert Stanfield when he retires, and that he could feel he might court party disfavor by publicly tangling with the Alberta premier.

On the surface it appears that the Liberals perhaps have a good point.

The Sarnia plant is important to Ontario, and after all, why should not the first citizen of the province go to bat for it personally?

But then on second thought the case changes and several good reasons occur why the province should play it low key.

One of these is that it is probably in Ontario's long-term interest to avoid direct confrontations, or public quarrels, with any province.

There is the present need, and it will be a continuing one, to reconcile as much as possible the differences. And to do this most effectively a united front of all provinces is required.

Then there is the factor that all provinces are good customers for our products and it is desirable that our relationships with them be as amicable as possible.

Again, there is the question of what is a direct confrontation might achieve. It is not a question of blame. We have that now through direct contact and visits by Energy Minister Alex McKeough with Alberta's officials. An open fight could well be more harmful than helpful.

As it is, the province is leaving the major bargaining to Ottawa. And this would seem to be the wise course.

Perhaps the prime reason of all being that Ontario on its own doesn't have a very strong case to push.

It might threaten to hold back the copper, zinc and other materials which will be needed to build petro-chemical plants in Sarnia.

But this would be not only a disaster but probably quite weak argument.

While on the other hand the federal government, which has flatly endorsed the Sarnia plant, has a strong hand.

Though there may be some dispute on it, there seems to be little question that it can order the destination and rate of Alberta oil through the home province.

And with this power it can get results.

Although no particular naval skill was demonstrated, the sea battle fought between British and French 180 years ago today—in 1794—was thereafter called the Glorious First of June, for the victorious British. It was the first time a British fleet had challenged control of the English Channel, and in the Napoleonic wars and a stiff fight was put up off the Cape of Ushant, the French lost seven ships and 7,000 men and were driven back to Brest, also losing a convoy of grain from the United States.

When the Quinte District Labor Council representatives meet to vote on Mr. Reilly's notice of motion to boycott the United Way, I hope they will consider that such a boycott would handicap if not eliminate the services of smaller agencies such as the Central Volunteer Bureau.

We receive a modest $181 monthly from the United Way to pay our rent, telephone, and other necessary expenses towards providing free services in the community for: the pre-school children who are handicapped or who have other special problems; we collect and distribute furniture and clothing for those who cannot buy such articles; we provide a weekly hot meal for elderly in need of extra nourishment and hot soup and sandwiches twice weekly for those in extreme need; our volunteers work with illiterate adults, probationers, welfare families, and others of people who have no friends or who find it difficult to ask for help; we co-ordinate a Christmas Sharing program; volunteers with English & French Canadians and provide a nursery for their children; we recruit, place and train volunteers on request for all non-profit community organizations, and we co-ordinate programs and services with a view to finding community projects.

All our services are given willingly by volunteers, and we are proud of our contribution to the community. We hope to continue in our role of improving the quality of life.

If the support of the Labor Council is withdrawn from the United Way, the whole concept of the "Community" in sharing would be lost. We would regret such a decision carefully and wisely.

Harassed Children

Bad cess to the happy motorists on Victoria Day who swear at little children and curse the 25 m.p.h. speed limit pleading for 30 mph. speed limits in the midst of built-up areas. And bad cess to Montreal traffic director Jacques Duhamel who finds the present 30 mph speed limit in what is unequivocally a built-up area.

Bylaw 3119 provides for 30 mph signs in school zones. But the majority of many city communities find the city unwilling to erect them. Flurries of petition, letters and minor demonstrations have failed to impede traffic flow in areas like the Notre Dame de Grace, Point St. Charles and St. Louis-Esplanade, after a year of protest.

The uncourteous attitude of Victoria Day motorists is probably reflected across the city. And it is also reason why traffic director Barrière gets away with refusing to restore the city's own traffic bylaw.

Unlike other cities where pedestrians have special crossing marks and traffic lights with a wave of their hands, in Montreal the onus on foot is either quick or dead.

The city has been, and traffic flow to and from the suburbs more important than the safety of children at play. The role of police and the courts is to support this. And as responsible in considering local driving is the city.

Sidney Plans Look Shabby

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

The public often has a short memory. Governments seldom do.

How many, for instance, recall the April 26 commercial development freeze imposed on 62 Ontario municipalities by provincial Housing Minister Sidney Handleman?

The zoning orders were imposed, Mr. Handleman said at the time, because the municipalities (including Sidney and Thurlow Townships) "do not appear to have taken steps to develop an adequate capacity to deal with their planning responsibilities for commercial land use."

In plain and simple terms, the minister was accusing the 62 cashed-out communities of reckless development. None of them had even taken the pains to register official plans with the province.

At the time, the reactions of the rerees of the two offending Hastings townships were similarly indignant.

Sidney Reeve Gordon Wilman said the government restriction on commercial development "could be detrimental economically." Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey observed: "We have commercial enterprises we know are interested in coming here — and damned if we want them frozen."

In both cases the negative reaction to the provincial zoning restrictions seemed to be almost purely economically-inflated. Which would seem to prove Queen's Park's point: municipal land transactions need more than financial considerations.

Municipalities shouldn't merely be selling land to the highest bidder. More care should be taken in choosing "tenants" who would fit in with some defined growth objective.

What good are mountains of revenue to a community that has not made adequate provision for recreational and greenbelt facilities, or assured an esthetic residential environment?

All the extra income from indiscriminate land sale would likely end up being used to clear the air and water, or to subsidize the costly service needs of business, as many communities have found out to their chagrin.

So it was with some amazement that we read of this week's sale of 45 acres of Sidney Township.

Bad enough that the township only received $60,000 for the property, located adjacent to Trenton's industrial park. (That means for less than $1,400 an acre the lucky purchasers have access to the services Trenton would be extending to industries of its own.)

But not only did Sidney council take a beating in the property transaction. They show no indication they even care to what use the land is put!

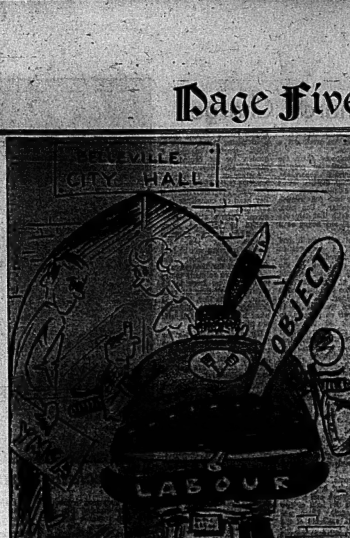
"Nothing was said about what was going to be built on it," was Reeve Gordon Wilman's astonishing response to an Intelligencer reporter's query about the sale, which was okayed by council at a Monday meeting.

In fact, Sidney councillors are not even aware of the identity of the men who trimmed them at horse-trading.

A Toronto developer appeared on behalf of the anonymous investment company, and Sidney officials claim they do not even know the group's home base, let alone the company's name.

The most definite thing Reeve Wilman could say was that the developers' agent "might be bringing a plan to council in a couple of months."

In light of this type of slack municipal conduct, the April provincial commercial zoning freeze doesn't look at all like the unwarranted encroachment Reeve Wilman resented at the time.



Unfortunately for Sidney Township ratepayers, there haven't been enough intrusions by Queen's Park into their business to ensure an orderly growth pattern.

Presumably, township coffers are bursting at the seams when councillors can afford to sell 45 acres of prime property for a paltry $60,000 less than three weeks after announcing hopes to erect a $350,000 hockey rink.

Being so financially solvent, it is to be expected that Sidney ratepayers will face a hefty tax reduction in the 1974 budget, if not a complete holiday from their mill rates.

That's the least their council can do for them, to make up for any other inconveniences Sidney residents might be caused.

After all, one might wake up one morning and find a pulp and paper mill next door.

Labor Council Invited To Help United Way Drive

By VIRGINIA O'ROURKE
President
United Community Services

On Thursday, May 23, United Community Services chaired a meeting of participating agencies including Labor Council representatives who serve as board members of UCS and YMCA. Mr. Doug Sweet, president of Quinte District Labor Council and Mr. Ian Reilly, vice-president were unable to attend due to prior commitments.

The objectives of the meeting were to share pertinent facts regarding the notice of motion brought before QDLC (i.e. to actively boycott the 1974 United Way Campaign if the YMCA received a City grant as well as a United Way allocation toward its 1975 budget) and to discuss methods of publicizing a positive position to QDLC and to the public.

The meeting was informational and its purpose was to insure that Labor Council members make a responsible, informed decision at their June 4 meeting and that the public have the necessary information to properly determine its response to the Labor Council decision.

If in any way the 1974 United Way Campaign were to be impeded by a Labor Council boycott, many very important, necessary community services would have to be curtailed and in some instances completely eliminated. Members of the Labor Council should consider these facts very carefully before casting their vote June 4.

By undermining the success of the United Way, the QDLC would not only put the YMCA operation in jeopardy but would also be denying funds to agencies supplying help to the blind, the aged, those in need of emergency welfare services, the arthritic, young children and youth who need special help, victims of disaster and those who require nursing and medical assistance.

It is a fact that few voluntary social service agencies are able to secure their total operating budget from one source and so are forced to seek government grants as well as voluntary contributions. The idea of eliminating the necessity of these agencies asking for City Council grants is a noble one one, with which no one would quarrel. Certainly, however, there must be a positive, constructive, realistic way by which this can be accomplished. Each October the United Way asks the community to support certain voluntary agencies by contributing to the United Way Campaign. Unfortunately, in the past few years, the community has not given sufficient funds to fully support these agencies and rather than curtail their programs they have requested municipal assistance. It seems logical, therefore, that to eliminate the increased demand on City Council, a more intense, successful and fully supported United Way campaign must be mounted. The community through the United Way must demonstrate its ability to provide the necessary financial support before the agencies can be expected to relinquish any supplemental funding.

Recognizing the Labor Council's sincerity in its concern for "double-dipping", we propose that it join with the United Way and make the 1974 campaign a complete success by raising enough money to fully fund our participating agencies and eliminate the necessity for their requesting additional tax dollars to provide the needed services in Belleville.

In the past the Labor Council and the United Way have worked together to ensure the availability of these services in our community. A successful campaign can result only from the combined efforts of all parts of the community. It would be most unfortunate for the Labor Council to take any steps to diminish the effectiveness of the United Way Appeal.

I'm pessimistic about the future. Canada is going to split and the world is going downhill. Too many people are locked up within themselves.

YMCA Actually Saves Tax Money

By DOUGLAS HORNE
President
Belleville Family YMCA

Recently some letters and quotations in the press have contained gross errors on the point where residents could be misled as to the real benefits and savings which accrue to the taxpayer through the co-operative efforts of the YMCA and the City.

The Young Men's Christian Association was formed in Belleville during the 1880s, as a charitable non-profit association. It was not until 1911 that the association constructed a building to centralize its activities and provide a swimming pool and other facilities in order to further its object of improving the spirit, mind and body of Belleviliians, particularly Youth.

At that time, 1911, an Act of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario exempted the "Y" from all taxes and it was upon that understanding that the Association constructed the Campbell Street building which was used by the "Y" for over 50 years until 1964, when the present building was completed.

Then, in 1952, the Act of the Legislature was changed to read to the effect that the "council of a municipality may pass bylaws exempting from taxes" the land and buildings owned by the association. Since that time, the YMCA has requested city council annually to exempt its property from taxes.

In 1969, after the formation of the present Belleville school system, city council decided that the YMCA should pay the school taxes and since that time, we have paid school taxes and local improvement rates amount to $6,514.72 in 1974. However, the association has not received any financial grants from the general taxes which will amount to $8,797.33 in 1974. The summation of expatriates across the country is that most Ys are either assessed for taxes or receive a grant which covers most or all of their tax bill.

In 1911, the YMCA pool and the Bay of Quinte provided the only swimming facilities for the people of Belleville. Since that time the YMCA has consistently provided year - round public swimming periods for the general public. In many other cities, where there is no YMCA as such, usually the city constructs an indoor pool (at substantial expense to the taxpayers) to meet the aquatic needs of their citizens who prefer swimming to, say, hockey or other forms of recreation.

Public swimming periods are the most costly to run at a YMCA. It is during these periods that the most wear and tear and damage to the building occurs, the most paid life guards are needed, the most hot water is used for showers, the most clean-up (single by our maintenance people is required, the most accidents occur, etc. For example, to run the public swimming periods planned for 1974, will cost the "Y" $14,500 minus fees collected of $1,200 (est.) equalling a net cost of $13,300. The city was asked for a grant of $13,500 to cover this cost, however, only $5,500 was forthcoming. Now, our association faces the decision as to how the deficit can be covered before December 31, 1974.

In addition to public swimming, the "Y" property is used by the Recreation Department of the City for Baseball and Soccer without charge. However, the Parks Department, controlled by cutting the grass on the "Y" playing field. Good co-operation has existed between the City and the "Y" because our objectives are the same, to provide good quality recreation programs and facilities at the lowest possible cost to the user and the taxpayer.

When the present YMCA building was constructed in 1964, about 1/3 of the land and building was $475,000. None of that cost was paid by taxpayers. If the cost to be building had been borne by the City and debentured over 20 years at 9 per cent, it would be costing taxpayers $42,327 per year for 20 years — a total cost to taxpayers of $846,740. The YMCA by the generous donations of many of its friends has provided a needed facility at NO cost to the taxpayer.

One of the arguments against the YMCA receiving a grant in lieu is not open to everyone. The YMCA is for the people everyone and the fees are kept as low as possible to the point where subsidy is required. This enables the facilities and program to be available to as large a portion of the, community as possible. In fact, members who are unable to meet the fees set are subsidized totally or partially. More than 100 persons paid no fees last year because of economic hardships.

A great deal of from the municipality enables the municipality to provide community services to their citizens at a cost far less than it would cost the municipality to provide the same facilities and services under their own auspices.

This economy is brought about by the Y's capacity to recruit and use more than 100 volunteers at the policy formulation level and program execution levels of operation. It is easier for the "Y" as a non-profit organization to encourage people to give of themselves and receive training in return at the same time improving the community in which they live, than it is for municipal government. Somehow, whenever the government asks people to do something they put out their hand and say, "How much?"

The Y's share of the United Appeal as well as the share of all other United Appeal agencies are not tax dollars removed from the pockets of unwilling, helpless tax-payers. These are voluntary dollars given by people who are able to give, and more important who are willing to give.

They are given because of the services to the community that the agencies provide, and because the donors recognize the fact that charitable non-profit organizations need a subsidy to survive.

The volunteer sector of all the agencies in the United Appeal is the key factor to provide at a minimal cost a multitude of necessary services which are available to all and which enrich our way of life, whether we are healthy or sick.

Married Ministers Share Two-Church Charge

There's a unique situation at Deseronto United Church.

The minister's wife is the minister, too.

One of five such couples in Canada, Bob and Bev Thompson are ministering as a pair to the Deseronto and Melrose churches.

Still student ministers, they won't be ordained until they've finished two more years of study at Queen's Theological College in Kingston.

Bob began his duties in January, moving from his last charge at Lemonville—Ballantrae, while Bev was still minister-for the "three-point" charge of Wilfrid—Udora—Pefferlaw. She commuted between Deseronto and Wilfrid until this month, when she began full-time work with her husband.

"This will be the first time we've worked together on the same charge," says Bev.

"Until now, we've been at different churches in the same area."

Married three years ago after a friendship and courtship stretching over several years, Bob and Bev reached the decision to be United Church ministers separately.

They began her studies at Waterloo University intending to be a social worker. But the Religious Studies she took there and her active Christian family both influenced the direction of her life.

After she graduated with a B.A., Bev took a "temporary" job as lay supply minister, a position created by the United Church for rural areas where an ordained minister's services are seldom needed.

"A lay supply can't perform the sacraments," explains Bev, "but can fulfill all the other functions of a minister — the preaching, visiting, counselling and leading of study groups.

"I found I liked these duties so well, that I decided to enter the ministry. I want to serve in the best way I can."

Bob comes from a religious family too—"There's Baptist and Salvation Army in my background," he says — but it was only after studying general arts at Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto that he arrived at his decision to move into the ministry.

He began as a lay supply preacher in Goodwood, and like Bev, found that it strengthened his belief that this was the way he could be most useful.

We both believe you have to work within an institution to get things done, no matter how slow the workings toward change are," Bob says.

Hired by the Belleville Presbytery Board, Bob's duties in Deseronto and Melrose include all those of a regular minister, up to the actual ceremonies of baptism and marriage. After arrangements are made by the Thompsons, these services are conducted by Rev. Tom Page of Trinity United Church in Napanee.

Bev, who is hired by the Deseronto Church Board at a similar "token" salary, carries out the same duties as Bob. They divide the work between themselves.

"The United Church isn't set up yet for married ministerial teams," Bob says. "A survey is being carried out at the moment by the Bay of Quinte Conference to study the problems and see if there's a situation like ours."

The problems are mainly economic — two salries instead of one.

Usually a church requires only one replacement. Married couples have to hope that two churches in the same area will be needing ministers at the same time.

"Bev and I know how lucky we are to have this situation in Deseronto," Bob says. "We hope to stay here at least as long as we're going to school. But what the future will bring, we don't know."

"It could happen that one of us will have to take a job outside the church while the other works as a minister," Bev says. "For example, we hope to keep working together.

"The advantage of hiring a couple like us is that we already get along and are ready to co-operate.

"As a married couple, we bring our individual strengths together in a unified approach," Bob says.

"For example, Bev's more a teacher and I'm more evangelical. She's the philosopher and I'm the historian. She's the thinker and I'm more spontaneous.

"Together we work out a good balance."

The Thompsons share the preaching load but prepare their sermons separately, although they discuss ideas and ideas as they work.

"We are both conservative in our theology," Bob says. "We have faith that demands commitment and action as a result of belief.

"We feel the growth and activity of a congregation should be based not on the minister's zeal, but on the Gospel. If a minister becomes the centre of a church's life, when he goes then the church is apt to falter.

"What we want to do is foster growth on its own, to poke people in the right places to get them started, to encourage the congregation to run its own programs."

Most organizations within the church — men's and women's clubs — are ongoing operations, independent of the ministers.

However, the Thompsons have begun new Bible study groups. Bev has initiated a "get-together" for young women and they are both spending a good deal of time getting to know local young people, encouraging them to become involved in church affairs.

In Deseronto, they've also begun bringing out retarded adults to church and Sunday School with the help of two local teenagers. There are presently 13 residents of the Quinte Beach Nursing Home participating in the church.

"And they're making a garden for us behind the manse," says Bev.

Another of the Thompsons' interests is the United Church Caravans Program. Bob and Bev head the committee that organizes service projects across Ontario and Quebec, staffed by young people during summer months. This year the training program will be held in Belleville under the direction of the Thompsons.

"There are so many things to do, that we have to be careful to save time for each other," admits Bev. "That is probably the only difficulty when both husband and wife are ministers."

But what of the role the "minister's wife" has traditionally played, performing social functions and serving as an example of perfect wifeliness?

"Ministers' wives don't just sponsor bazaars any more — if they ever did. They're out working as teachers, nurses or secretaries, to supplement the still-low salaries of their husbands. Or the old image is gone, and congregations are used to the ministers' wives having vocations," Bev says.

"It's only a small step to accepting us as ministers too. I certainly have had no barriers because I'm a woman and wife.

"It may even bring more people out to church to see us."

MR. AND MRS. BRIAN REDICK

Rock — Terry

Christ Church was the setting for the May 11 wedding of Margaret Evelyn Terry and John Ernest Rock performed by Rev. R. B. Wright.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Terry and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Rock of Brighton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of lagoda with a high collar, long bubble sleeves, and a bodice covered with Swiss lace, and accented by an insert covered with Swiss appliqué and seed pearls. The skirt and chapel-length train had flounces of matching lace.

The bride's headpiece held a waist-length tulle veil and she carried a cascade of yellow roses, ivy and stephanotis.

Matron of honor Karen Clements, the bride's sister, wore a gown of floral crepe in shades of yellow, green and orange, with a white inset bodice and self-buttons on the front, and a lace edging on the white crepe collar. She carried yellow mums and snapin roses, and wore yellow mums in her hair.

Peggy Fedderson and Sharon Rock were bridesmaids in dresses similar to the matron of honor's, with the same bouquets and floral headpieces.

The flower girl, Shari Dykeman, the groom's niece, wore a gown in the same style as the other attendants but in white, with a floral sash matching their gowns. The ring bearer was the groom's nephew Steven Kobut.

The groom's best man was his brother Gary Rock.

The ushers were Alan Gardiner, and Roy Clements.

After a dinner held at the Belleville Shrine Club, the couple left on a trip to Quebec. The now live in Belleville.

Redick — Harder

An afternoon wedding took place May 11 in Westminster United Church when Rev. F. B. Mitchell united in marriage Dianne Beth Harder and Reginald Brian Redick.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Harder, 3058 Perry Street, Whitby, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Douglas Redick, RR 7, Belleville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white gown styled to give the effect of a coat over a slim, empire-waisted skirt. The coat, which flowed into a soft train, was trimmed like the bodice and short puffed sleeves with pink ruffles. Pink flowers were scattered on the bodice and train. The bride's ruffled sheer chiffon hat was trimmed with a pink ribbon and flower, and she carried a bouquet of pink and red roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honor was Theresa Kelly of Smiths Falls and the bridesmaids were Pamela Flindall and Judy Harder of West Hill, the bride's sister-in-law. The attendants were lilac crepe with shirred bodices and puffed sleeves, and were matching flowers in their hair, and carried pink daisies and pink and white carnations.

The best man was Nesbitt Haggerty and the ushers were William Buchanan and Allan Lewis.

Wedding music was provided by the bride's cousin, Clare Pitcher of Frankford.

The reception was held in the auditorium of the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Redick now reside in Hamilton.

Beryl Plumptre apparently minds four-square for no one. Which is not a criticism. Mrs. Plumptre, who's been attacked by every segment of the population with a vested interest in food prices — and that includes consumers, has refused to find one single villain in the rising costs of food and has repeatedly made it clear that her only interest is finding the right answers.

For example, she's criticized consumers who want cheap food and refuse to consider the farmer. She's said that farmers have been the least favored segment of the economy over the past 20 years and they can't be expected to produce food if their prices don't cover costs and are subject to wide swings. Apparently a pat on the back for marketing boards.

On the other hand her sharpest criticism so far has been of the fledgling Canadian Egg Marketing Agency. The food prices review board she heads found that egg prices have risen more quickly than any other important food item in the last year yet feed costs have fallen recently. Where egg board leaders protested that producers were simply recouping losses in a magazine says, she retorted that those losses were deliberately incurred by egg producers in an effort to get large quotas at the beginning of the new system. She also found that under the CEMA program, table eggs in one province were dyed and sold as industrial eggs in order to prevent price drops and that some eggs were sold to the U.S. at 43 cents a dozen while consumers in another province are paying $1.15 a dozen.

"This is not an orderly marketing system but only a new form of disorderly marketing," Mrs. Plumptre says.

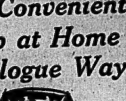
Successful Living
Elderly Should Keep Eye on Health

By DORIS CLARK

Sometimes people who are getting up in years simply ignore symptoms they ought to be catching early. Why? Because they think that aches and pains just naturally go with old age.

It isn't necessarily so. They ought to get to their doctor before the symptoms are alarming. For instance, if you begin to swell or more breathing is a struggle, or if you notice your ankles are swollen and causes a fall — such symptom are alarming!



Often, if an older person finds he is not seeing or not hearing quite as well as he used to, he may ignore the whole thing, at that stage. Even if he gets dizzy when he bends over — a symptom of possible anemia — then he is just more careful not to bend over.

I'm talking about people in their sixties or seventies. Today plenty of Canadians have many healthy years to well past their first half century. But they do have to be watching what they feed that some organ or muscle does not seem to be functioning as normal.

Then of course there are those older people who just think they can't manage at all without some sort of drug or other. Anything of that came to light just recently that in Ontario 25% (one out of hospital) admissions of old people are because of drug induced diseases. An aging person with a headache will reach for some drug — and if some is good, sometimes more is better — or so they think.

It seems to me that all of us need to learn how to be old successfully. Sooner or later old age is going to sneak up on us — if we live that long. What we need to realize is that, given normal human

Ann Landers

Girl Hates 'Being Sat'

Dear Ann Landers: You are the only person in this whole world who can help me. Please don't let me down.

I am a 21-year-old girl. Whenever my folks go out for an evening they hire a sitter. This is very embarrassing. I don't need to have anyone sit with me. I can sit by myself just fine.

Some of my girlfriends are already talking sitting! Not me here I am still being sat with.

Please Ann tell my folks I trust me to stay by myself. I would sure appreciate it.—No Baby

Dear No: Sorry, but I can't on the evidence you have provided. You don't say if you live far an apartment house or a prairie. Also you don't say if you have any younger brothers or sisters. These facts would make a big difference.

If you are a responsible young lady and have been properly briefed on who and how to call in case of trouble and if you have enough sense never to open the door for anyone you don't know I'd say that on your own territory your parents should give you the "privilege" of staying alone as a gift.

Dear Ann: Recently a letter signed Egg On Our Faces complaining about your advertisers merchants implied that most of the people in the mail-order business are crooks.

As one who is employed by a legitimate honorable mail-order establishment, I cannot sit idly by and let that impression go unchallenged. Our company processes thousands of orders and we take pride in the fact that most of those orders are filled within 48 hours. We back it with a customer-satisfaction guarantee policy with full refund of money.

So Ann in deference to all legitimate mail-order houses please print this letter and let your readers know that many mail-order houses are owned and operated by honest, hard-working people who aren't out to skin anybody. Sincerely— M.M. Inc. Fort Huron Michigan.

Dear M. M.: I'm pleased to print your letter and set the record straight. I also want to add that most mail-order houses could not possibly survive if they were run by high-pressure hinders and crooks. The consumer advocate groups in this country are becoming mighty alert and proving very effective. They are in my opinion doing an excellent job and we back them a vote of thanks.

Dear Ann Landers: Nine women want you to take something back you said in your column recently. It just isn't true that every woman who goes into a cocktail lounge is looking to get picked up. Granted most of them are—but please make allowances for the exceptions.

For example nine of us gals have had a ladies' night for 10 years. (The ninth is a spare in case one of the gals can't make it.) Between us we have nine swell husbands 26 children and 17 grandchildren. We are active in church work Girl Scouting and other community activities. The other night we went to dinner and the theatre and then decided to end the evening by dropping into a cocktail lounge for a nightcap. Nobody was looking to get picked up. We just felt like winding up the evening with a friend, talking-talk-back what you said.—Alice H.

Dear Alice: OK Grannies, there are exceptions and I believe you girls are in the clear. When nine uncommonly nice women go into a cocktail lounge it's a little different than when one or two go. In your case I take it back.

Women Electors Get Things Done

TORONTO (CP) — For 36 years a volunteer group has focused its attention on events at city hall.

In 1938, nine women formed the Association of Women Electors (A.W.E.) to find out what was happening at council meetings that were unreported by the media.

This year, its membership increased to 300, the A.W.E. is still observing and educating the public in the workings of Toronto's municipal government.

Group members sit in on meetings of council and its committees and publish a monthly summary of their observations in a newsletter.

President Mary Anne Miller said: "The association is not a political group. It's non-partisan and non-profit.

"We try to encourage Torontonians to take an active interest in their government, for municipal government probably has more effect on their everyday lives than provincial or federal policy-makers."

The year after the A.W.E. was formed, it began organizing all-candidate electors' meetings prior to civic elections. Mrs. Miller said the practice has been adopted by so many other organizations that the A.W.E. may de-emphasize this aspect of its work.

The financial position of the association has never been strong. Prior to two years ago, it depended on bake sales and similar fund-raising functions to keep it going.

In 1972 a provincial grant for assessment study eased the burden but Mrs. Miller said high postage rates are crippling the treasury.

The $5 enrolment fee entitles members to receive the monthly newsletter may have to be raised to balance rising costs.

Mrs. Miller said the average member is married, most have children and a high-school education and there are some college graduates. Membership is open to both sexes and while there are a number of male members.

The association submits regular reports on issues it feels are important. It is generally considered responsible for nutritional improvement in welfare food allotments in the late 1950s and construction of the subsidized Regent Park housing area in the late 1940s.

It has concerned itself with such issues as expansion of day nurseries and junior kindergartens, more adequate welfare services, preservation of parkland and metropolitan transportation.

More recently, the A.W.E. has taken up the issue of empty schools.

'Most Beautiful Refugee' Makes New Life in Rome

ROME (Reuter) — Galia Milkwakaya, the former Russian's most beautiful refugee, is stranded in a third-class boarding house in Rome waiting for her new life in the West to begin.

Milkwakaya, 27 and born in Moscow, was the top model at the Moscow Institute of Fashion, where the guidelines are worked out for the entire clothing industry in the Soviet Union.

"I lived well," she says, "I had a two-room apartment and earned 120.000 lire (about $185) monthly. My apartment was across the street from Brezhnev's."

Five years ago she was photographed for a top Soviet fashion magazine wearing a sari from Russian styles—and the photo caused a sensation when her way from abroad.

When her husband died of cancer, in 1971, she was left with no relatives except her 10-year-old mother.

"For two years I could think of nothing but the U.S. Between us we had nine swell husbands 26 children and 17 grandchildren. We are active in church work Girl Scouting and other community activities. The other night we went to dinner and the theatre and then decided to end the evening by dropping into a cocktail lounge for a nightcap. Nobody was looking to get picked up. We just felt like winding up the evening with a friend, talking-talk-back what you said.—Alice H.

Dear Alice: OK Grannies, there are exceptions and I believe you girls are in the clear. When nine uncommonly nice women go into a cocktail lounge it's a little different than when one or two go. In your case I take it back.

Western girls, and found out that some were even more stunning than she because they are better made up and have better hair styles.

What Milkwakaya does have are extraordinary bones, plus a bittersweet personal tale that will doubtless help launch her in the West. Already the Italian sentimental women's magazines are calling her "Comrade Twiggy" and—"the Solzhenitsyn of fashion."

"Tonight I am going to a nightclub in Rome," she said breathlessly. "You know, it is the first time I have ever been to a nightclub. And I will travel, too. I had never been out of the Soviet Union before.

Stress on 'Inwardness' Threat To 'Three Species of Thought'

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A Lutheran theologian says the contemporary attitudes on religion have "undermined the necessity of biblical thought," including belief in the "unique and significance of world history itself."

Rev. Dr. Les Snook says in the journal Word and World that consciousness toward personal experience "inwardness" there is a tendency to hold that "real life is lived within rather than finding meaning in the struggle for this world forward a promised fulfillment."

Snook calls this "eulogized species" of biblical ideology says Dr. Snook of the Lutheran Seminary in St. Paul, Minn., there.

"That people are personally responsible for their acts, a biblical concept being eroded by behavioral psychology with its views that individuality is rather than making their own decisions, are dominated by conditioning.

"That the universe derives from God, a conviction being undermined by modern mechanistic theories of the universe, retaining regard for religion as valuable only as they are useful to society.

"It's that kind of view that is killing us; that is choking us to death, our spirits," he said in a recent lecture series.

The biblical view of creation and communication inspires a more responsible stewardship of the world and its resources.

He said behavioral psychology has some valid insights, but "our views regarding that people are accountable for their choices in managing the world run counter to the biblical "covenant" between God and human beings.

"The language of the covenant is inconvenient for those who want to control society," he said. "People of the covenant don't fit because they are committed to a promise."

As for the curves discrediting of the meaning of history itself, Dr. Snook said this is typified by a modern attitude expressed in the popular book, Jonathan Livingston Seagull.

It "is a call to believe in one's own inwardness," he said. This suggests that you release your self from the contingencies of time and space," that "history is useless," that "your future is on the other side of history."

In contrast, he said, "the biblical motif holds that salvation comes through suffering with others in this world."

Father Frank Pursues His Scattered Flock

Francis Thomas Hurley, the flying bishop, ministers in one of the most remote and isolated dioceses in the Roman Catholic domain. Three years in Alaska has changed Bishop Hurley's image of Catholicism.

By JOHN BARBOUR

HOONAH, Alaska (AP) — "Seven-hiner-oh-four victory. . . Sorry about the trouble you had, Bishop."

"Good to see you back in the sky again."

Flight Service in Juneau is talking to an old friend in the clouds. A gravelly voice with a brogue named Francis Thomas Hurley who learned to fly to pursue his work of ministering through the timbered, mountained miles of southeastern Alaska.

Flight Service watches over Father Frank—that's what many call him here—as he flies the unpredictable skies of his Roman Catholic diocese from Icy Bay in the north to Ketchikan in the south, a distance of 550 miles of green islands, deep blue fiords and snow-capped peaks. Its 36,000 miles from May to November and 26,000 from December. Catholics, one for every eight square miles.

His domain was almost abandoned four years ago but now is a work of the province of the church, thanks to the 41-year-old bishop.

An unofficial sight he is—his black trousers rolled up to the knees, black shirt open at the neck, ruddy complexion and trimmer than he used to be when he had a desk job in Washington.

Of the few hundred people who live in Hoonah, a handful are Catholic. The ferry stops twice a week in the summer. Otherwise the only contact is by air.

His first stop is the local saloon which is already busy by the afternoon. Most of the bar owner is Catholic and he wants to make sure she knows he will say Mass. She has the room.

It takes maybe 45 minutes to get to the church. The native population is out in force and seems to outnumber the tourists.

The church is a long boarded climb up the hill. It is obviously more than one of 11 churches scattered over nine islands that he is served by a visiting priest and a sister.

Disappointment shows on Bishop Frank's face as he stands in the pullman kitchen behind the altar. The parishioners want this church, but they have done little with it. He takes that unkindly. Absence of their interest.

Behind the altar is an Indian mask, with the fierce of a crew, the face of Christ, the eyes of the Holy Spirit, the sign of strength and wisdom, the Sacred Heart from which three flames curve symbolizing the trinity. It was designed and carved by a parishioner whose only visit to the church in the last three years was when she was baptized by the bishop.

One visitor says when he attended mass here two years ago, there were only three people in attendance. Today there were 28.

But Father Frank is not optimistic. Next time there might be only three again. He says,

Alaskans are a kind apart, he says. Most have come here from somewhere else: "I don't think it was so much running away as it was looking for something new that would in a way not commit them to stay. . . We all get locked into patterns and I think this is the nature of the beast. The people up here just did not want to be locked into patterns. They wanted to get out of them."

An expert in church-state relations and tied to a desk at the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington, he suddenly found himself assigned to Juneau to determine whether it should be maintained as a separate diocese, or absorbed by Anchorage.

In Juneau, he found the church dislocated into isolated, subconscious islands. No sense of unity. Distances were great and no two towns were connected by road. He recommended that to serve the people, the diocese should be maintained. Three months later, in 1971, he was installed as bishop.

His brother Mark now is the bishop of Santa Rosa, Calif., the second time in this century that two American brothers have been bishops at the same time.

Jesus Thought Big In Unpretentious Town

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

An article in the New York Times Magazine suggested the possibili..ty of decorating small homes and apartments with big ideas. The author the possibility of decorating "expand a space" . . . makes small rooms look large and attractive, providing an atmosphere congenial to personal growth. Essentially, the article suggested that we need to learn the art of "thinking big in small places".

If ever it appeared that an individual needed to expand his living space, it was Jesus. He was born in a stable at Bethlehem, "because there was no place for them in the inn". He grew up near a carpenter shop in an unpretentious community called Nazareth. The place was so unimportant that Nathanael was led to wonder, "can anything good come out of Nazareth." (John 1:45-49)

Nevertheless, the world's most significant thinking was done there. And Nazareth was not the town, not the quality of the schools, nor the vigor of the synagogue. What counted was the Person who found in the town, the schools and the synagogue providing more than anyone else found there. Jesus captured from his environment all the best that it had and then enriched it with his own insights.

A small circle of men and women became aware of the uniqueness of Jesus. In some strange way "the hopes and fears of all the years" gathered around him. He suggested the noblest memories and desires of those who were close to him.

It did not end there. The disciples became apostles, ambassadors, if you please. When the best in Philip responded to the invitation of Jesus, he went and found Nathanael, his friend. The finest advertising for any good product is a satisfied and happy customer. That is how it has gradually been since Jesus walked in Galilee.

We seem to have lost our identity in a society of mass-produced thoughts and feelings. We are moving, as in a dream, towards disasters that make election promises appear as though uttered in Chinese. We are mere cogs in IBM machines than like creative persons.

It seems incredible that a handful of men and women, who had been touched by the Master, flung their faith and hope around the world. But they had been touched by the Master. Flung their faith and hope around the world. But they had been touched by the Master. They left an indelible mark on the nature of human thought.

It is just common sense to "come and see" what it is in the report about and communion with Jesus Christ that continues to shed abroad transforming and sustaining power. For multitudes the landscapes of yesterday have not been swept away by the tide.

When a man or a woman begins to think big with Christ, the place where he or she is withstands the oblivion of automatic change. Small places still become our large as the Kingdom of God.

Parents Join Kids

NEW YORK (AP) — "What did you learn?"

That question, commonly put by parents to youngsters on their return from church classes, won't be heard by participants in a new religious-education program now ready for use across the United States.

The reason is that parents and their offspring will be learning jointly.

The genesis of it is in that fact of life, said Rev. Kevin Lynch, president of Paulist Press of Paramus, N.J., which is distributing the new program and the materials to go with it.

"It will put the whole family together in open communication among themselves and with the really fundamental questions of life: The beauty of it, too, is that it's so simple."

The program marks a major shift in approach for Catholic education, initiating interaction between old and young. Planned with ecumenical concern, most of it also is suitable for Protestant groups.

It was largely created by Sister Maureen Gallagher, a Dominican nun who is the associate director of religious education of the Madison, Wis., diocese.

The premise, she said, is that if parents and children share quality time and exploit matter of religious instruction, results will be better and family communication and solidarity improved.

"It brings them together, even husbands and wives."

"The program has been tested in 13 parishes and in several Lutheran and United Church of Christ congregations with enthusiastic response.

It now is being offered commercially, with expectations that general use will begin next fall.

"Instead of being child-catered, it's family centered," Father Lynch said. He also intends means for involving elderly persons and single individuals in the group process.

Air Conditioning System Top Hospital Priority

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Belleville General Hospital board of governors has decided to act on its own financial initiative to safeguard against any air-conditioning problems in the hospital's main wing.

Possible breakdown of the cooling system in the big Quinte wing has been a nagging preoccupation with BGH administration.

The hospital's older WCA wing has never been air-conditioned and one physician told the board Friday he even considered sending patients home on hot summer days.

The board had decided not to wait for provincial government assistance in resolving both situations.

It will install a standby chiller unit in the Quinte wing — an auxiliary device that will ensure temperature controls if the main system breaks down. It also will investigate temporary rental of room air-conditioners for the WCA wing until a permanent system is installed.

A breakdown in the main 360-bed Quinte hospital tower has been a nagging preoccupation for hospital staff since it opened seven years ago, the board was told.

Experts estimated the tower — where temperature control necessitates sealed windows — would have to be evacuated within five hours if air-conditioning broke down in 90 degrees heat, said Dr. A. G. Allen.

Last year the system failed during a mid-August heatwave. The situation was rectified in an hour, but not before hospital staff had agonized through all sorts of mental exercises, said Philip Rickard, executive director.

Cost of the standby chiller is estimated at $172,500 add installation of permanent air-conditioning of the WCA win $279,500, most of which would be financed by the health ministry.

But the ministry, while approving the projects, has shelved them until funds are available.

Alderman Ben Corke, board financial chairman, won agreement for a solution to the impasse.

BGH has been endowed with $3 million from the estate of a one-time Belleviller, the late Charlotte Sills.

Why not borrow from the endowment to install the air-conditioning? asked Ald. Corke.

The problem is immediately acute in the 139-bed WCA wing where many of the patients are elderly people, many awaiting admission to nursing homes.

"I think it's terrible what those people went through last summer," said Dr. Bruce Morgan. "I have considered sending patients home."

The board will advise the ministry of its intentions to finance over a two-year period, and councils will be up for election this December, OMB approval is necessary to commit future councils to the deal.

Delegation Will Meet With OMB

A delegation from Belleville, Sidney and the Moira River Conservation Authority will meet with the chairman of the Ontario Municipal Board in Toronto Monday to discuss the proposed purchase of the Potter property west of the city.

The three interests are joining to buy the 340-acre tract for a greenbelt and trailer park. The province is expected to pay the major portion of the $770,000 purchase price.

Objection to the purchase was expressed earlier this week by Clarence Young, who wrote the OMB asking for an investigation of the purchase. He claimed a developer had turned down an option to purchase the property for $200,000 earlier this year.

Because the purchases will be financed over a two-year period, and councils will be up for election this December, OMB approval is necessary to commit future councils to the deal.

Alarm Box

Belleville firefighters responded to the following call for assistance during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Saturday:

Friday: 8:07 p.m. call reported grass fire near Quinte Mall; investigation revealed nothing.

Seven-year-old Wing Needs $42,400 Repair

Restoration work is needed on the exterior of Belleville General Hospital's Quinte wing — built seven years ago.

Bricks need replacing and pointing on the big hospital tower, BGH's main facility, its board of governors was told Friday.

If repairs weren't done now, restoration would only become more costly, said Gerald Joyce, the board's property committee chairman.

"It's a crime to ruy that."

Damage $1,000 In Rear-ender

A Trenton man was treated for minor injuries and released from Belleville General Hospital late yesterday evening after the car in which he was driving was involved in a rear-end collision on Highway 2, near the Quinte Golf and Country Club.

Officers from the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that Randy Turk, of 70 Edward St., Trenton was injured when the car in which he was travelling with Norman Eric Austin, of 3 Cedar Street, Trenton, collided with another vehicle around 9.50 p.m.

The Austin vehicle collided with a car driven by Bruce Cameron, of 94 Sidney Street, Belleville.

Damage was estimated at approximately $1,000.

Turk received a cut to his face.

Emergency Admissions Examined

Belleville General Hospital administration is studying the number of patients admitted on emergency cases.

It also has been told "excessive demands" on its facilities and staff should be reviewed.

The recommendations come from the Ontario Hospital Association following its annual assessment of the operation. Council accreditation is a status seal of professional approval on administration of the country's hospitals.

Following its survey, the council reviewed BGH's accreditation, and made a series of recommendations to the hospital's board of governors.

The council noted "the large numbers" of patients admitted as emergencies 65-70 per cent of admissions. The situation now is under study, a hospital spokesman said Friday.

So also is the nursing staff situation, which arises from increased workloads on a work force that has remained constant in numbers, he said.

Demand also "seems heavy" on dietetic services and the council recommended hiring of an additional dietitian be considered.

Hospital Budget Up by 7.9 per cent

Belleville General Hospital's operating budget for the year has been set at $18,500,000.

This compares with $18,351,600 in 1973 an increase of 7.9 per cent approved by the province's health ministry.

The ministry will pay $9,200,000 of the total — after revising its original estimates upward to allow for increased patient volumes. BGH board of governors learned Friday.

The balance of the gross budget comes from various miscellaneous incomes the hospital retains and depreciation writeoffs.

Two Hurt In Collision

THOMASBURG — A Thomasburg area man, Harry Anthony Boyle, was sent to Belleville General Hospital Friday with a broken right leg and severe head lacerations following a two-car head-on collision on the Fuller Road about a mile northwest of Thomasburg.

The driver of the second car, Barbara Myrtle Switzer of RR 1, Thomasburg, was also taken to hospital with suspected chest injuries.

Both drivers were alone in their cars at the time of the accident.

Mr. Boyle's small American car received $2,000 damage. The Switzer car received $1,000 damage.

Centre Robbed Second Time

Belleville police are investigating a second break-in at the Hillcrest Community Centre that netted thieves 10 cartons of soft drinks sometime between Thursday and Friday.

Police say that the thieves entered the building by removing a screen from a northeast window in the building.

Earlier this week, thieves broke into the community centre and stole a coffee percolator, some silverware and a record player.

Exorcist Gets to Two

Nearly 1,200 people slouched in their seats in the Park Theatre here last night and watched the devil do strange things to a 12-year-old girl.

The Warner Brothers film, The Exorcist, had its first two showings in Belleville last night, and despite the fact that only two people managed to get sick everyone who attended the show seemed to have a good time.

For several months now residents of the Belleville area have been hearing stories of the horror and suspense engendered by The Exorcist, and, last night, nearly all of the people interviewed on leaving the Front Street theatre agreed that the movie had lived up to its reputation.

Barbara Hog, of Belleville, said that she felt the movie was "good" despite the fact that it had her afraid to go home. it was all about, and added that she would not want to see it again. "Once was enough for anyone," she said.

Tom Ferguson, also of Belleville, disagreed with Barbara, saying that he had seen the movie once in Toronto and on watching it for the second time found that the show still carried the punch it had the first time around.

Jack Sproule, the divisional officer with the St. John Ambulance unit in Belleville said that provincial funds will be paid retroactively when government financial restraints relax.

However, the board also was told there could be a delay of three months in delivery of the chiller unit the tower installation might take another three months.

The Devil Made Them Do It

Last night why they were there, they would all have told you the devil made them do it. Nearly 1,200 people stood in line to watch the showings of the Warner Brothers' film The Exorcist as it made its first appearance in the Belleville area. The crowd that waited for the night's second show were caught in a downpour shortly before 9 p.m. but, nevertheless, they all seemed to enjoy themselves in the show. Only two persons managed to make themselves ill during the first showing of the movie.

CFL Meeting Winds Up

Gaudaur Says Stadiums Could Use More Seats

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Football League feels an "imperative" need for increased seating capacity, commissioner Jake Gaudaur told a news conference Friday as the nine-team league ended its semi-annual meeting.

He predicted an increase in attendance at most league centres this season "but the degree of increase will be limited by the number of seats."

He said eight of the clubs operated last season at almost full capacity within the 25-yard lines. "It is essential that our stadia capacity be increased."

The commissioner, who listed a series of "housekeeping" measures accomplished at the closing session, said he is encouraged by the fact that Edmonton and Calgary soon will have more seats and that Toronto and Ottawa are moving in that direction.

In the future was the prospect of a huge olympic stadium in Montreal.

Edmonton Eskimos will move into a stadium being prepared for the 1976 Commonwealth Games and the Stampeders are increasing their capacity in time for the 1975 Grey Cup.

Among the deceptively-mild "housekeeping" items was a statement that owners have decided to table a motion to increase rosters by one Canadian. The clubs now dress 17 Canadians and 15 imports for each game.

Some experts said the motion was tabled because owners hope to use it in bargaining with the militant CFL players' association.

"The league will . . . use the addition of one player as a carrot," said one source. "Remember, the players and the league are pretty far apart."

He suggested the league would set meetings—planned as quickly as possible, Gaudaur said—and perhaps a date for a Canadian player to each roster.

"That's the new jobs in Canadian football and the association would dearly like that."

Gaudaur said talking the motion had nothing to do with negotiations.

He hoped general managers Norm Kimball of Edmonton, spokesman for the league bargaining committee, would be able to approach players' association president George Reed next week to set a date for the further discussion of demands, which include a minimum annual wage of $15,000, extra money for pre-and post-season play, and increased pension benefits.

Gaudaur also said the owners had accepted a recommendation from general managers to use all players who sign contracts with clubs in other leagues while still under contract to Canadian franchises.

He hoped the cases, which probably would be tried in the United States, would be placed under the jurisdiction of federal judges.

"A federal decision probably would be binding all over the U.S. state court decisions may apply only to the state in which they're issued."

The clubs would launch indirect suits and the league would pay the costs.

All-star Game Has TV Problems

OTTAWA (CP) — For the first time since 1970, Canadian football fans may not be able to watch the Canadian Football League all-star game on television.

But the June 26 game played here between defending Grey Cup champions Ottawa Rough Riders and the CFL All-Stars may be available on United States television.

Lawyer Jerry Petrie of Montreal, speaking on behalf of the CFL Players Association Friday night, said that the CTV network, which holds the rights to the game, is unsure whether football sponsors are interested in showing the game.

CFTO-tv in Toronto, for example, is doubtful of carrying the telecast. So too is the Montreal CTV outlet.

CFTO is controlled by John Bassett, former owner of Toronto Argonauts of the CFL. Mr. Bassett also owns the Memphis franchise in the World Football League which was declared kicked out of Canada by proposed federal legislation.

While CBC-TV is interested in showing the game, it is too late for the state network to arrange it.

But Mr. Petrie said Balmar Productions of New York, which shows Canadian football games to roughly 75 Independent U.S. stations, is interested in telecasting the game live.

The result could be that Canadian viewers could see the Canadian all-star game on cable-TV.

Ed George, an all-star tackle from Montreal Alouettes, told a news conference Friday that the all-star team was the best since the game was re-established in 1956.

The team was picked by all nine CFL coaches. The backup squad was chosen by the players association.

Defensive team picks by the coaches were:

Ends—Bill Baker, last year with Saskatchewan Rough Riders and Jim Corrigal, Toronto Argos; tackles—John Helton and Fred James of Calgary Stampeders; linebackers—Gene Mack of Toronto and Mickey Doyle of Winnipeg Blue Bombers; deep backs—Lewis Porter of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Larry Robinson of Calgary, Lorne Richardson of Saskatchewan and Larry Highbaugh and Dick Dupuis, both of Edmonton.

Ron Lancaster of Saskatchewan is the quarterback of the offensive team. George McGowan of Edmonton and Peter Dalla Riva are the ends and the running backs are Johnny Musso of British Columbia Lions, Leon McQuay of Edmonton and George Reed of Saskatchewan.

Johnny Rodgers of Montreal is the flanker, Zeon Andrusyshyn of Toronto is the punter and Dave Cutler of Edmonton is the place kicker.

Bob Swift of Winnipeg is the centre; the tackles are Bill Danychuk of Hamilton and Bill Frank of Winnipeg; the guards are George and Jack Abendschan of Saskatchewan.

Backups, picked by the players are:

Jim Young, B.C., receiver; Ed Chalupka, Hamilton, offensive lineman; Jim Hughton, Winnipeg, defensive lineman; Richard Palmer, B.C., linebacker; Paul Desjardins, Toronto, linebacker; Chuck Ealey, Hamilton, quarterback; Tony Proudfoot, Montreal, defensive back; and Rocky Linderman, Calgary, running back.

Lions Sign Three Players

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Lions announced Friday that three Canadian players have signed 1974 Canadian Football League contracts with the club.

They are Pat. 22, is a defensive back from Queen's University in Kingston, Ont. The six-foot-two, 200-pound player was born in Montreal, where his father Joey played for the Alouettes in the 1960s.

Mike Lapensee, 23, is a five-foot-ten, 180-pound place-kicker from Loyola University in Montreal.

Wide receiver Merv Visneskie, 24, of Verdun, Que., played briefly for Edmonton Eskimos in 1972 and attended the Ottawa Rough Rider training camp in 1973.

Vancouver Signs Two Top Draft Choices

TORONTO (CP) — Pat Price says he will follow the tradition of many other rich young hockey players and buy a sleek sports car.

Price, a 19-year-old defenceman from Saskatoon Blades of the Western Canada Hockey League, was the first choice Friday in the World Hockey Association amateur draft, then signed with Vancouver Blazers a five-year contract worth a reported $1.3 million.

Blazers general manager Jot Crozier also announced the signing of centre Ron Chipperfield from Edmonton Wheat Kings of the WCHL. Chipperfield had been chosen by Vancouver in the WHA's seven-league draft two months ago and was also selected by California Golden Seals in the first round of the National Hockey League draft Tuesday.

Price was one of 300 players from amateur teams universities and colleges from across Canada and the United States chosen in the 19-round, 19½-hour session by the WHA's 15 teams.

Indianapolis Racers, the expansion club scheduled to start play this fall, had second pick and took Mike Will of Edmonton Oil Kings, also of the WCHL, Cincinnati Stingers, a team scheduled to start play in the 1975-76 season, followed by choosing Don Larway from Swift Current Broncos, another WCHL club.

Larway, a 46-goal scorer for the Broncos, was Boston Bruins' first-round choice in the National Hockey League's seven-team amateur draft earlier this week.

Michigan Stags, formerly Los Angeles Sharks, drafting fourth, chose Bill Reed of Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

In the future was the prospect of a huge olympic stadium in Montreal.

Reed, 20, admitted at the conclusion of the draft that he had already signed a five-year contract with the Stags before Red Berenson left. He would not disclose details of the contract.

Phoenix Roadrunners, another expansion club making its debut this fall, had fifth choice and took Dennis Olmstead from the University of Wisconsin. Olmstead's sister Bert is a former player in the National Hockey League.

The Roadrunners originally had first choice, but passed to the Blazers, presumably because Vancouver had already signed Price to a contract. Phoenix then maintained the Blazers' fifth-place pick for the first round.

San Diego Knights, formerly New Jersey Americans, chose Brad Rhiness of Kingston Canadians and Winnipeg Jets, choosing seventh, took Randy Andreichuk of Kamloops, B.C.

Edmonton Oilers had eighth pick, and took Doug Soetart of the Oil Kings.

Real Cloutier of Quebec Remparts of the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League, followed by Quebec Nordiques, and Gary McGregor, a centre who scored 39 goals for Cornwall Royals in the QMJHL last season, was Chicago Cougars' first-round choice.

Cleveland Crusaders, picking 11th, chose Paul Baxter from Winnipeg set he WCHL.

Toronto Toros, choosing 12th, picked Jim Turkiewicz of Peterborough Petes and New England followed by taking Tim Young of Ottawa '67s.

Minnesota Fighting Saints, with 14th pick, took Bruce Boudreau of Toronto Marlboros and league-champion Houston Aeros, choosing last, took Dick Spanbauer of the University of Minnesota.

Spanbauer was one of 66 players chosen Friday who play or go to school in the U.S. The WHA has no agreement with the United States Amateur Hockey Association concerning payment to the association for players the league drafts.

Under a league agreement with the Canadian Amateur Association, the league pays the CAHA $10,000 for each drafted player signed through the top 10, and $15,000 for selections 10 through 81.

The clubs will pay $40,000 for each Canadian junior signed. There were 14 such exceptional players chosen in the first two rounds of Friday's draft.

Most of the teams passed their way through the 15th round, and only Indianapolis, New England, Minnesota and Houston continued.

Winnipeg, which had been missing from the 13th round on, made the last pick of the draft when they chose Ron Wynne of Cornwall.

Each club was permitted to select one under-age junior in either of the first two rounds by signing the league agreement with the CAHA.

In addition to the 300 players chosen Friday, 26 picked if the secret negotiation draft two months ago were placed under their respective teams's lists at the beginning of the draft.

The 30 players were not involved in Friday's proceedings.

Draft master Vern Buffey, the league's referee-in-chief, was forced to make a ruling in the 10th round when Michigan attempted to draft Gordon Roberts, a 16-year-old with Detroit Junior Wings of the Southern Ontario Junior Hockey League. After a meeting with league officials, Buffey said that all players under 17, not only those in Canada, are ineligible for drafting by the league.

Anderson Named Coach Of Washington Capitals

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Jimmy Anderson, Boston Bruins' scout and former minor league coach, was named Friday as coach of the expansion Washington Capitals of the National Hockey League.

The 52-year-old Anderson signed a two-year contract.

Terms of the pact were not announced, but were believed to be about $30,000 a year.

Anderson played 18 seasons of professional hockey, mostly in the American League, before coaching and scouting. He ended his playing career in 1969 with Springfield Kings.

After scouting for a year, Anderson joined Oklahoma City, a Detroit farm club, and coached the Blazers to the playoffs of the Central League. The following year he coached Dayton in a second-place finish in the International League.

Anderson told a news conference he planned to have the Capitals ready for the start of the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers. Anderson included a lot of hitting and checking.

"I like to see a physically hard-checking game, like Philadelphia," Anderson said, adding that quick skating is the style when he was a player.

"I had two goals in life," Anderson said. "One was to play in the National Hockey League and the other was to coach in the NHL.

"It took me 26 years to play seven games. I'm still chasing the other one that long to get a winner in Washington."

General manager Milt Schmidt, assistant general manager Lefty McFadden and scout Red Sullivan are products of the Boston Bruins system.

What Anderson lacks in NHL playing time—he scored one goal and had two assists in his seven games in 1967-68—he makes up in savvy obtained in hockey's minor leagues.

Born in Penetanguishene, Ont., to put in 18 minor league seasons, most of them with Springfield. As a high-scoring left winger, he racked up 474 goals and 418 assists.

More significantly, Anderson learned hockey techniques.

Schmidt, Boston general manager, gave Anderson the Oklahoma City job to coach the Bruins' farm team. There, where he worked for general manager McFadden, now Schmidt's top aide here, Anderson scouting for Boston last year.

"I have a thorough assessment of the American Hockey League," Anderson said. "I've got a lot of players there that can play in the NHL and are just waiting to be plucked.

"A few years ago, I didn't think they would be able to play but the league has expanded so fast and diluted itself, they are ready now."

Schmidt said Anderson was not automatically his first choice for the job because "I put them all in the hat and his name was the one that came to the top."

The general manager also said Bep Guidolin, who resigned as Bruins' coach last week, was not in the running, speculation not accurate to date.

"It was all newspaper talk. I did not contact him and he did not contact me."

Schmidt also indicated that Derek Sanderson, who was fired by the Bruins, probably will not come to Washington to play, which also had been speculated. Anderson worked with Sanderson daily to get him in shape last year before he was fired.

Three Junior Leagues Merge

TORONTO (CP) — In a move to give junior A hockey players in three top Junior A hockey leagues the "opportunity" to compete for the Canadian Major Junior A league.

The three leagues—Western Canada Hockey League, Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series and Quebec Major Junior A league—have had problems, said Ed Chynoweth, president of the WCHL.

The leagues are considering nominations for the new position of commissioner of the national body and once he is selected, a constitution will be written, said Chynoweth.

One of the problems facing the three leagues is the drafting of 16-year-old players by the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association.

"If they keep taking the 16 year-olds, we'll just end up with a glorified midget league," Chynoweth said.

He said the pro leagues had promised their privileges in the recent amateur draft.

They claimed they would not take only exceptional under-age players. There's no way there will be 26 exceptional 16-year-olds (the number that were drafted). And they're into a cutting throat lifeline of their future."

The leagues also decided Friday not to raise the junior eligibility one year to 21 as the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association recommended to do earlier this month in Winnipeg. "We've had a lower limit to raise the age limit," said Chynoweth. "We've talked and talked and too early. We want to stay under the umbrella of the CAHA but we believe, based on what was wrong."

Under the new set-up, there will be an interlocking schedule but will continue to compete in their respective leagues. An agreement to hold another Memorial Cup next year under the previous round-robin format.

Whether or not the team's been chosen yet but it will probably be somewhere in Ontario, Chynoweth said. "The main point, however, is that we have a united front now to deal with the present problems that are existing us and future ones that will arise."

LIONS CHARGED

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (CP) — Garrett Underwood and Rod Magrum of British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League have been charged with causing a disturbance by fighting. Each paid $25 and they're now in cutting lifeline of their future."

The leagues also decided Friday not to raise the junior eligibility one year to 21 as the Ca-during an argument.

Bayview Alone In First Place

With an assist from Concession, Bayview Orchards took over sole possession of first place in the Prince Edward North-Shore Softball League, Thursday night.

Bayview scored its third win against one setback by turning back O'Brien's Tree Service 16-5, while Concession handed Palmer's its first loss after two wins, a 13-5 reverse.

Don Bonner stopped O'Brien's on a five-hitter, and struck out seven and walked only one. The loser was Pete Scott who allowed eight hits, fanned three and did not walk a man.

Steve Donatior led Bayview's hitters with three safeties. Bob Harrison had two while Dwayne Donatior, Booter and Milton Yott each collected one.

O'Brien's got two hits from Jim McCormack and one each off the bats of Pete Meena, Barry McKelvey and Scott.

The hitters had their night in the other league contest. Between them, Conneaon and Palmer's accounted for 23 safeties with the winners holding a 14-11 edge.

Gary Eardley worked six innings for the winners, allowing 11 hits, striking out four and walking one. Art Keller threw one big inning. He retired the side on strikes.

Sharing the offensive duties for Palmer's were Earl Colton and Dennis Snell. They surrendered 14 hits (13 off Colton in five innings and one off Snell in two) while claiming seven strikeout victims and walking a pair.

A seven-run sixth inning got the job done for Conneaon. Palmer's held a 5-3 lead until that explosion.

Leading the hit parade for Conneon was Dave Phillips with three safeties. Checking in with two each were Stan Clarke, Ted McDonald and Bob MacLeod.

Brian Montgomery and Rod Wyatt each had three for the losers. Pat Mullins and Chuck Kemp were good for two apiece.

The Chase Is On

Putting the chase on BCI's Phil Harvey in Thursday night Bay of Quinte League final is Quinte Secondary's Jim Hannah.

Harvey got the ball here, but his team still came up with a 7-4 win to take the league championship. It was Quinte's seventh win against no losses, while BCI suffered its first loss after six wins.

Saints March to Title

Quinte Secondary School Thursday night took the Bay of Quinte High School cricket championship with a 74 victory over Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Both teams went into the game undefeated, with each squad having recorded six consecutive wins.

The pressure of the undefeated showed through, as the game began and was played under continual chipiness by both teams. At one point, BCI captain Ted Perlberg considered withdrawing his team from the game.

After two of his key players, Ted McBride and Steve Cowan had been ejected from further play, Perlberg asked convener of the league, and with a referee present, Mike Dollack to stop the game.

The remaining quarter and several minutes were played, however, with Quinte finishing a strong Collegiate attack off, scoring one more goal themselves just as the final horn sounded to give them the three goal margin.

Thirty-six penalties were assessed in the game, including two expulsion majors and a three minute spearing penalty to a member of the Quinte team.

Quinte ended up with 15 of the 36 penalties assessed.

Reg Abrams scored three times for the Saints, with Robin Chapman adding a pair. Jim Hannah and Kerry Reid rounded out the Quinte scoring.

Ted McBride, BCI's top scorer in the regular schedule and playoff game with Centennial managed to fire one of the Collegians' markers before leaving, with John Geen, Brent Walmsley, and Mark Walmsley adding the others.

Both goaltenders, Steve Hale in the Saints net, and Gary Donovan in the BCI cage came up with fine performances in one of the more wide open games of the season.

Fourth Inning Walk Hurts

Lockhart Loses Chance To Log Perfect Game

Norm Lockhart came within one batter of pitching a perfect game Friday night as he led the Post Office to an 18-0 victory over The Intell in Industrial Softball play.

Lockhart went five innings walking one and fanning 13 before the game was called for darkness.

The walk in the fourth inning meant Lockhart had to settle for a no-hit shutout.

Randy Burke was tops at the plate banging out three singles and a home run.

Lockhart helped his own cause as he smashed a homer and a triple. Tom Wood had two triples and Ken Barnard had two singles and a home run.

Altogether the Postmen scored 18 runs on 16 hits and seven Intell errors.

In another game, Stewart Warner picked up their first win of the season with an 11-9 victory over the Independents.

Eric Fowell and Dave Marvin smashed three singles and a triple each to lead the Warner attack.

The losers were outhit 20-6 over the game, but still managed to collect nine runs.

Ken Bartrand did some clutch hitting for the Independents getting two doubles and a single.

In a Thursday night game, Constellation's Jim Thompson went all the way on a six-hitter but lost a 4-3 squeaker to Mend Johnson.

Harold Wilkinson and Larry Waite teamed up for the win ners and limited Constellation to seven hits. Wilkinson was touched for five in five innings and five in two innings.

The losers left five men stranded on the base paths, to three left on base by Mend.

Jim Woods led the winners with three singles. Tim O'Connell hammered a home run while Wilkinson and Gary Deneveux each supplied a single.

Tops for Constellation was Bob Reid with a single and a double. Mike Callahan posted a pair of singles with Thompson checking in with a double. Ron Mcdonell and Joe Clare managed one single apiece.

YANKEES SELL CLARKE

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Horace Clarke, veteran second baseman with New York Yankees, has been sold to San Diego Padres, the Yankees announced Friday. Clarke, 34, has been in the New York organization for 17 years and was a regular with the American League club for seven seasons before losing the job this spring.

Underdogs Produce In Two BQSA Games

There may have been some foundation for the stand of many observers, concerning the Bay of Quinte Football Association and the battle for first place honors in the Tdivision grouping.

But following Thursday's league action, it's a cinch since, if not all those who were predicting a two-way fight between Cobourg Tory's and Belleville Golden Mile Olympics, have paused to reconsider.

Tony's and Olympics carried perfect records into Thursday matches. But Whitley Insurance of Trenton, and the Warkworth Intallion squads were not impressed by the credentials presented by the favored visiting teams.

The Whitley team was expected to give Tony's an argument. alright. But the Trenton team had yet to defeat the Cobourg club, coming out on the short end in each of for 1973 starts.

All the Trenton team did Thursday, was hand Tony's a stunning 4-1 reversal.

Those of you who gave Warkworth a chance against Golden Mile, stand up and be counted.

Then you're not surprised that the Institution's league entry picked on a team which had looked capable of stretching its unbeaten streak to double figures. Final score in that one, was Warkworth 4, Olympics 1.

Centre forward Henry Sonneveld, regaining some-of-the form he displayed last year, sparked the Whitley team to the upset over Tony's. Henry took care of three of his team's goals.

Tony's started the way they left off las season.

With about 15 minutes gone, Paul Allen outmanoeuvered Trenton's Ron Cannons before scoring the first goal for the Cobourg club.

Cobourg's John Howard and Peter Bahr after taking a pass from Chauncey Soderberg, Len Taft set the play in motion, finding Soderberg open on the left wing and delivering a perfect pass.

Late in the half, Sonneveld had another good chance, but realizing he was through at a difficult angle shot he chose instead to relay the ball to Eddie Wade who goaled in the net.

Twenty minutes into the second half, Terry Blight made the play for Sonneveld's second goal; getting the ball to the trigger-man from the left wing.

With the score 3-1, Tony's began to apply the pressure, but an alert Wade goalie, Terry Here broke up a play and threw the ball to Soderberg. The old combination paid off again when Soderberg sent a lead pass to Sonneveld. As quickly as it was on his feet, Henry had the ball past the Cobourg goalie and the upstart Whitley team had its win in the bag.

Harry Lamers was busy most of the night. He drew a tough assignment. Matched, against Cobourg's Ben Vereyken, the Trenton defender held his high scoring opponent under wraps.

Team spokesman Cannons set the trend for the match. Before the kickoff he called the shot when he observed that all the team needed to go with its new canary-yellow jerseys, was its first win over Cobourg.

What happened in Warkworth?

One Olympics' spokesman suggested that some of the younger players on the Belleville team may have had some of the edge taken off their game by the fact that they were making their first start at the Institution.

Be that as it may, the winners were full value for their initial victory.

After Warkworth had belted back from a 1-0 halftime deficit, Olympics' coach John O'Neill summed it up with "They simply outplayed us in that second half."

Hostile was the name of the game for the winners. With goalie Wally Wakeford supplying a steadying influence with some great work, Warkworth had was not going to be denied.

Charlie Nestorovski headed in the ball on a corner kick by Manuel Montes in the first half but that was it for Olympics.

Three goals by Lucio Marcello and one from the foot of Bruno Kruno got the job done for the home side.

The 'pick of the' visitors were Robbie Foster and Keith Lawley.

Sunday, at the Ontario School for Deaf pitch, Golden Mile meets Trenton Panelas in a 6 p.m. exhibition match.

Thurlow Midgets 3-1

Thurlow Keith Realtor midget entry in Bay of Quinte Soccer would rather play ball but he admits "We'll take the points any way we can get them".

Thursday, for the second time in a week, Thurlow had a 9-0 Eastern Ontario Baseball Association win by default. Belleville Yardmen were on deck for the scheduled contest but could only field eight players.

Lindsay didn't show for a game on Tuesday, either. The Realtors now have three wins and a loss in league play.

Yardmen and Thurlow played an exhibition game Thursday with the Realtors scoring a 4-2 win in the five-inning contest.

20 TIPS TO BETTER GOLF
by George Knudson
Copyright 1974, Toronto Sun Syndicate

TIP NO. 4 STANCE

The position of the feet in the golf swing determines the path of the club. This, in turn, determines the flight of the ball.

There are several variations in the stance — Open to slice or fade the ball, closed to hook or draw the ball — Narrow for short irons, wide for woods.

In all variations, however, the position of the left foot and the relative position of the ball do NOT change. You always tee the ball on a line just inside the left heel. In the square stance, both toes are on the intended line of flight. To open the stance, move your right foot forward; to close it move the right foot back; to narrow the stance, move your right foot closer to your left; to widen it, move the right foot further away.

POSITIVE KEY — The ball is just inside the left heel — always.

Those Footsteps Bugging Dodgers Belong to Reds

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Those footsteps behind the pace-setting Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West belong to Cincinnati Reds, division champions in three of the last four years.

The Reds won their seventh consecutive game Friday night, downing Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3.

Meanwhile, in the East, Philadelphia Phillies, the early stay at the top of the division all Friday night when they bowed to San Francisco Giants 6-2.

In other National League games Friday, Houston Astros beat New York Mets 7-1, St. Louis Cardinals shut out San Diego Padres 5-0 and Los Angeles defeated Chicago Cubs 3-2. Atlanta's game at Montreal was rained out.

The Reds are still seven games behind the Dodgers in the West but Los Angeles also had that kind of lead a year ago and Cincinnati wiped it out.

The Reds, nine games out when the current streak began, believe that lightning could strike again even though the Dodgers aren't exactly coasting with three straight victories and eight victories in their last 11 starts.

"I'm tickled to death," said slugger Johnny Bench, whose bases-loaded triple led a decisive four-run seventh inning rally for he Reds. It's great for morale, and seven in a row doesn't hurt."

The Pirates were saving a 3-2 lead into the seventh on a pair of homers by Bob Robertson but Bench's bases-loaded triple turned it around.

The Phillies dropped their fifth in a row and slipped into second place in the East, one percentage point back of St. Louis.

Garry Maddox led the Giants' attack, with two doubles, driving in one run and scoring another while reliever Randy Moffitt earned his first win in relief.

Doubles by Bobby Bonds and Maddox snapped a 2-2 tie in the 8th, then the Giants added three more runs on RBI-singles by Garry Thomasson, Dave Rader and Bonds in the ninth.

Bill Russell, Rick Auerbach and Bill Buckner had three hits each and Los Angeles picked up four unearned runs to defeat Chicago.

Buckner also stole three bases and Mike Marshall, appearing in his 33rd game, picked up his eighth save for the Dodgers. Los Angeles also committed four errors, leading to two unearned runs for the Cubs.

Houston stretched its winning streak to three games as Cesar Cedeno had four hits including his 10th home run, Doug Rader and Tommy Helms added three hits each against the Mets.

It was the fourth straight loss for stumbling New York, fifth in the East Division, five games off the pace.

Sonny Siebert tossed a five-hitter for his sixth victory of the season and Reggie Smith hit his 10th home run, helping the Cards past the Padres and into first place in the NL East.

Siebert shutout extended Siebert's scoreless string to 34 innings. Smith, meanwhile had two more hits. In the last five games, the ex-Angelous Leon has had nine hits in 18 at bats including five doubles and three homers. His batting average is up to .378.

Wind and Rain Stops the Game

MONTREAL (CP) — The National League game between the Montreal Expos and Atlanta Braves was rained-out Friday with Montreal batting in the third inning and Atlanta leading 4-0.

The Braves battered Montreal starter Steve Renko for four runs and five hits in the second inning with key hits being two-run singles by Ralph Garr and Dusty Baker.

It first began raining during the Braves' rally and a 17-minute rain delay took place in the bottom of the second.

The teams got another inning in after play resumed only to have the wind-driven rain begin again in the bottom of the third. Winds of 50 miles an hour were reported in the area.

No makeup game was announced.

A Helpful Vada Pinson Banks Ball Off Cable

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fortunately for the Great Wallenda, he didn't walk across the top of Cleveland's Municipal Stadium until after the Royals-Indians baseball game Friday night.

If the tightrope walker had decided on a practice run any time during the Kansas City fourth inning, there might have been trouble.

A wire cable had been strung above the field for a typical death-defying Wallenda performance. And Vada Pinson, just trying to be helpful as he pelted the players, fans and field, hit the wire with a fly ball.

"I did it to knock the rain off," Pinson joked after the Royals' 4-2 victory. "So he wouldn't slip, you know."

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland A's defeated Milwaukee Brewers 5-2, California Angels downed Detroit Tigers 5-4, Texas Rangers beat Baltimore Orioles 7-6, Minnesota Twins defeated New York Yankees 8-2 and Chicago White Sox edged Boston Red Sox 3-2.

Although Pinson took the flukes in stride, it seems safe to say the hit wasn't intentional. The umpires were well prepared for such an event, however, having declared before the game that any ball hitting the wire would remain in play.

The real damage was done by Alonzo Otis' two-run single and John Mayberry's 10th home run of the season, which gave the Royals a 3-1 lead. Jim Wohlford brought in the other run.

John Lowenstein and Jack Brohamer drove in the Cleveland runs.

Joe Rudi's three-run home run was the highlight of a five-run third inning that gave the A's victory over Milwaukee.

Dave Hamilton and Rollie Fingers combined for a seven-hitter, permitting one run each. Milwaukee's Bob Ellis drove one run home with a single in the second inning and Don Money the other in the eighth.

Angel Mangual drove in another run for the A's. The other scored on a wild pitch.

Ellie Rodriguez drove in four runs with one home run and a double to carry California past Detroit.

Rodriguez hit the double in the second inning and 2-2 tie in the fifth inning with his third home run of the season, and added a homer in the seventh to hand Mickey Lolich his sixth loss against five victories.

Toby Harrah had three hits, including the tie-breaking single in the fifth inning for the Texas triumph over Baltimore.

The Orioles knocked out Rangers ace Ferguson Jenkins with four runs in the first, but Harrah brought Texas back. He tripled and singled earlier, building runs in the second and fourth.

Tony Oliva had four hits, only two less than the Yankees total as a team, and drove home seven in two runs with a first-inning double to lead Minnesota over New York.

Joe Decker, Tom Burgmeier and Bill Campbell combined to hold the Yankees to six hits while the Twins sprinted to a three-run, five-hit first inning for the Dick Allen hit his ninth home run of the season and Bill Melton followed with his fourth of the year in the third inning to lead Chicago's victory over Boston.

Terry Forster picked up his 10th save of the season by relieving Wilbur Wood, 5-6, for the final out of the game. Boston's Carlton Fisk provided the Boston scoring with his sixth and seventh home runs of the year.

Ottawa? No Way Says Sims

OTTAWA (CP) — Defensive tackle Rudy Sims of the Ottawa Rough Riders said Friday "only a court order will bring me back to Ottawa."

Sims, due to play out his option year with the Grey Cup champions, already has signed to play with Philadelphia of the World Football League.

"I don't want to play in Ottawa and intend to report to Philadelphia for the start of training June 8," Sims said in a telephone interview from his home in Tampa, Fla.

The Riders, of the Canadian Football League, already have launched court action against coach Jack Gotta who signed with Birmingham of the WFL, although he still has two years to go on his contract with Riders.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Third baseman Ken Reitz was withheld from the St. Louis Cardinal lineup Friday because he had not paid a $100 fine imposed 10 days earlier by National League umpire Ed Sudol. Campbell Plans To Crack Down

TORONTO (CP) — Rule! Referee-in-chief Scotty Morrison suggested one- small rule adjustment will end nagging referees and the failure of players to go to the penalty box.

The threat of misconduct penalties isn't adequate," Morrison said, "but if the team shares the responsibility it should improve things.

"If a player risks a minor penalty to his team, then his mates will get him off the ice quickly or make sure he doesn't have the referee."

Morrison said another area that will help referees clearly is the penalizing of players for instigating fights.

Quite often a fight by a player, sometimes after the whistle gets a fight going," the NHL's chief arbitrator. "That player should be penalized for starting it, plus his part in the fighting."

Hoffman's Home Run Gives Kitchener Win

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Don Hoffman's line-drive home run leading off the bottom of the 11th inning propelled Kitchener to a 3-2 victory over Toronto in Ontario Football League action Friday night.

Hoffman's homer broke up a pitching duel between Toronto's Peter Lumley and Kitchener's Keith Wagler. Each struck out 10 batters and gave up eight hits.

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the second inning. Kitchener went ahead 2-1 in the fifth and Rick Allison's homer tied the score in the top of the sixth.

Both pitchers dominated the action until the 11th inning when Hoffman unloaded his drive.

Kitchener's record now is 3-4, Toronto is 3-3.

Toronto's six games have all been on the road. It plays its home opener tonight against Newmarket.

Fat and Sassy Again, Trevino Takes the Lead

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Lee Trevino is fat and sassy again.

"I put on 19 pounds on purpose a couple of weeks ago," the wise-cracking Mexican-American said Friday after he'd forged into the second-round lead in the $225,000 Kemper open golf tournament with a course-record, eight-under-par 64.

"I'll go to Hartford next week to get ready for the U.S. Open, and I'll shed it then, tone down and be ready and raring to go."

Trevino one-putted nine times on his way to what he said was maybe the best competitive round he's ever had.

His 194 total was 10 strokes under par on the 7,095-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course, within two shots of the best 36-hole total of the year, but only one in front of a group of a half-dozen tied for second.

Tied at 196 were first-round leader Tom Watson, Jerry Heard, J. C. Snead, Gibby Gilbert, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Jack Nicklaus.

Gilbert made an eagle on the last hole for a 68. Rodriguez had 10 one-putts for the same score. Snead and Heard had 66s. Jacobs had a 67 and Watson a 70.

There were 36 scores of 67 or better posted in the second round alone.

It took a score of 142, two under par, to make the cut after two rounds today and Sunday, and Ben Kern of London, Ont., didn't make it, shooting a 75 for 144.

Among the other casualties were Arnold Palmer and defending champion Tom Weiskopf. Palmer took a second-round 76 for 146.

The tournament is one of three designated tournaments, the money in which the game's leading players are required to compete.

Hubert Green, a two-time winner this season, had another at Munich.

Ed (Porky) Oliver, a five-time winner this season, had 68 for 136; Billy Casper took a 69—137, Australian Bruce Crampton and Johnny Miller, a five-time winner this season, had 138s. Masters champion Gary Player just made the cut on the line, 142.

Trevino said there was a plan behind his weight gain—to 187 pounds.

"When you're heavier, you're more easy-going. You don't get nervous so much. Things don't bother you. That's the way I wanted to be going into the practice for the U.S. Open. I'll lose the weight next week and be ready."

Bell Profits Cited

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumers Association of Canada (CAC) told a hearing into Bell Canada's application for higher rates Friday that the company's 1974 first-quarter profits were higher than projected and therefore an increase is not reasonable.

Andrew Roman, giving final arguments for the CAC, said Bell's return on investments should only be high enough to pay the cost of borrowing money.

Bell's cost of borrowing money was 8.46 per cent last year, this year, he said, while its return was 7.36 per cent.

However, the commission should deny Bell an increase of actual telephone rates because the company has not demonstrated that other alternatives (of raising money) would not produce the required rate of return, he said.

"Evidence showed that in the first quarter of 1974, Bell profits ranked higher than projected . . . If this trend continues the company will produce a rate of return of 8.9 per cent in 1974 without the proposed rate increase," Mr. Roman said.

Bell authorities say the rate increases sought would produce $63.3 million in extra revenue if applied during all of 1974.

The company is seeking increases to bring its rate of return on invested capital to about 8.6 per cent.

Bell, which has 4.3 million subscribers in Quebec, Ontario and the Northwest Territories, is seeking several rate changes.

These include adding 10 cents a month to the base rate for most residential users with one-party lines, doubling the hook-up phone rate to 30 cents, implementing a 35-cent directory-assistance charge for most residential users and increasing the long-distance overtime rates by one cent for each minute.

The CAC argued that the proposed increases "are not reasonable and just."

Rather than a rate increase, the CAC said, the Canadian Radio-television commission should recommend to cabinet that Bell be assessed an extra corporate income taxes and that the saving be passed on to consumers.

Motorist Survey Claimed Improper

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — A federally-commissioned survey in which motorists are asked a number of questions and to take a breath analysis test is in direct invasion of privacy," J. Trevor Morgan, federal Progressive Conservative candidate in St. Catharines riding, said Friday.

He said interviews in the survey, conducted at night in several Canadian cities, are voluntary but many motorists do not realize this.

"I was annoyed and astonished when I heard the question Mr. Lang asked Mr. Morgan on the interview. "It's also a waste of $265,000 of the taxpayers money."

That was the value of the contract awarded to Canadian Canada Engineering Corp., a Toronto consulting firm, by the federal department of transport to conduct the survey.

It began last October in cities across Canada 2½ months ago. Students were hired to do the survey and police are involved. Names of the cities were not available.

Questions include age, marital status, occupancy, driver starting point and destination, whether the driver and his passengers have been drinking and whether they are wearing seat belts.

A transport department official said in an Ottawa telephone interview drivers also are asked about their drinking habits, whether they drive after drinking and how many occasions they may have driven while intoxicated. They are asked to take a breath test.

Dr. Gordon Campbell, director of the department's motor traffic safety branch, said the survey is part of an international effort to devise safety programs.

Similar studies are being conducted in the United States and several European countries, he said.

Results of the survey are expected in about two weeks, he said, and the complaint by Mr. Morgan was only the second since it began.

War Declared on Drunks

FREDERICTON (CP) — Crown prosecutors in New Brunswick are being instructed to ask for one-day jail terms rather than fines, for first offences in drunk-driving cases, Justice Minister John Baxter said Friday.

He told the legislature he was announcing a "declaration of war" on drunk driving, and jail terms were only one of a series of moves aimed at cutting down on drinking-related traffic mishaps.

The new program would stress "punishment and re-education." Prosecutors would seek 14-day terms for second offences, although the final decision on penalties will rest with the presiding judges.

The minister said fines had proved ineffective and discriminatory after many years, hurting low-wage earners and having little impact on wealthier persons.

Mr. Baxter spoke shortly before the legislature approved a bill that provides for enforced treatment of alcoholics.

Disease Forces Cattle Slaughter

ST. PAUL, Alta. (CP) — More than 400 cattle throughout Alberta have been slaughtered following an outbreak of brucellosis, a disease which causes abortions and sterility among the animals.

Federal agriculture department veterinarians reported Friday that three herds have been destroyed in the St. Paul region 180 miles northeast of Edmonton, where the heaviest outbreak has occurred, and seven more herds are under quarantine while blood tests are being analyzed. Eleven other herds are quarantined elsewhere in the province.

The department's health of animals division is increasing its testing programs in an effort to halt the spread of the disease.

One case of infestation has already been reported among hogs, which had to be destroyed with other veterinarians in the St. Paul area.

The animals present no danger to humans if the disease is confined to their sexual organs. Farmers can thus recover the going market price for their animals when they are forced to slaughter them.

But included in the herds are high-grade cattle worth thousands of dollars a head. The government compensation is $450 for a recognized quality breeding animal.

New Bucks Monday

OTTAWA (CP) — The newly-designed $1 note, the fourth in the series of new Canadian currency, will be released to chartered banks beginning Monday, the Bank of Canada announced Friday.

The design includes the same engraved portrait of the Queen that appears on $20 bills. The scene on the back of the note shows Parliament Hill from the eastern side of the Ottawa River, with pulp industry activity pictured in the foreground.

Current $1 notes will continue in use until withdrawn from circulation as being unfit for transaction.

Labor Minister Not Prejudiced

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's new labor minister describes himself as "averagely well-to-do."

But, says John Palmer MacBeth, "I hope I don't carry any prejudices either in favor of management or labor."

The new minister sworn in Friday morning as a replacement for Fern Guindon after stepping down to seek a seat in the federal House, promised to be fair in all his approaches.

"In this position, you can't afford to carry prejudices," he said.

He carried the Metropolitan Toronto riding of York West by almost 12,000 votes for the Progressive Conservatives in 1971.

It was a comeback of sorts because Mr. MacBeth had been out of politics for five years.

He was never on the then township of Etobicoke from 1956 to 1966 and previous to that served as deputy reeve. And he was on the township's board of education from 1953 to 1956.

A graduate of Osgoode Hall law school, Mr. MacBeth served as a petty officer in the Royal Canadian Navy during the Second World War before embarking on his law career.

Since being elected to the legislature, he's served as chairman of committees investigating the Ontario Municipal Board and Ontario Hydro and only last month was appointed parliamentary assistant to Attorney - General Robert Welch.

Mr. MacBeth said he owns "a good number of stocks" in public companies and holds a mortgage on a suburban Etobicoke property. He said he is preparing a complete statement of his holdings as required within three months by guidelines laid down last year.

He said he owns no land except his family home in Etobicoke and a summer cottage registered in the name of his wife, Ruth.

The father of three children says he's never been a member of a labor union, but says he doesn't expect that to be a handicap.

AN OPEN LETTER TO ROBERT STANFIELD

For nearly 40 years I voted Liberal, but at the last election I voted Conservative only because of you, Mr. Stanfield. But in a sense I am still a Liberal even though I intend to vote specifically for you in the next election.

Why?

Because basically you are not a politician as we the public define them. Oh, you are trying hard to be a typical politician in order to survive, but still you are not a real circus-performing politician.

And what you are, Mr. Stanfield, is what Canada needs as never before!

I recall reading one time a definition of politicians. They defined politicians as unbelievable bunglers and/or horrendous liars and/or disgusting patronage seekers and/or supreme grafters and/or outrageous thieves — and to add insult to injury, before elections with vote-catching schemes politicians astutely bribe the public with our own money from the political (pardon me) public pot.

So you see, Mr. Stanfield, you do not qualify as a real politician as defined above. That's why, even though basically I consider myself Liberal, I will vote for you in the next election.

You are not good looking, nor do you have charisma. But since we are not bedding down with you, therefore you don't deserve our votes even without good looks and charisma. Nor are you a superb orator, Mr. Stanfield. But very few of our top-notch executives are superb orators. You belong to this executive-type group, Mr. Stanfield, and this is what we need more than ever before in the history of our democratic system.

Why do we vote for politicians who are good looking and/or who have charisma and/or who are hypnotic orators? Because we know just what all political groups really are, no matter which one we vote for, determined to get their own political party into power by hook or by crook; and so what we do psychologically is to stupidly console ourselves by voting for politicians who are good looking and/or have charisma and/or mesmerize us with hypocritical oratory, hopefully to drown away our frustrations.

I once figured out, Mr. Stanfield, that we would not have any national debt if all the money was recovered that has been wasted by politicians as a result of their unbelievable bungling, patronage, grafting. Politicians are the curse of our democratic system, yes of all other systems too since recorded time. The name of the game, politically, has been particularly of recent years to drastically increase the size of the public pot, because the larger the pot then the more there is to skim off with greedy political hands. We were very outrageously conned with Benson's White Paper in the revamping of our tax system, when the Liberals politically true to style horrendously lied to us that it did not increase the tax — it increased the tax bite out of the public hide, because now the politicians are wallowing in our hard earned money to waste with abandon from the drastically increased 'take' that now comes out of our pockets.

So all you have to do, Mr. Stanfield is to make one single fulfillable promise, and everything else will fall into place. The curse will fall into line — to drastically remedy our soaring inflation rate within our own Canadian borders — to noticeably remedy our unemployment rate — to chop back drastically on the monstrously increased number of bureaucrats in Ottawa — to drastically reduce our taxes: etc., etc.

Just promise us, Mr. Stanfield, that you will, as our next Prime Minister, set up the machinery to wipe out our national debt within 25 years, and the only way you can do this is to include in that promise of yours to stop unbelievable bungling, patronage, graft in politics — at least to the extent that the money saved will wipe out our national debt within 25 years. Give our Auditor-General unlimited powers to enable him to ferret out and stop the raping of the public (not political) pot. If Maxwell Henderson, our former Auditor-General, is available he could from what he knows provide superb assistance as a consultant to now go all out.

You, Mr. Stanfield, are looking for a solid, sensible and above all honest platform. Here it is! You are looking for a way to capture our imagination (without good looks, without charisma, without oratory). Here it is!

Besides, from the total cash flow of earned incomes from all corporations and from all individuals, of this the total cash spending of all levels of government (federal, provincial, municipal) has soared to an unbelievable and horrendous 50 per cent plus (including the bungling, the patronage, the graft). Mr. Prime Minister Mr. Stanfield, it is imperative that you not only stop but reverse this insanity which, if allowed to continue on its present upward bulldozing trend, will unquestionably wipe out the freedom of the people, leaving an iron-fisted central control through the complete direction of our finances in the hands of a small absolute ruling group, or one individual.

You do this, Mr. Stanfield, and you will go down in history, in the nick of time for us, as the saviour of our democratic system, wiping out the political cancer that has started to eat away at the vitals of this democratic system of ours. You can make Canada the envy of the entire world, and this could be a long time repeatable job for you, Mr. Stanfield.

SAMPLE COMMENTS FROM PEOPLE IN RESPONSE TO A PRE-PUBLISHING MAILER ADV.

This is a perfectly marvelous and timely article. The most accurate assessment I've seen.

I agree with the above. It is big government spending and big government waste that causes inflation.

If only Mr. Stanfield would adopt such a policy — he would win in the forthcoming election.

Trudeau will go down in history as the all time ruthless spender of the taxpayers' money.

As a federal civil servant I am only too familiar with the colossal waste, bungling and abuse of privilege from the upstarts the civil service, and I support your letter to Stanfield.

Perhaps you can find a man who will put people and country miles ahead of his party.

In spades!

You have "sifted the wheat from the chaff" Mr. Stanfield is all wheat.

Hope that excerpts from above are published down people's throats from time to time. Highly concerned citizen.

We agree 100 per cent — we admire your spirit and wish you luck!!

We thought that we were the only ones who thought like this. Maybe there is a chance!

I couldn't agree more. Mr. Stanfield IS the man we need.

We agree whole-heartedly with what you say in your ad. "This present Liberal Gov't. is without a doubt the worst gov't. we could have. Gutless, stupid and do-nothing.

Mind Over Matter

By ALLEN SPRAGGETT

Can Uri Geller really zap metal with his mind?

It is said of the 27-year-old former Israeli parascrooper that he bends objects with his eyes, that forks curl up when he looks at them, stopped watches start ticking again when he passes his hand over them, and under his gaze gold rings melt on their owner's fingers.

Geller, who now lives in New York, is the boldest exponent of the art of psychokinesis, or PK — the claimed ability of some people to influence physical objects directly by the mind. Call it mind over matter.

Today, a growing number of scientists are willing to take a serious look at PK and similar phenomena once dismissed out of hand as superstition or cheap tricks. Even the Pentagon is rumored to have set up and taken notice of Uri Geller's strange doings. There's the U.S. Army Quarters of an "ESP race" between the U.S. and Russia, and a new word has entered the language.

Already Geller has been a guinea pig at California's prestigious Stanford Research Institute, a think tank that does classified work for the U.S. military. Two SRI staffers, Dr. Harold Puthoff and Russell Targ, experts in laser physics, said "that I've performed feats under 'chemproof' conditions "that science cannot explain".

Among other things, Geller is reported to have moved a balance inside a vacuum jar; guessed correctly 12 times in a row which one of 10 identical metal cans contained an object; and predicted eight times out of eight which number would show up on a die shaken in a box. (The odds against this were a trillion to one.)

Accusations of fraud have been made against Uri Geller since he did a stage and nightclub act five years ago in Israel. He denies steadily that his PK performances were ever "contrived" by trickery, and a spokesman for the Israeli consulate in New York denied published reports that Geller left his native land in "disgrace".

On the question of trickery, consider a personal experience of mine with Geller that, for all my background in physical research and in detecting fraud, I found genuinely puzzling and convincing. Geller said he would try telepathically to pick up my thoughts. He asked me to make a simple drawing, of anything, that he would attempt to reproduce.

I went to a nearby room at the door, took a piece of my own paper and using the wall as a writing surface drew a simple picture of a tree. Placing it in an opaque envelope, and sealing the envelope, I put the drawing in my inside coat pocket. Then I rejoined Geller and several others.

Geller asked me to concentrate on my drawing and "I'll try to see it on this television screen." I gave inside my head". We were sitting four feet apart. Geller did not touch the envelope containing the drawing, which I held between my palms.

"I see something that looks like — I don't know what it looks like," he said. "It's sort of a mushroom cloud, the kind you see after an atomic explosion."

It was, as he'd said, like a mushroom cloud, and it was also an almost exact replica of my tree.

To top off the demonstration, Uri said he would try to use some metal with his mind. While I held a one-inch steel nail I had brought with me between my thumb and forefinger, Geller gently stroked it.

Suddenly, inexplicably, the nail bent.

Were those tricks?

Well, being not unwise to the ways of magic I was on guard against possible fraud.

There are several methods by which mentalists gain access to secret drawings (for example, by having the person make the drawing on a thick clipboard with a hidden carbon that provides a copy of everything written) but I did not detect Geller's employing any of them.

Bending the nail. Well, a magician would do this — or appear to do it — by making a fake switch. Substituting a already bent nail for the straight one. But I had deliberately kept firm hold of the nail at all times.

What Geller did on that occasion continues to impress me. However, on another occasion he performed two off-the-cuff feats that were not convincing at all.

We were having lunch and Geller was talking about his mysterious powers (which he usually does) when suddenly he lifted his steak knife behind his fork was grotesquely bent. His powers had done it, he announced. However, I couldn't help noting that Geller, who is a very strong young man, is left-handed and his left hand was concealed under the menu when the fork bent.

Later, while the two of us were in an elevator, he was telling me how objects sometimes "teleported" into his presence. Suddenly something clattered to the floor. It was a knife from the dining room where we had just eaten. The knife had been "sent" to show his powers. Geller said, but a less exotic theory that occurred to me is that it could have been up his sleeve.

If an individual were gifted with genuine ESP and PK would be, could be, ever cheat?

This conundrum has bedevilled modern parapsychological research since it began more than a century ago. Time and again, psychics who on one occasion succeeded to their astonished and usually genuine phenomena, on another occasion were caught in trickery. Human nature is complex, and who can know it?

Besides demonstrating PK, Uri Geller is now making very unusual claims that even some of his avid supporters find hard to accept. He says that he is in communication with super-intelligent computers from outer space, probably another galaxy, who are preparing him for a great mission.

These messianic claims have emerged since Geller was befriended two years ago by a New York research parapsychologist, and drug researcher, Dr. Andrija Puharich. Geller himself told me that until he was hypnotized by Dr. Puharich he knew nothing about the extraterrestrial computers and their mission for him.

Puharich tells amazing stories. He says he has seen Geller board a flying saucer, that he, Puharich, was present when Jesus Christ was born (a claim he has watched while Geller "dematerialized" and "rematerialized" physical objects. On one occasion, says Puharich, Geller teleported a camera 6,000 miles from Puharich's home in Ossining, N.Y., to Tel Aviv.

Uri himself, and his business manager Shipi Katz, told me that they split all the money Geller makes with Puharich (including, presumably, the $50,000 advance Puharich recently got from Doubleday for a book about Geller). Geller and Katz were incensed when they discovered for me some of Geller's latest marvels. One, they said, he teleported a television set into a hotel room.

"The damn thing came right through the ceiling," Geller said, looking distraught in the eye.

After a moment's somewhat strained silence, Yasha Katz added: "It was a color set, too . . ."

Gallery Purchases 17th Century Works

OTTAWA — The National Gallery of Canada, has purchased works by four artists — Nicolas Poussin (1594-1665), Pierre Puget (1620-1694), Pierre Patel the Elder (1605-1676), and Cornelis Poelenburch (1586-1667) — whose lives focused, at least in part, on seventeenth-century Rome.

The new acquisitions, now on view at the National Gallery of Canada, are: A painting of the Holy Family by St. Erasmus (c. 1635) by Poussin, a marble Bust of Louis XIV (1682) by Puget; a painting on copper of a Landscape with Rest on the Flight to Egypt (1662) by Patel — all French — and a painting on copper of Clorinda Saving Olinde and Sophronia from the Stake (c. 1635) by the Dutch painter, Poelenburgh.

Two of the works prove to have a particular significance for the history of European art in Quebec. The Quebec painter, Antoine Plamondon (1802-1895), painted another version of the Poussin which he believed to be the original and one of the few paintings by the French master that was then in Quebec since the early nineteenth century.

The other work by Poussin is a version of the artist's most important commission, a major painting of the Martyrdom of St. Erasmus for the Old St. Peter's in Rome. This work, which is now in the Vatican Museum, was commissioned in 1628 at a time when Canada was also receiving Quebec. The National Gallery's curator of early Canadian art, Jean Trudel, has shown that 218 years later another version of this painting could be seen in Canada.

On 21 July, 1838 the Quebec painter, Antoine Plamondon (1802-1895), who from 1827 to 1830 had studied in Paris, advertised in Le Fantasque of Quebec that "a very beautiful painting by N. Poussin, 9 ft. x 7 ft." could be seen in the studio of Parliament Buildings.

A week later the same newspaper reported on a visit to the studio of this considerable length on the forceful-ness of the painting by Poussin of the martyrdom of St. Erasmus. In 1845 Le Journal de Quebec recorded a fire in Plamondon's studio and damage to his "paintings by Poussin, the last known reference to Plamondon's version of his famous work by Poussin.

The National Gallery's version is smaller than Plamondon's — 5'3" by 3' 7", high (as against 9 ft.) — and is know to have come down through the Barberini family, the family of Pope Urban VIII who had commissioned the altar piece for St. Peter's. There is every reason to believe that the Gallery's painting was presented to Urban VIII's approval before the large altarpiece was begun and is, therefore, the first version.

By coincidence, Myron Laskin, the Gallery's research curator of European art, discovered Rome shortly after the purchase of the picture, a carved and gilded frame of the period, decorated with the bees that are the heraldic device of the commissioning pope's family, the Barberini. The painting within the frame now hangs on the second floor of the Gallery beside the Roman landscape by the same artist given by the late H. S. Southam of Ottawa.

Another major work by a French baroque artist — a white marble Bust of a King by Pierre Puget — also has been the subject of debate in the city of Quebec, which was being considered under the administration of the intendent Jean Talon and the spiritual guidance of Bishop Laval at the time — the 1680s — that this bust was actually carved. Puget himself was out of favor with King Louis XIV and his minister Colbert who had sent Talon and Laval to Quebec — and as a result spent most of the 1670s in Genoa. The Gallery's new acquisition came from the Palace of the Serra family there.

Curiously one of the few paintings by Puget, who was primarily a sculptor, a Young Devil with the Head of Goliath, found its way — probably collected in Paris during the Revolution by the emigre priest Abbe Louis-Joseph Desjardins — to the collection of the Seminaire du Quebec, which had had founded in 1663. This painting is now to be seen at Laval University.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Singer Nancy Sinatra and her husband, Hugh Lambert, are the parents of a baby girl.

It is their first child and the first grandchild for Frank Sinatra.

The baby, weighing eight pounds 14 ounces, was born Wednesday and named Angela Jennifer.

Lambert is a television director.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The Los Angeles County grand jury indicated Thursday two business managers of actress Patty Duke on charges of stealing $34,000 from her.

The six counts of grand theft each against Robert Irwin Brownstein, 33, and Joseph Stitch, 34, alleged they diverted the funds from her account to their own between October, 1970, and January, 1972.

The marble which the Gallery has acquired has also traditionally been called David — although clearly the mature king rather than the youth. Mr. Laskin believes however, that it is more probably Constantine or Attila, inspired by other of two baroque works of sculpture in St. Peter's in Rome, Bernini's Conversion of Constantine and Algardi's Meeting of Pope Leo I and Attila.

This vigorously carved and poignantly emotional piece of a King by Puget is the first baroque work of sculpture in marble to enter the National Gallery's collection.

Lewis Pledges Program

TIMMINS, Ont. (CP) — David Lewis, heralding that next week he will spell out in detail how a New Democratic Party government would deal with rising prices, said Friday his campaign for the July 8 election will remain focused on the cost-of-living issue "because that's what this election is all about."

Speaking at a dinner attended by about 250 NDP supporters in this Northern Ontario community the party leader said that "beginning next week, we are going to spell out, in great detail over and over, how an NDP government would deal with the rising cost of living."

He said he is confident his message about corporate profits sorting driving up prices will help the NDP win back a seat here it held from 1957 to 1968. Liberal Jean Roy took the riding in 1972.

The brief Timmins trip wound up a four-day swing through Ontario by the NDP leader after travels next to the Maritimes and Quebec, barren territory for Mr. Lewis whose party held no seats east of Ontario in the last Parliament. . .

In Timmins, Dominion Stores Ltd. was cited by Mr. Lewis as the prime example of large food chains gouging consumers, and the Liberal government's treasport policy was blamed for higher prices in certain parts of the country.

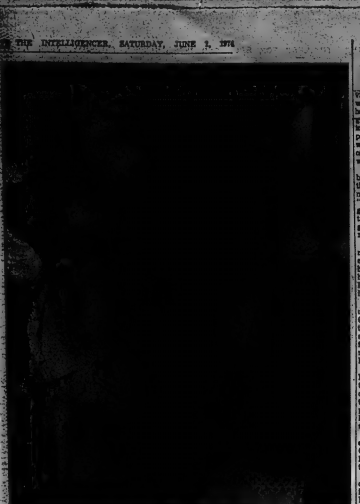
Mr. Lewis told a news conference Canadian Development Corp. (CDC) has no right to delay a decision to allow construction of a smelter here.

The government-established corporation now owns interests in Texasgulf Corp., which earlier had promised to build a smelter to process locally-mined minerals, Mr. Lewis said. Now, the project was being delayed because Texasgulf says it is uncertain about future federal tax-policies.

"The CDC was established to assist development and it has no right not to proceed with development in this area."

On food prices, Mr. Lewis attributed some of the blame for higher food costs in some regions to lack of transport policy, but the main problem still is concentration of corporate power in the retail-food industry, he said. Dominion, the country's big food chain, was a prime example of the problem.

"Tight control of businesses by large corporations, especially in the food industry, was the reason the NDP says such companies should have to justify their pricing policies to a national price-control board which might stop them from taking unfair advantage of consumers.



Before making his five-hour visit to Timmins, Mr. Lewis campaigned in Hamilton, exchanging pledges of support with striking rubber workers at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. plant where, he said, the United Rubber Workers' Union has run headlong into one of the problems caused by foreign control of manufacturing industries.

The Hamilton and Timmins visits were typical of much of Mr. Lewis's campaign so far in that he spoke mainly to audiences already sympathetic to his party, relying heavily on news conferences.Only in Ottawa and Kitchener this week did he spend much time mingling with crowds, an activity he said Friday will be more in evidence as the campaign progresses.

Cauvette Still at Helm

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader said Friday there is no question of a party leadership convention in the fall.

Mr. Caouette left hospital Friday after three days of diabetes-related tests. Doctors say Mr. Caouette is in good health, and he said he plans to resume his campaign this weekend.

Stanfield Hits NDP Territory

VANCOUVER, (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield continued his election trip through what have been New Democratic Party strongholds Friday taking slaps at NDP Leader David Lewis and NDP premiers.

He visited two constituencies long held by the NDP and slashed out at Mr. Lewis for his [illegible] Mr. Stanfield made about comments of NDP premiers.

Mr. Stanfield said in the Vancouver suburb of Surrey that Lewis had responded with "knee-jerk alacrity" to statements made by the Conservative leader that NDP premiers had supported federal wage and price controls of some kind.

He said despite what Mr. Lewis and some NDP premiers are saying, the record is there to show the premiers have spoken in favor of controls which Mr. Stanfield supports.

Mr. Stanfield read out newspaper stories which he said quoted these premiers making the statements.

Mr. Stanfield also bit out at the Liberal budget that was defeated in Parliament and caused this federal election, saying one section of it invaded the traditional rights of the provinces.

"The government attempted to move into the provincial sphere when it proposed in the budget that royalties taken from exploitation industries such as petroleum and mining industries would not be deductible as income from income tax, he said.

Mr. Stanfield also said in Surrey:

—Although a Conservative government would slice excessive government expenditures, it would not wield an axe through the public service.

—The lack of leadership during a period of bad inflation in Canada has caused the Canadians have no safe place to put their savings.

Speaking to an audience of about 1,200, one of the largest and most enthusiastic to date in his election campaign, Mr. Stanfield reiterated his favorite theme—that waste, extravagance and duplication in government must be slashed.

He said the size of the public service, 244,000 in 1969 and 300,000 now will have increased by more than the total size of the armed forces by the end of the year.

There are about 82,000 persons in the forces at present.

On top of that there was a "shadow army" of technocrats, consultants, advisors and bandwidth that was growing each year and would cost about $780 million this year.

He said he was not talking about "running around with an axe chopping people off as Mr. Lewis would have you believe."

"So if you fear that I'm determined to lop off heads in the public service, throw widows and pensioners into the snow and freeze mother's milk . . . It's not quite true."

Trudeau Winds Up Whistle-stopping

ABOARD TRUDEAU TRAIN (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Friday completed a four-day whistle-stopping tour from Sydney, N.S., still reminding voters of the good things accomplished by his government and asking for more time to finish the job.

During five stops Friday between Ste. Foy, Que., and Montreal the prime minister continued to tout the average man in the people who filled railway platforms to hear him.

The minority federal government didn't ask for the election, it was Liberal-Conservative-that conceived, and increased, family allowances, old age pensions, and it was a Liberal government that made Canadian a reality through all the country.

"We need your support because we haven't finished the job," he said from the rear platform of the special train.

The eight-car train, costing people $90,000 for the four-day trip, stopped at St. Thecle, St. Tite, Grand'Mere, Shawinigan and Joliette as it travelled along the North Shore of the St. Lawrence to Montreal. Usually there were several hundred people on the platform, ready to listen to Mr. Trudeau talk through the amplifiers at the rear of the train.

A special Trudeau Express song, produced by the Quebec campaign committee, blared out the message to "vote solid, vote Liberal, vote Trudeau." Local candidates were always on hand, including such cabinet ministers as Transport Minister Jean Marchand, Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien and Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier.

At St. Tite, Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau left the train and boarded a rubber-tired replica of an old steam engine for a trip through the town of 3,500, the fact that the crackling broke down short of its destination didn't dampen their spirits as they walked the remaining six blocks to city hall where Mr. Trudeau told some 500 people about the accomplishments of his government and the history of the country.

He received his biggest cheer when he paid tribute to Mr. Pelletier, "who pushed for bilingualism from coast to coast."

But the biggest cheers of the day went to Mrs. Trudeau, for her gutsy performance before the microphones, thanking the people of the town for several gifts, including a pair of snowshoes for son Justin. She spoke entirely in French, several times appealing for help, unsuccessfully, from her smiling and applauding husband.

Emergency Debate Ends Holiday

Troops Remain in Ulster

LONDON (AP) — The government today rejected demands to pull British troops out of Northern Ireland and declared that only the army is preventing anarchy in Ulster.

"The fact is that without the British army, the forces of law and order could not cope with the immediate future," Merlyn Rees, Britain's administrator for Northern Ireland, told the House of Commons.

Rees was reporting to MPs recalled early from a spring vacation for an emergency debate on Northern Ireland.

Demands for withdrawing British troops have increased since a 15-day general strike forced the resignation of the coalition executive of moderate Protestants and Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland last week.

Rees said the British government is "firmly against the view that we should pull out quickly" from Northern Ireland and that the two communities fight it out."

Although there was considerable belief in British political circles before the strike that the moderates in Northern Ireland would eventually win out, many of Wilson's Labor MPs, some Conservatives and a number of Liberals now are reported in favor of setting a date for Britain to get out of Northern Ireland.

Meanwhile, the killing continued in Northern Ireland: A carload of youths drove up to a shop in Rostrevor, County Down, and machine-gunned a former IRA leader when he answered the door. His mother was standing behind him and was wounded in the face.

His death raised the official fatality toll to 1025 since August, 1969.

Inquiry Called Into Explosion

FLIXBOROUGH, England (AP) — The British government today ordered a major inquiry into the Nypro chemical plant explosion that official reports said killed 29 persons and injured 105.

All the reported dead were workers at the factory in rural eastern England, but only eight bodies had been recovered by Sunday night because fires still raged over more than 20 acres of the plant site.

Damage from the explosion Saturday exceeded $140 million. In addition to the chemical plant, about 100 homes in nearby villages were ruined, their roof's blown off, their windows and walls shattered.

Announcing the government inquiry, Environment Undersecretary Gordon Oakes said: "Surely dangerous processes and homes must be kept well apart."

Leading newspapers speculated that government controls over chemical plants are inadequate, and one paper said the government's chief inspector of factories, Brian Harvey, told it scientists are creating technologies they do not understand fly.

The jobs of 30,000 nylon workers in northeast England were jeopardized by the Flixborough explosion and fire. Nypro was Britain's only factory producing caprolactum, used to strengthen nylon for many industrial uses. The plant was owned by British and Dutch interests.

The cause of the blast is still not known, but authorities said they believe it to be accidental. The Dutch manager of the works, Huub Beckers, suggested that a spark from static electricity may have touched off escaping cyclo-hexane gas, a gasoline-type liquid used in the manufacturing process.

Picnic Bus Trip Ends in Tragedy

BAIE ST. PAUL, Que. (CP) — A picnic excursion ended in tragedy Saturday when a bus carrying elderly persons from La Tuque plunged 60 feet into a ravine, killing 13 persons and injuring 31.

Reports that a 14th passenger had died from injuries could not be confirmed by Quebec Provincial Police or hospital authorities late Sunday.

The accident occurred when the brakes of the bus failed on a steep hill, a QPP spokesman said Sunday.

The injured were rushed in 15 ambulances to Baie St. Paul here and in Quebec City, 50 miles southeast.

Fourteen were reported in good condition Sunday. No information on the condition of the other injured passengers was available, although hospital authorities said none is in critical condition.

Andre McNicoll, coroner for Baie St. Paul, pronounced the victims dead at the scene of the accident, which he described later as "one of the worst I have ever witnessed."

Mr. McNicoll said he plans to recommend to the Quebec transport department that "large and distinctive warning signs" be posted along the road where the accident occurred.

"It's probably one of the worst hills in the province," he said.

Lewis Platform:

Price Controls Pledged

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis says he would use emergency provisions of the British North America Act to deal with inflation if he were to win the federal election July 8.

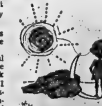
Speaking on the CTV program Question Period, taped for broadcast Sunday, Mr. Lewis said he would use emergency provisions in the act to implement "selective price controls because I would agree that there is a national emergency in that sense."

Asked what his first move as prime minister would be, he said:

"I would set up a national prices control board with the necessary powers to roll back unjustified price increases. I would impose a two-price system on certain basic commodities in the country, joined with export controls to make sure that the commodities don't leave the country more than they should."

Then I would present a budget that gave some compensation to Canadians to deal with that part of the rise in cost of living which cannot be controlled. That means increased pensions and so on."

He said that rather than curtailing government spending he would make the corporations "pay their share of the tax and there would be enough to do some of the things that we propose."



"Obviously you can't do them all at the same time. You have to stagger them over several years.

"But if you had the billion dollars, for example, or more than the tax concessions of last year gave to life corporations you could add almost $50 a month to the old age pension."

Referring to the country's exports, he said certain pressures on prices cannot be controlled domestically and so price and wage freezes "aren't going to work."

"Therefore you've got to find some way to make it possible for the fixed income people, for the lower-wage people, and indeed for families generally, to meet that part of the rise in the cost of living which can't be controlled and the only way to do that is to give tax relief and to increase the payments to pensioners and the like, and the economy can stand it."

One in Four Underfed

ROME (AP) — As many as 800 million people, almost a quarter of the world's population, may be suffering from malnutrition, a United Nations report says.

The report, background material for a world food conference here in November, urged worldwide effort to bring about a better balance between growing world demand and supply.

Question Topples Davis

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis tripped over a road rack Saturday as he tried to free himself from reporters who had cornered him in a hallway of the Sheraton Brock Hotel here.

Reporters were eager to have the premier comment on police action during a drug raid at the Landmark Hotel in Fort Erie recently. Several women were reported to have been ordered to strip for search.

"Standards in such a case aren't easy to define," the premier said. "Drugs are a serious matter in terms of criminal activity."

Premier Davis ignored a reporter's question on how would he feel if he and his wife were subjected to the alleged police search tactics. He turned away from the reporter and tripped over the mat rack.

Peacekeepers Easy Prey

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — In terms of men and arms, the United Nations force to be stationed along the Golan Heights will be no match for the Israeli or Syrian armies it will be stationed between.

The force could be easily overrun," said a UN official. The chief weapons of the 1,250-man UN Disengagement Observer Force (UNDOF) will be is physical presence along the 50-mile front and its ability to bring it immediate world attention any violation of the new ceasefire.

Those have been the weapons with which another UN force has kept peace in Cyprus for nine years and with which a UN force kept the Israeli and Egyptian armies apart from 1956 o 1967.

The Israeli - Syrian disengagement agreement stipulates that "UNDOF will be mobile and provided with personal weapons of a defensive character and shall use such weapons only in self defence." UN officials said the new force, like the UN Emergency Force on the Israeli-Egyptian front in the Sinai Desert, will get no weapons heavier than sub-machine guns.

Incoming Premier Searches for Peace

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Premier-designate Yitzhak Rabin presented his new cabinet to the Israeli parliament today and said Israel's next objective in its search for peace will be negotiation of a peace treaty with Egypt.

The 52-year-old former chief of staff said interim steps, possibly including further Israeli withdrawals in the Sinai Desert, are possible.

Rabin was expected to win confirmation of his government from the Knesset Israels' parliament, even though his coalition has a majority of only two. His coalition is made up of the Labor party which has governed Israel ever since it became a nation, the independent Liberal party and a citizens-rights group.

Rabin said he will continue Premier Golda Meir's policy toward the Middle East peace negotiations in Geneva, including her refusal to bargain there with the Palestine guerrilla organizations.

"Israel rejects the invitation of representatives from the sabotage and terror organizations as participants or observers," he said. "The government will not conduct negotiations with terrorist organizations whose declared goal is the destruction of the state of Israel."

The final meeting of Premier Golda Meir's cabinet Sunday marked the departure from the government of four long-dominant members of the Israeli Establishment: Mrs. Meir, Defence Minister Moshe Dayan, Foreign Minister Abba Eban and Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir.

Many Israelis heralded their exit as the end of an era and the coming to power of a new, native-born generation. But some maintain that their experience will be badly missed.

Sea Cadets from the RCSCC Quinte in Belleville put their best foot forward Sunday afternoon when they turned out for their 46th annual inspection. Under the experienced eye of Commander G.J. Manson, the inspecting officer, the Quinte cadets trooped their color and conducted tours of their headquarters on South Front Street. The annual inspection was followed by a sunset ceremony and band concert. During the inspection a number of cadets were honored for their past achievements and nine cadets were awarded silver and bronze badges under the Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme. Bayview Teacher Killed

A young Belleville teacher, Robert Donald Huffman, 24, died Saturday following a motorcycle accident near Hontsville.

Mr. Huffman had been a teacher at Bayview Public School for the last four years, specializing in physical education and library. He home was in Peterborough.

The motorcycle he was driving went out of control on an S curve and Mr. Huffman died an hour later in hospital.

Mr. Huffman's principal, H. G. Muir, said this morning he was a fine teacher, with a great future ahead of him, and was highly regarded by pupils and staff.

Youth Thrown

ELDORADO — A 16-year-old youth, Samuel Wilmer of RR 1, Eldorado, is in Belleville General Hospital with chest and knee injuries received when he was thrown from a tractor Saturday while harrowing.

The youth was working on a farm operated by Lloyd Bateman of Eldorado, one mile north of Madoc Township School on Highway 62, when his tractor hit a rock. He was thrown clear of the tractor and the machine came to rest without any damage.

Large Crowd for Auction

A large crowd gathered outside the rear of the Belleville police station on Campbell Street Saturday morning, and even though they might have resembled a lynch mob, they were there simply to place their bids on undaimed articles that were up for sale during the annual police department's lost and found auction sale. A wide variety of articles, from watches to wallets and rugs to bicycles, went under the auctioneer's gavel.

Loose Dogs a Problem

PICTON — Dogs running at large continue to pose a major problem in Prince Edward County.

James Ives of the Ministry of Natural Resources states that the problem is especially acute at this time of the year when does are heavy with fawn. Because deer frequently take to the water when being pursued by dogs, the problem becomes even greater in the winter months. With this absence of retreat and depth of snow which hampers the deer considerably in their escape, the animals stand little chance against a pack of dogs, according to Mr. Ives. 1973 was a particularly bad year when several were found pulled down by dogs.

The Ministry is authorized to shoot any dog observed chasing deer. "The dogs must be kept under control at all times to alleviate this problem," stressed Mr. Ives.

"We often see packs of dogs running at large from the air," comments one of the flying instructors at the Prince Edward Flying Club.

The Picton Detachment of the OPP also receives reports of dogs running at large from farmers who express concern over their cattle out on pasture.

"Anyone observing dogs harrassing livestock is not only permitted, but urged to shoot them on sight", emphasized an OPP spokesman, expressing his displeasure with this harrowing problem. "Dog owners must learn to keep their animals under control at all times."

Citizens Band Radios Found Useful on Farm

BIG ISLAND — "This is XM4891 calling XM4891...Can you read me 211?"

"10-4, this is XM 4891: I read you loud and clear".

According to Jake and Everett Bulton, of Bulton Brothers Farms, Big Island, the word "ten" is very seldom used among followers of the Citizens Band Radio. If message is received, one merely says, 10-4.

Such is the language among users of the increasingly popular citizens band radio. To a newcomer in the worlds of the citizens band fraternity, it is a conglomeration of bewildering code numbers. If one is leaving the air he may say 10-7, or if inquiring as to a person's location may ask what is his 10-20. Even the operator of a radio is identified by a number.

Jake and Everett Bulton, XM4878, avid CB'ers for the past two years, became interested in citizen band radios through the purchase of an inexpensive walkie-talkie. With a limited range of only one-quarter mile, they very quickly stepped up to the five-mile range larger units and it was through the use of these walkie-talkies that they learned more about the two-radio system. Purchasing a "base station," with a range of 30 miles, the two Big Island farmers installed separate mobile units in their cars.

"Anything over one watt output has to be licensed," explains Jake Bulton. Licenses for the larger units are 10 dollars for three years and are procured through the Dept. of Communications, in Kingston. The applicant is then designated a licence number. In the case of the Bultons, XM48 is their district, roughly Hastings, Prince Edward, Frontenac and Northumberland Counties, the remaining digits, their personal identification number.

The Bultons explain that the CBs are used for fishing, hunting, farming and marine use — "with a purpose" — and are not intended for everyday pleasure talking. Equipped with 23 channels, calls are made on Channel 11 and when the intended party is reached, they then determine on which channel they will talk.

Channel nine is used for emergencies only; such as fires, power failures, accidents, etc. Heading up the emergency department in the district is Walter Edward, Big Island, better known as XM48101. Mr. Edwards has the final say as to where the call for assistance should be placed.

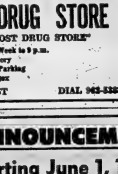
"We find the CB especially useful on the farm," comments Everett Bulton, who has used his units on many occasions to radio from the fields to the base station at the farm house for tools, or supplies.

"One time my wife was on her way to Whitby and experienced car trouble. She radioed back home for help on her mobile unit," recalls Everett Bulton, emphasizing the usefulness of the CB.

According to the Bultons, the price of a base station is about $250, mobile units approximately $200 and the cost of the base station's central antennae is about $45.

Downtown Building Purchased

Jack Ireland, proprietor of Ireland's Furniture and Appliances Ltd., has bought the building in which he operates his business.



"The purchase shows the Ireland family's confidence in downtown Belleville," said Mr. Ireland, in announcing the purchase.

The premises, at 280-282 Front St., has been owned for about 15 years by an Ottawa firm, Field Realty. Mr. Ireland will officially take possession June 30.

Jack Ireland has operated at appliance business on Front St. for 23 years. He said purchase of the building was as much for his daughter, son and grandson as for himself.

A "paint-up, clean-up job" will begin soon "after a few sales to clean the merchandise out so we can get the painters and carpenters in," said Mr. Ireland.

411 BRIDGE ST. EAST — DIAL 962-5388

Trenton Bridge Under Repair

TRENTON — Work is expected to begin Monday on the resurfacing of Trenton's six-year-old MacDonald Bridge.

According to a spokesman for the town's engineering department, the contract involves repairs to the bridge's cement deck, the laying of a protective covering and the installation of railing.

The province picks up 75 per cent of the $80,000 tab, with the cost to Trenton taxpayers marked at around $20,000, said Arie Hoorweg, commissioner of works.

During construction, only one-lane traffic will be allowed on the bridge while the second lane is repaired. Flagmen will be on duty. Between the hours of 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. the bridge will be closed completely, said Mr. Hoorweg. He said the complete night closing was a safety measure for motorists who might otherwise attempt to navigate through the construction without the benefit of flagmen. No work is being done on the bridge at night. Traffic bound for the downtown will have to use Dundas Street.

The job is expected to be complete by June 25.

City Grants

Doubtless there has been agonizing over the extent and direction of City Council's recently-announced grants.

For the Chamber of Commerce ($4,000), the United Community Services ($12,000) and the YMCA ($3,500) — all three the subject of bitter criticism at one time or another from some quarters — the figures are the same as before.

In other words no allowance has been made for inflationary pressures. At the same time, keeping the grants at the same level as before reflects a safe decision that acknowledges public criticism while still saving face all round.

A boost for culture is reflected by the $12,000 grant to the Hastings County Museum. This is up from $8,750 last year and while the Museum has been a fast-rising star in the realm of local history and things of the kind, it may strike a sour note among the pensioners. A request for $35,000 for property tax relief for pensioners 65 years and over was rejected.

Curious too is the $300 lopped off the Central Volunteer Bureau's grant which is just $1,200 this time around. Some of the valuable services performed by this agency were detailed by its executive director, Mrs. Ruth Burrows, in a letter published in Saturday's Intelligencer. A round $300 may not be much these days, but it is that much less from the city for an agency whose volunteers put in many hours of unpaid work.

Interest in Science

That Science Fairs are alive and well and functioning across Canada remains very much in evidence.

The three winners from the event sponsored by Belleville Rotary Club have described their experiences of the Canada-wide event to Calgary, and the next from Hastings county science co-ordinator Nelson Eanting of Trenton Collegiate, who travelled with them, is that efforts are being made to widen the scope of scientific interest in the schools.

He told Belleville Rotarians recently that he would like to get students in Grade 6 and below interested in Science Fairs. At present participation is limited to students in Grades 7 to 13.

This is an estimable idea. The awakening of student interest, whatever the subject, is something that cannot be undertaken too early.

Woman Announcer

Jan Tennant is the attractive young woman who was seen reading The National a couple of times recently on television.

A couple of times at all, that is. An article on Ms. Tennant in The Montreal Gazette's TV Times shows that she has been active in a variety of jobs with the CBC, including local announcing in the Toronto coverage area and as co-host of The Fit Stop, an afternoon exercise program.

Born in Toronto and graduating as a phys-ed teacher, she spent two years in Switzerland before returning to Canada where she was variously a parking-meter model, high school teacher, and housewife. She joined the CBC as a secretary in 1966 and then went on to production of public affairs programs.

Recently she was the narrator in a program of local interest. Terry Chambers, a daughter of Mrs. Kenny Chambers of Belleville and a graduate of Trent University, was a member of the staff of a Brownsville, Ont. home for the emotionally disturbed. It was the subject of a CBC feature called Anybody's Child seen about a year ago and repeated again in recent weeks. Miss Chambers, once a member of the staff of this newspaper, was seen in the film helping with some of the younger children at Brownsdale. She is now working as a supply teacher in Midland.

Ms. Tennant meanwhile seems to have dropped out of sight, so far as The National is concerned. Messrs. Robertson and Pinstad have resigned their male stranglehold on the 11 o'clock spot. The Gazette article does point out however that two other women have been hired for announcing jobs, so maybe things are changing, if slowly.

New Leadership in Paris

Franco-German Relations Expected To Show Improvement

By CY FOX
The Canadian Press

After a superb publicized display of presidential informality, France has embarked on what is officially billed as a new political era, with a vigorous 48-year-old aristocrat at the helm.

The unveiling of Giscard d'Estaing as president of the Fifth Republic angrily baffled the new president's promise that his inaugural list of ministers would contain changes and surprises.

At the same time, it confirmed that Giscard d'Estaing will place major emphasis on restoring close Franco-German relations which were heavily strained in the final months of the regime presided over by the late French president, Georges Pompidou and the now-resigned chancellor Willy Brandt.

A number of political bellcats in the prevailing warmth which prevails between the two former finance ministers which mean developments have brought to the pinnacle of power — Giscard and West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

Now Giscard and Schmidt are to meet in Paris in their first major excursion into foreign affairs since they assumed their leadership roles.

Schmidt has preceded the meeting with expressions of West German indulgence toward European Common Market partners which feel forced to employ temporary protection in economic measures, even though these might damage the much stronger German republic.

This line contrasts sharply with earlier statements by Schmidt that West Germany was no longer willing to continue footing major economic sacrifices in the interests of its market partners.

Land Speculation Tax Is Panned

By DON OREARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thompson News Services

TORONTO — Some Conservatives have been pretty mad at the opposition, and particularly the Liberals, for the way they have been mauling the government's land speculation tax act

Not so much the fact that they are attacking the bill, but the way they are doing it and the long delay there has been in getting it through the house.

The Liberal and NDP critics have been debating it pretty well every point on the bill. What's more they have been calling for vote after vote, a time-consuming process, and the consequence is that it could be a record eight weeks or more in the passage through all readings.

And the dissident PCs are saying that the opposition is irresponsible and accusing it of filibuster.

Most people with knowledge of the situation would probably say let the PC's have it. There been and no sympathy for them. For this legislation is so bad, so poorly thought out, that it probably deserves anything in the way of attack that it gets.

It is regarded by some people, and some knowledgeable ones, as probably the most atrocious bill ever to come from the house.

And it is not only unwise, it is also unfair.

The Ontario Bar Society, for example, called a special meeting on the bill, to try to have officials explain it.

Some 1,500 lawyers from across the province showed up (and were reported to have left as bewildered as when they came).

Then every day as the debate proceeded more and more shortcomings were uncovered.

As just one sample point, the opposition noted that under the act if a widow has been married and lived in a home for years and to go to a nursing home or a home for the elderly, the house would no longer be her "principal residence." And if she had to sell it, the speculation tax would have to be paid on it.

The filibuster is an extreme and seldom-used mechanic in our system.

Where and when it is used the main purpose is to draw public attention to some government action which the users think is extraordinarily bad.

If in this case we really have been seeing a filibuster, then one can say that at least it would seem to be one of good and worthwhile purpose.

Women in Put-Down Roles

Brockville Recorder and Times

As if they didn't have enough to answer for already, male chauvinists are responsible for something else — the fact that female females have to play the role of ugly ducklings in order to get laughs.

So claims one woman who has made a study of the situation.

The leading commodities "base much of their material on the premise that they are unattractive women, although in fact none of them is ugly," writes author Ann Nietzke in Human Behavior magazine.

By contrast, male comics don't have to be concerned about their appearances, she says. They can go on and on about how ugly their wives or girlfriends are, just as if they themselves were handsome prizes, but the comediennes have to make themselves as unattractive as possible to talk about themselves as if they were the homeliest creatures in the world who can't get or hold a man.

When and if "women become liberated from matrimony as a practical goal of their existence," says Ms. Nietzke, much of the material of the comediennes will become irrelevant.

This is probably true, and the funny girls had best make hay while the male chauvinist sun shines. Just about everyone today agrees that the goal of the feminist liberation movement should be to free women from profound stereotypes and give them the right to choose to marry or not marry, to pursue a career or not pursue a career, to have children or not have children — and not have to apologize to it.

Being fine the critics of male domination tend to overlook, however, is the fact that men are much more biologically locked into their traditional roles than women.

Sure, they can choose to be book-keepers or business executives and maybe, in the future, they can even choose to be "housebands." But until such time as medical science enables males to bear children, there will never be such a thing as true equality of choice between the sexes.

Until that day arrives, laughing at "ugly" comediennes may be one of the few remaining prerogatives men will have.

Franco-German Relations Expected To Show Improvement

Monaco A Going Concern

Prince Rainier Diversifies Economy

By JOHN D. HARRION
Foreign Affairs Analyst-
Thomson News Service

Tiny Monaco, called a profitable casino, a joke, the fairy castle home of the former actress Grace Kelly, and for many years now wife of Prince Rainier III, is ready at small and going business concern.

Other than Gen. Franco in Spain and Tsarist-era-governed Premier Castaeno up to a few weeks ago, Prince Rainier is the only feudal monarch in Western Europe. As "Ruling Prince" he rules in Monaco according to historic and medieval divine right.

He does have a National Council whose advice he can accept or reject as well and exercises influence in his palace from a resident minister of state appointed from the ranks of the French civil service.

Prince Rainier, last seen outside of Monaco with his wife the Princess Grace at Princess Anne's wedding in Westminster Abbey, is currently busy diversifying the economy of his 500 acre-large domain.

This is being done through the arrival of various light industries, some of which are go-ing to be placed in an additional 53 acres won from the Mediterranean since 1967.

In fact about 80 per cent of Monaco's budget or revenue of the Monegasques now comes from growing industrialization and the postage-stamp country's numerous stamp issues, fees and less from the famous casino.

It's called the Societe des Bains de Mer which was once owned by super-millionaire Aristotle Onassis. Last year it contributed 24 million or 2.8 per cent to the Monaco budget, down from the 4.5 per cent it was supposed to contribute under the principality's laws.

In 1973 Monaco's total revenues came to about $70 million from which the Prince and his family received a "donation" or British-style civil list of about $675,000.

The prince and princess, the once famous Grace Kelly, herself born to wealth in a Philadelphia executive's family, are getting on new, it isn't only yesterday since they were married.

Their three children range from Caroline at 17 to Stephanie at 9 and Albert, 16.

Prince Rainier, the 31st hereditary ruler of Monaco, now is 51 and recalls his days in the French resistance during the Second World War from which he earned the French Croix de Guerre.

Tourists and others expecting to see him or Princess Grace while gambling at the casinos will be disappointed. There is a law among others in this Principality-state that no Silbegaygaye, including members of the ruling family, can enter the casino, except those who work there.

The English-educated prince, who has British journalistic ways operates more like the chairman of the board of a large company than hereditary ruler, most unlikely good times in Monaco which makes sense since this large European state surrounds and dominates his own.

It hasn't always been a happy relationship but some of the industrial interests in his principality are owned by the Shah of Iran's reason enough for an influence from Paris.

In any case, for most of us the Raiders really have it made ruling a lovely small and many uncomplicated story-book country by the sea,

Probe Of Hospital Storm Sewers

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

As a citizen and a member of PACE People Against Contamination) I am concerned. I was very interested in the report concerning the storm sewer drains at the Belleville General Hospital. Issued by R. D. Hall, Chief Engineer, Sanitary Engineering Branch, Ministry of the Environment, Kingston, Ontario. It would appear that the Belleville General Hospital is not out of the Storm Sewer controversy smelt as yet.

I would like to congratulate the representatives of the Ministry of the Environment, the Belleville General Hospital, for their clear cut evidence of the water in the ditch at this time. It seems almost like a miracle that the Hospital could be removing the dirty, filthy contaminated sewage they have been used to seeing in the past years.

There are certain aspects of this matter that the Ministry and hospital authorities that do not seem to coincide with one another.

April 1972 the hospital advised the Ministry that a grease trap overflow was connected to the West Moira Sewer network. Corrective action was taken to eliminate any future possible pollution to the Environment. Ray Krock, assistant executive director, of the Hospital, was reported as saying in article in The Intelligencer dated 15 March 1974 during the weekly test on hospital storm sewers since September 1973. That on only one occasion, test indicated traces of detergent, coliforms from one storm sewer. This was related to an overflowing septic tank.

What puzzles me is why Mr. Hall's report did not mention this in his report As he attributes the high bacterial densities to dead-fall. Before the leaves were taken. Strange that the Ministry should attribute two different reasons for the high bacterial counts.

Mr. Krock seems to be very critical of Clarence Young's sampling techniques, based on staffs past observation. Who was the person who was doing the sampling? Was it the same person who the Ministry who was Clarence Young not. Was there proper way to do the sampling? It seems that the purpose of the sampling was to downgrade a concerned citizen, and put themselves in superior position to the Citizen.

The report indicates that dye testing of storm sewer connections and weekly-bacteriological sampling program was carried out by Hospital staff. Is it the policy of the ministry, to allow the party suspected of polluting to check on themselves.

The persistent efforts of Clarence Young, who at considerable personal hardship, with long distance telephone calls and other related expenses, has finally moved the Ministry of the Environment and the Belleville General Hospital to clean up this deplorable mess.

The controversy that has been raging for over five years, would never have happened, if proper action by the Ministry of the Environment, would act decisively when receiving facts and evidence to establish them.

KENNETH B. PEOPLES.

Editor's Note: The Intelligencer reported 27 May 1974: A prolonged study shows no sanitary sewer link between Belleville General Hospital is draining into the Bay of Quinte through the city's municipal property, says environmental authorities. Results of testing show no reason or justification to suspect sanitary waste is polluting the Creek, says a spokesman for the Environment report.

However, the report notes backflow from hospital laundry equipment drains into the sewer. A chlorinator is in place in piping to siphon the chlorinated water to sanitary sewer.

Is It Really Blackmail Or Not?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In several instances lately it has been mentioned that the suggested labor boycott against the United Appeal in Belleville should be remembered that, in the main, it is labor who bears the real brunt of the proportion of the money to supply the United Appeal coming from the labor purse. Be it organized labor or not, it is still the labor purse.

It has been asked that proper statements of expenditures be supplied for public knowledge before various agencies make requests for grants. From the reports we have, this information is not always readily available to the public simply because of the complicated bookkeeping methods which allow for a penny by penny report. Why? Any government given to me is that such a method would be too complicated for this not an accountant but I have to accept this as correct and not to question it. It shouldn't take too much extra work to spell out the use of $500, rather than throw it into a miscellaneous account.

All members of the public do not seem to be interested in the disposal of their tax money. Some are, however, and for these some means should be found that such information should be available to them upon requisi without argument. To go a step further, detailed statements should be published so that Joe Public gets that information whether he wants it or not. By this, all heels would be scraped clean.

Labor pays a fair portion of the shot therefore labor has the right to be kept informed. To suggest a method to ensure that things be done right should be blackmail, cannot be termed blackmail.

The Marxist leaders are interested, therefore, they are only doing a duty for which they were elected. To accuse labor of blackmail is childish. After all, labor is the minister, to allow the party suspected of polluting to check on themselves.

The persistent efforts of Clarence Young, who at considerable personal hardship, with long distance telephone calls and other related expenses, has finally moved the Ministry of the Environment and the Belleville General Hospital to clean up this deplorable mess.

The controversy that has been raging for over five years, would never have happened, if proper action by the Ministry of the Environment, would act decisively when receiving facts and evidence to establish them.

Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy during the American Civil War, was born in Kentucky on this day in 1808. A kindly character, Davis had graduated from the United States Military Academy and served in the Black Hawk Indian war of 1833 and the Mexican War of 1847. He was elected to the Senate in 1857, and passionately defended the rights of slave-holding states to secede from the Union after Abraham Lincoln's election to the presidency. When the Civil War came, Davis was elected president of the Confederate states, although he had hoped to lead troops in battle. After the war he was acquitted of treason and lived in Canada until the amnesty of 1868.

Douglas Alkenbrack Starts Campaign with Kiss from Granddaughter, Katherine Anne Gremmell, 6.

Alkenbrack Acclaimed

CLOYNE — Douglas Alkenbrack is into his sixth election campaign, still an undaunted critic of federal government bilingual policies.

He cautioned the nominating convention that again acclaimed him Progressive Conservative candidate for Frontenac Lennox and Addington Saturday that the current election will determine if Canada's English and French races will live in future harmony or hostility.

His warning on language issues were echoed by Tom Cossitt — Conservative MP for Leeds in the last parliament — who also charged the government with apparently condoning Quebec's new French language bill.

Mr. Alkenbrack, 62, has been local MP 10 years. His acclamation — the constituency's last political party nomination of the current election — came after three other nominees withdrew. The convention was held at the North Addington Education Centre in this community. It's 30 miles northeast of Tweed and a centre point in the sprawling riding that includes 32 municipalities from the Bay of Quinte to the Ottawa Valley.

A consistent critic of federal bilingual policies, the veteran MP refused to bypass the issue in his acceptance speech.

In recent years he has been "vilified" as a racist and bigot over his stands on bilingualism, yet he had been proved right, he told the convention.

For years, he said, he had been warning that Quebec planned to legislate against the English language while the federal government has been spending hundreds of millions to make Canada bilingual.

"It is not consistent. It is not democratic and it will not end in nothing but failure," he said.

Bilingualism not only had been expensive but "an exercise in racism on the part of the Liberal government."

Liberal policy was to maintain power by dividing the country, he said.

"It has been demonstrated over and over again that the real purpose of the bilingualism program has been to promote the interests of one race in Ottawa and in other parts of Canada, and especially in the public service," he said.

"It has been proved at the same time that the government has placed obstacles in the way of unilingual English Canadians in our federal service."

He said he would "not accept any law that discriminates against any minority in our country, whether that minority be English, French, Ukrainian or any other body."

He charged the Prime Minister was attempting to make Canada into an image never intended by its founders. The election is a contest between Trudeau and conservative philosophies. Its outcome will determine if Canada continues as a great democracy or degenerates into something like a second-rate republic.

"This election will determine whether Canada will continue as one nation representing the great founding races, or whether we will split into two nations that will live side by side in an atmosphere of distrust — and possibly even hostility. God forbid that would happen."

Mr. Cossitt said the Quebec bill would deny immigrants the right to educate their children in English and is against the very foundations of the democratic system.

He said any bill that makes it illegal to erect billboard signs in English or any other language is "an infringement on basic civil rights."

He charged the federal government with condoning Quebec policy. When questioned on the bill — which would make French that province's official language — Prime Minister Trudeau had merely suggested his Quebec government had chosen an unfortunate title. He said it should have been called a working language bill instead of an official language bill, said Mr. Cossitt.

"In short, he wants to make oatcake oil taste like ice cream by calling it another name. But arsenic is still arsenic no matter what you call it," he said.

"If the unity of Canada is someday destroyed I suggest the blame will rest squarely at the feet of those in the present government who've fraudulently held themselves out as the only ones who can bring unity to this country," he said.

Declaring the nomination in favor of Mr. Alkenbrack were Reeve Bruce Cathill of Richmond as chairman and wardens of Lennox-Addington County, Phil Bennet, Odessa and William Vankoughnet.

Inflation Said Government Fault

CLOYNE — Gigantic government expenditures have fueled Canada's inflation, a Conservative convention was told here Saturday.

And the Trudeau government has merely "fiddled while Canada burned," charged Tom Cossitt, MP for Leeds in the last parliament.

This year the government is increasing its expenditures by 26 per cent, he told the convention here that acclaimed local MP Douglas Alkenbrack as Conservative candidate in Frontenac Lennox and Addington.

The end result could double the price of consumer purchases in several years.

The Liberals have been excusing inaction by "peddling the myth" that the cost spiral is an international phenomenon.

"Such an excuse is nothing short of unadulterated nonsense," said Mr. Cossitt.

International factors contribute to rising prices. But economists calculate up to 60 per cent of inflation causes are domestic and could be dealt with by government.

Among Conservative policies: A prices review authority empowered to impose stiff penalties for price gouging; short-term prices-and-incomes freeze to break inflation psychology and produce new economic programs; removal of the 11 per cent federal tax on building materials, lower mortgage rates and more funds for housing.

At the present inflation rate, predicted Mr. Cossitt, a house that cost $21,000 when the Trudeau government took over — an now is priced at $31,0 — will cost $65,000

'Snoopy' Reads Kids' Mail

Dear Ann Landers: I hope I'm not too late to get in on the fracas about the mother who read her daughter's diary.

Girls don't need all that privacy and neither do boys. I read anything I find lying around—letters, diaries, notes in my kids' pockets. It makes no difference, I am deeply interested in what my children are doing and the best way to find out is to keep my eyes open for any and all clues.

My own daughter (now grown and the mother of all) told me that a friend of hers would never have known that cross was selling clothes if she hadn't rad his mail. Luckily she was able to get him to stop before he was arrested.

Five women in this office have said that nothing we wouldn't do to protect our children.—Snoopy Mom

Dear Mom: Sorry, but if snooping is the only way a mother can learn what her children are doing, everything is tainted with the relationship.

One of th reasons the United States leads the world in the highest level,' has lost its credibility, is because several young folks thought as you do. They broke into an office like a bunch of common thieves in search of information on laws against a political candidate, and look at where it has led us.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents were divorced four years ago. I am 18, living at home with my mother and stepfather and a 17-year-old brother who has been in and out of trouble with the law.

The problem is my mother. She and I don't get along very well. The main thing we fight about is that I want to see my real father. She says if I go to see him I can never come home.

All this is making a nervous wreck out of me. I want to move out of the house and share an apartment with a friend. I think we can back it financially. Mom says once I leave she won't let me back in the house.

I need someone to advise me. What is the wises thing to do?—Getting Ulsers At 18

Dear Friend: You've left too many gaps in your story for me to give you a green light to move, which is what you really want.

I don't know if you are in school, or if you have to quit school and go to work. I know nothing about your real father—whether or not he has expressed any interest in seeing you; or if he has contributed to your support. Has he remarried? There are too many unanswered questions that would weg heavily on my answer.

I suggest you discuss this problem with your family pastor, a clergyman or a family counselor—someone who could evaluate your situation based on all the facts.

Dear Ann Landers: I regret to know right away if it is possible for a virgin to become pregnant the flust time she has sexual relations. My friends say no, but the girl has a few symptoms of pregnancy and I'm beginning to wonder.

Please answer in the paper. This is important, not only to me but to others who may be relying on false information.—Idaho Question

Dear Ida: The answer is yes. A girl can become pregnant the first time she has sexual relations.

Contact Solves Consumer Complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — After a year of running the city's municipal consumer protection bureau in the country, Helen Rheaume insists she is not a consumer advocate.

"I don't have the time, really," she said. "I'm too busy solving problems."

A re head of Contact, launched a year ago by officials in Kanata, Nepean township—Mrs. Rheaume, 38, manages it with Orosh Canada's limited budges and her own energy is long way.

Her week's been filled with solving telephoned consumer complaints—the bureau's only staff member—answering requests for information, writing a weekly column in the community paper, Nepean Times, and being host of a consumer-affairs cable television show every second week.

Community responses to Contact has been enthusiastic, Mrs. Rheaume said, and she has worked out a 13-week study program in consumer education that is being used by high-school teachers in their health and family life classes.

She also addresses groups of women and students at special seminars on consumer issues.

Contact began with about 25 volunteers. But with phone calls coming into the office in fits and starts, the volunteers decided to form a Nepean branch of the Consumers Association of Canada.

Mrs. Rheaume, who with her husband Gene, a former Liberal MP for the Northwest Territories, once ran a travel agency, said her relationships with Nepean businessmen are "basically good."

"I've had a couple of major run-ins with chain stores. But there has been such a major change in policy afterward that it was worth creating a little venom."

Being a mother of six children between 10 and 18 has helped too.

In one case, she phoned a children's clothing manufacturer in Montreal about a snowsuit that fell apart after less than a season's wear. She listened quietly while 'the vice-president of the firm explained just how hard children are on their clothes.

"Lady you have no idea, you just have no idea."

Then she told him I had some ideas, since I've bought snowsuits for my six children, and I was right.

"Finally he snapped, 'Well, madam, if you have six children, why aren't you at home taking care of them?'"

The manufacturer eventually co-operated, as do most of the people Mrs. Rheaume approaches.

We work mainly through mediation. You realize after a while that consumers really don't have that many laws to protect them."

One of the biggest problems the complaining consumer faces is finding out where to take a problem.

"I'd really like to see a three-level consumer-help office with all three levels of government involved. People shouldn't have to decide whether to go to the provincial, federal government, or what."

But her idea has not jelled yet with either federal or Ontario consumer-affairs officials. All they have offered Contact is their approval and moral support.

Provincial officials turned down Mrs. Rheaume's request for a grant, saying they didn't want to get involved in funding a municipal consumer protection bureau.

"They figured it would be cheaper for the ministry to 100 municipalities who would want to do the same thing."

They told her of their plans to start a string of provincially-run consumer-help offices.

"We really thought Contact was an experiment in a sense," she said. "For $1,000 or $2,000 they could have easily found out how successful it's work. It'll cost a heck of a lot more to get, their own pilot projects going."

The federal consumer affairs department has not yet given Mrs. Rheaume a final answer on Contact's request for money.

The government has opened two federally-operated storefront offices in Toronto and Saint John, N.B., Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray says he plans to have about 20 in operation by the end of this year.

Meanwhile Contact will continue to operate on a budget of about $12,000 a year.

Successful Living

Old Age Is To Enjoy

By DORIS CLARK

Letters from persons who are getting up in years often have to do with just how to be a grandmother or grandpup. They feel out in limbo when they are no longer being spin in their own homes - and no wonder!

They have recognized the rights of their children, as adults, to raise their own families; but with this recognition comes the disconcerting thought that having raised those same children they now take a back seat.

It isn't necessarily so. There is a great role for the grown-up-and-older generation. Gram or Grandpop are now relieved of responsibility. They can make friends with their grandchildren without having to act like authorities on everything. They have time to listen to confidences and, (God Bless 'em!), they have wisdom gained through long experience to soothe and comfort.

Don't ever think that grown children, now homemakers, don't worry about what mother thinks! If they find that the lady who is now the grandmother of their children is relaxed and uncritical, lending a helping hand without taking over, they relax and delight in having her. The same with Granny.

Old age is a time for enjoy-

IUDs Studied By Government

OTTAWA (CP) — Reports of deaths in the United States linked to a particular intrauterine device IUD have prompted the Canadian government to investigate here.

Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health protection, said in an interview today the survey initially will consist of a letter to all physicians, asking them about possible side-effects from the use of the birth-control device.

"We have inadequate data on the safety of all IUDs," Dr. Morrison said. "But before we single out the Dalkon Shield, we want much more information."

About 127,000 of the units — manufactured in the United States and distributed here by A. H. Robins Co. of Montreal — have been sold in Canada since the Dalkon Shield was introduced in 1970.

Problems apparently arise if the woman should become pregnant with the IUD in place; there is a 9-to-50-per-cent risk of a spontaneous abortion and a smaller risk of a septic abortion.

The Robins company said Thursday it plans to issue a special warning to Canadian doctors, saying that the Dalkon Shield can produce serious infection, even death, in both the mother and child.

and cereal, it should be part of each day's food intake.

If you eat the right things, by the way, you won't need to eat great quantities to feel satisfied and benefited by your meals: it's not just how much you eat, it's what.

And "what" includes milk, no two ways about it. It is such a serious food that no adult can afford to ignore it.

Nutritional facts about milk.

Milk provides many nutrients essential to adult health—and, importantly, provides them in a balance correctly proportioned to the body's needs. Milk is rated an excellent dietary source of NO LESS THAN FIVE essential nutrients:—

Calcium. Adult bones and teeth continue to need calcium to stay in good shape.

Protein. A very important health factor. Not many people realize that milk provides high quality protein.

Riboflavin. Another factor in maintaining adult health.

Vitamin A. Milk is an excellent source of this important vitamin.

Phosphorus. Another factor needed to maintain the health of adult bones and teeth.

In addition to these five, milk is a good dietary source of THIAMIN. In most cases VITAMIN D has been added in Ontario.

This is why milk has earned the description of "Nature's most nearly perfect food". And why it is so important that adults realize that they, too, need milk. Each day.

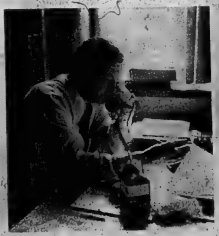
Men. It's time you took milk-drinking more seriously.

If you think only kids need milk, think again. It's a potent "nutritional cocktail" that can make a big contribution to your health, vigour and vitality.

How milk helps increase vitality and stamina.

Milk is a nearly complete nutritional package. All by itself, it can provide many of the food factors needed for health.

Result: milk is geared to meet your body's needs better than any other food.



It does not give you a quickie artificial or short-term lift (like a candy bar or cup of coffee). Instead, it makes a serious nutritional contribution to your body's reserves of strength...helping you to function, and enjoy life, to the fullest.

A food— not just a drink.

Although you do drink milk, its nutritional potency puts it into the "food" class in a big way.

One proof of this is the fact that milk actually feels filling and satisfying. A real stick-to-the-ribs sensation.

This is why milk, added to a grab-and-run type of meal, can boost its food value, and make it more filling and satisfying. So eating on the fly needn't mean running out of steam halfway through a busy day.

Milk's role in a man's fitness programme.

If you don't have some sort of fitness programme, you're just asking for trouble.

But "fitness programme" doesn't necessarily mean health cultism or elaborate equipment or expensive clubs.

It means recognizing the importance of getting proper sleep; of getting some kind of physical activity every day; and of seeing that your body's engines are properly fueled.

Here's where milk comes on strong. Along with meat or fish, fruit and vegetables, bread

To get the most out of milk, drink it every day.

Right now, why not start adding a glass of milk to whatever you eat for breakfast every morning.

In addition, have another glass—or a carton—of it sometime during the day. At lunch or at breaks or even before bed.

That's all there is to it. But—do it every day, to get the fullest benefit from milk.

That benefit is worth having. Milk, remember, is Nature's most nearly complete nutritional package.

It can give you a man-size push along the road to fuller health and more abundant vitality.

That's quite a promise.

But then, milk is quite a food.

Dynes and Quinte All-stars Serve Fastball at Its Best

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

A capacity crowd jammed Alemite Park Saturday evening and watched fastball at its best.

In a doubleheader, Dynes Jewellers and the Quinte Fastball League's All-stars fought their way through 13 innings before a run was scored.

Dynes, former world fastpitch champions, got a run from Charlie Leeming in the seventh inning of the second game to win 1-0.

The two clubs finished the first game in a scoreless tie.

Spectators were entertained the entire time was masterful fielding and superb pitching displays by both teams.

In the first half of the doubleheader, Bob Dynes and Lenny Hollaway combined their talents to record the shutout for the all-stars.

Ekbier fanned two and walked none while allowing four singles in the first three innings. Hollaway came on in the fourth, struck out six, walked five and allowed just one hit, a double.

Andy Gionette and Chris McGaffeney did the chores for the Jewellers and what a job they did. Gionette gave up a single to Dave Horwood in the third inning and that was all that stood between the two Toronto pitchers and a perfect game.

McGaffeney and Gionette struck out 21 batters over the seven innings.

Mickey Hancock slugged twice for Dynes, Bob Purdy doubled and Derek Hinnersly and Dave Russell singled once each.

In the second game, it was the all-stars who rattled out the hits, but were unable to get them a the right times.

Dale Duval batted a second inning triple and Larry Mayhew hit two singles while Pete Stallkwich, Ted Wallis and Gerry Johnson added a base hit each.

Dynes only got two hits in the entire second game, but it was enough to score the only run of the evening.

Derek Hinnersly had a triple in the fifth inning and drove in the winning run in the seventh with a single. Hinnersly was thrown out at second base for the third out but the winning run had already crossed the plate before the put out was made.

Leeming, the run scorer, got on base on a walk.

Ted Wallis did the pitching for the all-stars in the first four innings. Wallis fanned six, walked one and never gave up a hit.

Wayne McConnell threw the final three innings striking out five, issuing a walk and allowing two hits.

For Dynes, Frank Marshall struck out one and walked one in the first three frames and Tom Ellsworth fanned four and walked none in the remaining four innings. Both too gave up three hits each.

Neither team had an error in the games.

Triple Win for Moore

By CECIL S. PAUL

Howard Moore of Campbellcroft became the first driver of the 1974 racing season to get a triple win and pick up a total of $175 Saturday night as he took every event that he entered.

Greg Anderson and Paul Turner shared the wins in the six-lap, stock-car driver competition.

Gary Mattier and Junior Brand shared the loss, giving up 12 hits. They fanned four and walked eight.

Art Kelker, George Phillips, Lionel Adair, and Larry Herrington each had a pair of hits for the winners, with Tim McCrodden and Jerry Weyand cashing for O'Brien's.

In the third contest of the afternoon, O'Brien's were once again the victims of a barrage of runs, this time at the hands of the Belleville Gems.

The Gems banged out 12 hits in taking a 17-7 win. Neil Geyer had four of the winning hits, with Tom Bentley adding three.

Paul Lacombe, Sam Morgan and Pete Scott each had one safety for the only O'Brien's hits.

Neil Geyer went the route for the Gems, allowing only seven hits, striking out 12 and walking six.

Dave Clements finally got his Barracuda moving as he took his first qualifier and led the field from the start to finally get into the action.

Howard Moore got rolling in the second qualifier for the points when he took over from Dave MacAdam at the eighth lap with Bill Card hot on his bumper.

Clements was heading for his second win of the night in the eight feature but it was Moore getting his second win of the night as he used Clements on the last lap to pick up a 15 points for the night and to give him a total of 150, 16 points in front of second place driver, Danny Reid, who managed to run only a few professional during the course of the night.

As the conclusion of the eight feature, problems arose in the back stretch. Dave MacAdam decided on a little extra curricular activity with Reid. The disagreement continued in the pit area and the management decided it was time to put a stop to this type of thing.

MacAdam has been suspended for one year for unsportsmanlike conduct and for fighting in the pits.

Fred Linde of Stockdale was the lone monopoly on the eight consolation. He has earned his third win of the year by taking over first, three weeks in a row but unfortunately there are no points in this one. Fred still has three checkered flags to his credit.

Only nine starters came out for the Super with Clement still determined to get a pair of wins. He led for several laps before dropping out with mechanical trouble and Winston Webber took over.

Moore was out for the big three as he wheeled through the pack to take the checkered flag followed closely by Ron Herrington and Doug Dietz, both all-star drivers.

In the special sponsors' race, a field of 15 starters came out with all eyes on the driver of car 60, the retiring Brighton Speedway champion, Sam Dingman. Sam was living up to his name of "Flying Sam" and he cleand the gap on the lead car driven by Dave Clements, Doug's rookie, and a brother of Ron. Dingman took over the lead on the 5th lap but it was a short lived victory as Herrington beat him on the back stretch to come in for the win in one of the better events of the night.

The action gets underway again this Saturday night at 7.30 at Brighton Speedway.

Back To Earth

After taking their Premiere Soccer League opener last weekend, the Belleville Olympics found themselves on the short end of a 4-0 score in Peterborough on Saturday.

"We were a little over confident after beating Kingston 5-0 last week," said coach Bob Wheaton, "but the game put our feet back on the ground."

The Olympics made the trip to the littlock city with a short number of players. Among the missing regulars was goaltender Jim Kelly, who is sitting out a suspension.

Sandy Duchert took over duties in the net and played a creditable game although out the Vimars in the first half.

Brewers the Target For Disgruntled A's

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oakland Athletics are still mad at the world . . . but the rest of the American League's West Division isn't doing much laughing.

The Athletics, who seem to play best when they're angry, had a couple of gripes as they ran their winning streak to four games and 17 of 21 with Sunday's 8-4 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

The two-time world champs are starting, to put some daylight between themselves and the rest of the division. Following the victory over the Brewers, they have a 3½-game lead over second-place Kansas City Royals.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Orioles clipped Texas Rangers 6-5 in 10 innings, Boston Red Sox outslugged Chicago White Sox 9-7, Cleveland Indians trimmed Kansas City 5-2, New York Yankees pounded Minnesota Twins 11-1 and Detroit Tigers shaded California Angels 3-2.

In Saturday's games, Cleveland defeated Kansas City 5-3, New York edged Minnesota 6-5, Oakland beat Milwaukee 4-1, Boston blanked Chicago 9-0 and Texas defeated Baltimore 4-2.

Winning pitcher Catfish Hunter was angry Sunday about being lifted. And some A's were upset by a post-game player move that saw backup first baseman Pat Bourque sent to the minors.

Hunter checked the Brewers on seven hits, including Bob Coluccio's second-inning homer, before giving way to Rollie Fingers following two-out singles by George Scott and Darrell Porter in the eighth inning. Bob Hansen greeted the reliever with a run-scoring single.

"If they were going to take me out, they should have brought in a left-hander," said Hunter. "But they didn't. I couldn't understand that move. If a right-hander was going to pitch to Hansen, it should have been me."

Bourque, hitting a solid .286, was farmed out to make room for first-hitting infielder Dal Maxvill, back from the disabled list.

"If he (Bourque) goes, no one is safe," griped one player. "Why does he (owner Charlie Finley) mess us up when we're going so well?"

Oakland's key hitting was done by Reggie Jackson, who slammed his 16th and 15th home runs, and Joe Rudi, who cracked a three-run shot.

Ellin Coggins singled home pinch runner Al Bumbry with two out in the 10th inning, giving Dickie rookie Wayne Cage-land his first major league triumph with 5 2-3 innings of two-hits relief. Earl Williams opened the 10th with a single off reliever Jackie Brown and Don Baylor popped out attempting a sacrifice bunt. Bumbry took second on an infield out and Coggins followed with a single.

Jeff Burroughs drove in four Texas runs with two singles and a two-run homer. Mark Lemongello and Bobby Grich homered for the Orioles.

Steve Arlo Carlton allowed a pair of two-run homers, one of them capping a five-run third inning for the Red Sox. It was his 11th in the last 14 games for the Red Sox. It was then a four-run lead over Milwaukee in the second inning. Dick Dietz and Tim Harper also hit a two-run homer for Boston while Bill Melton and Dick Allen connected for Chicago.

Solo homers by Leron Lee, Oscar Gamble and Dave Duncan boosted Gaylord Perry and the Indians over Kansas City. Perry pitched a six-hitter for his ninth consecutive victory since losing the opening game of the season.

Home runs by Lou Piniella, Rick Dempsey and Ron Blomberg sparked a seven-run sixth inning that, helped Mel Stottlemyre snap a personal seven-game losing streak and post his first victory since April 30.

With the Yankees ahead 2-0, Piniella led off the sixth with a solo homer. Dempsey, a former catcher with the Twins, belted a three-run homer. Finish starter Vic Albury, Blomberg's three-run blast came off Bill Butler.

Dempsey, who appeared in 41 games with the Twins in parts of four seasons, also drove in the tying and winning runs in New York's 6-5 victory Saturday.

Norm Cash broke up a scoreless duel with a fifth-inning home run for the Tigers and Woodie Fryman and John Hiller blanked California on four hits.

Cash belted his fourth homer of the season with two out in the eighth off Dick Lange. Bill Freehan followed with a double and scored on Mickey Stanley's single.

Griffins In Front

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Griffins moved into first place in the National Lacrosse League Sunday, defeating Philadelphia Wings 13-12 before 2,600 fans.

Charley Henderson broke a 12-12 deadlock with 1:17 seconds remaining. Henderson intercepted a loose pass and fired into the open net as goaltender Wayne Platt was up the floor acting as an offensive player.

In Sunday's other NLL game, Montreal Quebecois defeated Maryland Arrows 14-8.

Menne Takes Kemper

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Lowshot Bob Menne birdied the final hole of regulation play to gain a tie and then scored from 20 feet on the first hole of sudden death to win the $50,000 first prize in the Kemper open golf tournament Sunday.

Menne, 32, a struggler throughout his six-year tour of reer, whipped an iron shot to within six feet of the cup for the birdie on the 72nd hole that caught front-running Jerry Heard, then won with a birdie putt on the first playoff hole.

"If I have to lose," said Heard, "I'm glad it's to Bob. He needs the money. I'm glad for him and not somebody like Jack Nicklaus who's got more money than he'll ever need."

And Nicklaus was all the other great names in the game were in the field. They had to be. The event, which offered $250,000 total prizes, is one of three designated tournaments on the schedule in which the game's leading players are required to play.

Menne, of course, wasn't among that list. In fact, he had to win his way into the field by qualifying in an 18-hole playoff on Monday.

He won it with a final round of 67 and a total of 270, 18 under par. Heard matched that total with a last-round 70.

Dave Hill just missed the playoff by a single stroke at 271. He bolted into contention on the strength of a brilliant seven-under-par 65 in the last round. Lee Trevino, also in contention until the last nine holes, had a 69—272.

Billy Casper and J.C. Snead, each with a 69, were at 272.

The other big guns were struck out further back in the exceptionally low scoring. Jack Nicklaus had 70—278, Johnny Miller was 70—280, Gary Player scored 71—286, Arnold Palmer and Tom Weiskopf started but didn't qualify for the final two rounds.

"Long Man" Buzz Capra Shrugs Off 10 Expo Hits

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The "long man" is the guy in the bullpen who can be counted on to pitch five or six solid innings of relief.

To Buzz Capra, "long" means shut long and.

The New York Mets' castoff and refugee from the bullpen, who's been trying for that long to show he really is a starter, is achieving his goal.

On Sunday, though, he had to went to prove it. He gave up 10 Montreal hits—but none of the baserunners managed to get back where they started—home plate.

So, backed by a 16-hit Atlanta assault, the Braves' right-hander coasted in a manner of speaking, to a 9-0 rout over the Expos.

In Sunday's other National League games, Chicago Cubs edged Los Angeles Dodgers 7-6, Cincinnati Reds beat Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1, Philadelphia Phillies defeated San Francisco Giants 4-3 and St. Louis Cardinals outlasted San Diego Padres 9-6. New York Mets' game against Houston Astros was rained out.

In games Saturday, Montreal edged Atlanta 7-6, New York defeated Houston 3-1, Los Angeles whipped Chicago 10-6, Pittsburgh mauled Cincinnati 14-1, St. Louis shut out San Diego 3-0 and Philadelphia defeated San Francisco 8-2.

"Burt was the 'long man' in our bullpen," said Atlanta manager Eddie Mathews. "Capra was offered to us by the Mets. One of our scouts knew him. He said he was a gutsy guy and a hard worker."

So the Braves picked him up in a straight cash deal. So far, he's been a bargain.

And he's been improving as a starter since then, four-hitting the Dodgers May 19, shutting out Houston on three hits May 24, pitching nine innings of three-hit ball in the Braves' 10-inning 2-1 victory over Philadelphia last Tuesday night, then blanking the Expos.

"It was a little bit tough getting readjusted to starting at first," said Capra. "Now I know I can go the distance. I have the confidence now."

Craig Robinson drove in three runs with a double and a single in the game for Montreal. He sparked a three-run outburst in the sixth inning when he cracked a two-run double and the Braves erupted for three more runs in the seventh, on the first on Rowland Office's home run.

The opposite of the "long man," obviously, is the "short man," the late-inning mop-up man. But it was the Cubs' mainly Jose Cardenal—who mopped up Mike Marshall.

Marshall, making his 34th appearance of the season, walked Jerry Morales and Billy Williams in the seventh inning, then Cardenal drove his fourth homer of the season into the right field bleachers, putting Chicago in front 6-4. Rick Monday smashed and scored the winning run on a single by Carmen Fanzone.

Tony Perez' 100th career homer in Cincinnati and 19th of the season sparked a three-run burst in the third inning that carried the Reds past Pittsburgh.

Fred Norman and Pedro Borbon, who came on in the seventh inning, teamed for a five-hitter. Norman pulled a rib muscle in the third inning and he told me it hurt every time he threw a fastball," said Reds' manager Sparky Anderson.

"If you noticed, he just threw a screwball and slow curve after that. I told him the Pirates had to catch on sometime."

Greg Luzinski reached back into his memory file, then reached back at the plate and crashed a two-run homer, capping a four-run eighth inning that powered the Phils past the Giants.

John D'Acquisto had a two-hit shutout going before the Phillies struck for all the runs they needed, out a couple of hits and taking advantage of a couple of errors to cut San Francisco's lead to 3-2.

That brought Randy Moffitt out of the bullpen.

"I faced Moffitt before," Driessen explained. "He likes to get ahead with the fastball, then go out with the slow stuff.

"I was looking for a fastball on the first pitch."

Ted Sizemore drew a base-loaded walk to force home St. Louis' tie-breaking run and Reggie Smith singled home two more in the four-run eighth that saddled the Padres with their ninth straight loss.

McANDREW RELEASED

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pitcher Jim McAndrew of San Diego Padres has been placed on waivers and released unconditionally, the National League baseball club announced Saturday. McAndrew, who had a 1-4 won-lost record for the season, will be replaced by pitcher Lowell Palmer, 26, purchased from New York Yankees of the American League and now with Syracuse in the International League.

Open World Tournament a Possibility

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates from five nations agreed in principle Sunday to participate in an open competition for the unofficial amateur hockey championship.

Jack Devine of Belleville, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said representatives from the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland and Canada all spoke in favor of an open competition during weekend meetings.

"We all agreed in principle that an open team world competition is most desirable," Devine said. "We (CAHA) want our best hockey players — including professionals — to compete."

This development may signal Canada's return to world hockey competition in 1976, if not next year.

Devine stressed that the open competition would have to be within the framework of Olympic rules regarding eligibility of players.

"We're in favor of open competition providing it doesn't jeopardize the status of Olympic eligibility of players taking part. We have to define which players can compete without affecting the status of amateurs on the team."

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, is scheduled to meet the delegates today.

Commenting on the possibility of forming a World Cup of hockey, Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said: "Everybody wants an open world cup every four years, just as Halfway between Olympic years, but they have to find a formula so that no player or country loses its Olympic amateur status."

Dennis Juckes and Lou Lefaive, president of the sports administration centre and chairman of Hockey Canada's international committee, are the association representatives at the summit meeting.

The Finnish spokesmen are Heino Huotari and Esko Pahkinen, Sweden's delegates are Stig Nilsson, Lars Norrman and Lars Ahlvarsson; The Soviet Union is represented by Valentin L. Tyutin, Alexander Gromb and Lev Zarakhovich. Dr. Zdenek Andrist and Miroslav Subrt are the Czechoslovakia delegates.

"The day produced good positive meetings where more progress than solutions were discussed," Lefaive said. "The crux of the matter is Olympic eligibility. The group will have to work through the mechanics of the International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) and the International Olympic Committee (IOC)."

The exact format of the World Cup was not discussed, but Juckes said several possibilities were mentioned.

"We realize there are a lot of things in the present system that are impractical and we're trying to see if we should follow the example of World Cup soccer," Devine said.

MATRA IS WINNER

PAOLA, Italy (Reuter) — Gerard Larrousse and Henri Pescarolo of France drove the Matra 1,000-kilometre race in a Matra Simca Bebop, averaging 89.978 miles per hour. Rolf Stommelen of West Germany and Carlos Reutemann of Argentina were second in an Alfa Romeo.

Team Canada's Dates Shape Up

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Devine, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Sunday the newest edition of Team Canada, made up of players from the World Hockey Association, will leave for Moscow, Sept. 25.

The first four games against the Soviet Union's national team will be played in Canada earlier in the month.

"Prior to the games in the Soviet Union, the team will play the Finish national team in Helsinki on either Sept. 29 or 30," said Devine.

Team Canada will play four games in the Soviet Union before Oct. 1 and 6.

"We also hope to have a warm-up game against the Swedish national club in Stockholm before we meet the Russians," added Devine. "But no date has been set."

Team Canada will meet the Czechoslovakian nationals Oct. 6 in Prague before returning home.

Sabres Announce Amateur Choices

BUFFALO (AP) — Buffalo Sabres announced Saturday the names of 12 players chosen last week in the National Hockey League's secret draft of amateur players.

Ten were drafted from Canadian teams, one was from Brown University and the 12th is a young Japanese who played for Tokyo Katanas.

Of the 12, defenceman Lee Fogolin and right winger Danny Gare head the list.

Fogolin, 18, the Sabres' No. 1 choice, scored goals and 19 assists in 47 games last season for Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series.

Gare had 68 goals and 59 assists in 62 games with Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League.

The Japanese, whom the Sabres described as the "most secret player in the secret draft," is Yoshi Kotsuka, a five-foot, eight-inch, 180-pound centre.

Also chosen was Robert Gretton, a left winger from Cornwall Royals of the Quebec Major Hockey League and an Atlanta Flames' coach Bernie Geoffrion.

The other draftees:

ELLIS SIDELINED

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians announced Saturday that first baseman John Ellis received a hairline fracture of his right foot in a Friday night game and will be lost to the American League baseball team for four to six weeks.

STAYS WITH STEELERS ..

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Terry Bradshaw said Sunday he has rejected a substantial cash offer from New York Stars of the World Football League and signed a new multi-year contract with Pittsburgh Steelers of the National Football League.

Stars Fall To Windsor

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — John Macdonald scored four goals and added four assists as Windsor Warlocks defeated Dorgan Shooting Stars 12-4 in Ontario Lacrosse Association Major series action Saturday.

Bill Dennis also got four goals while Paul Caira and Bill Hope scored three each.

John Davey, John Fletcher, Norm Hope and Mike Smith each scored, a pair of goals. Bruce Beland, Dave Forster, Marty Young, Pat Fallon, Tom Wright and Mike Lewis got single goals.

Joe Dicks scored twice for Toronto. John Gonsalez and Jim Walker added one each.

Judy Rankin Winner

BALTIMORE (AP) — Judy Rankin was declared the winner of the $50,000 Bahama golf championship Sunday after heavy rain washed out the scheduled final round of the 54-hole event.

Miss Rankin led by one stroke after each of the first two rounds, and earned $5,700 after defending a tournament title for the first time.

She finished at 144 — two strokes under par and one stroke ahead of Susie Berning, Kathy Whitworth, Marilynn Smith and Carol Mann—each of whom won $4,005.

Tournament officials cancelled the final round rather than reschedule it for today because of the condition of the course after two days of rain, and because of players' commitments.

Some Election Hot Air Sends PM Skyward

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau wrapped up the first phase of his election campaign Saturday with an unusual day even for an unusual politician.

He delivered what may have been his best speech in the young campaign, at another meeting he ran into stiff heckling. He launched a boat, was presented with 4 canoes, took a ride in a hot-air balloon, rode a police motorcycle, travelled nearly 200 miles by bus and saw a disdained bead-play on the steps of a funeral parlor.

"An interesting day," he was to say later, as he headed back to Ottawa from Toronto to prepare for the second phase of his campaign — to begin making down planks in the Liberal platform.

Itself now, he has been working with the same speech, exploiting that his government did not seek this election, that the Progressive Conservatives are badly divided over the country effectively, and that the Liberal approach to inflation is the only effective one.

Saturday, Mr. Trudeau cut a wide swath around Toronto, starting at Streetsville, stopping at Brampton for a brief, two-hour ride up to Gravenhurst, then another stop-and-go trip to Huntsville, and finally to Richmond Hill for an evening rally.

At Brampton, a shopping area, he was packed with thousands of people—shoppers and supporters—when he delivered the snappiest, and best-received speech of the campaign. He lashed the Conservative party's campaign that it cannot control even its own members, let alone its own policies. There were internal divisions on energy, trilingualism and economics.

Earlier at Streetsville, he attended the local Bread and Honey Festival, had his only political remark in that parkland setting was that local Liberal candidate Tony Abbott, was a "honey" of a candidate. Conservative and New Democratic candidates also were in attendance. This is where he was goaded into a few minutes in a bellows.

At Gravenhurst—after stopping at a highway restaurant where he took a whirl on the police motorcycle—Mr. Trudeau launched a rehabilitated cruise ship, again keeping direct campaigning to a minimum. However, in the best estimate of local officials, he was seen and cheered by close to 8,000.

At Unionville, the prime minister was surrounded by several hundred people attending a town festival—that is where the band made the funeral parlor rock—and while he didn't speak, he didn't miss many handshakes.

It was at the Richmond Hill arena, where most of the seats were filled, that Mr. Trudeau encountered—the first serious heckling of the campaign. Several vocal opponents of his anti-Pickering airport were responsible for the action.

And the prime minister, aware that the vast majority of the audience was on his side, actually seemed to enjoy some of it. His pat answers were getting the biggest cheers of the night, and the diversion gave the opportunity to talk about a new issue.

"So you say we are contaminating the atmosphere," he shouted back at a persistent heckler. "You're contaminating the meeting, sir."

And he delivered the final blow with this: "Now that the cameras have taken your picture, will you sit down?" He added, to the delight of the audience, that he wanted the cameras back with him.

Mr. Trudeau leaves for Vancouver Tuesday and, if all goes according to plan, he will begin talking more about new Liberal policies. He has said that housing and transportation will form major planks in the election platform.

Stanfield Campaign Past 10,000 Miles

OTTAWA (CP)—Robert Stanfield, the first 10,000 miles of campaigning under his belt, has revealed today while Progressive Conservative party strategists expressed pleasure a the way the campaign for the July 8 election is going so far.

Mr. Stanfield, 60, appears to be running hard in his search for the prime ministership and one day last week he was on the go for more than 18 hours, getting up in Halifax and going to bed in Vancouver.

The crew of the Air-Canada DC-9 chartered by the Conservatives for the election said it passed the 10,000-mile mark Sunday as Mr. Stanfield and his party flew in from Terrace, B.C.

Party strategists say the Canadian public now is beginning to listen to him when he talks of

Debate Offer Scorned

OTTAWA (CP)—Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield offered on Saturday to meet Prime Minister Trudeau for a national television debate. He also offered to meet all party leaders, if necessary.

Stanfield's offer was questioned by spokesmen for the other three parties.

"I'm not aware of the CBC having made an offer of exactly this nature. However, after nearly two weeks of discussion and after the press has reported that negotiations have broken down and a debate is not possible, it seems a bit late for the Tories to be coming forward with new proposals and offers to entertain . . . suggestions."

A spokesman for the NDP said the Conservatives were simply restating publicly a position they held at talks between the four party leaders and the CBC.

Social Credit Party Leader Real Caouette, reached at home in Noranda, Que., said the Conservative offer meant they didn't want a television debate.

Caouette Campaign On

LATULIPE, Que. (CP) — Real Caouette, Social Credit party leader, opens his Western Canada campaign today following an appearance in his own riding of Temiscamingue Sunday.

Mr. Caouette told 150 party faithful in this community, 200 miles northwest of Ottawa, his riding "has been given more grants for Local Initiatives Programs under the Social Credit party than it would have received under the Liberals."

"We have put Temiscamingue on the map," he said. "I ask you to increase my majority to 10,000."

The 36-year-old party chief won a 9,000-vote majority in the riding in the 1972 federal election.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with Major Hoople

Stock Dividends Limited by Lewis

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — David Lewis saw few voters far the most of Sunday, but kept his pledge to unveil detailed economic policies this week.

A gruelling 19 hours of plane travel east across New Foundland and then west to Saint John, N.B., limited the New Democratic Party leader to a two conference in St. John's, Nfld., and a party rally here.

He announced at the news conference that an NDP government would limit to eight or nine per cent, the return on stock dividends for investments in the stock market.

The only possible exceptions would be companies in which a high-risk investments would be allowed to return profits 10 or 11 per cent." Of shareholders under the scrutiny of a national prices control board.

After the announcement in the Newfoundland capital, Mr. Lewis cashed in the isolation of Atlantic canada, expressing acute frustration at being away from voters for most of the day.

His mood switched to elation here as about 40 supporters rushed out of the airport terminal building to greet him.

Although the crowd was not large, it was one of the most enthusiastic he has encountered as campaigning through Ontario and the Atlantic provinces for the July 8 election.

His statement at St. John's had come before about 50 people in the half-filled hall of the Longshoremen's Protective Union and was amplified at the news conference.

He accused the George Weston Ltd. food empire of profiteering through high prices and excessive control of production and marketing, and said the company had a 1973 rate of return on shareholders' equity of 16.1 per cent. Most dobble the reasonable rate of return for any company in any sector."

However, during the news conference, he said "those words may have been a bit overplayed," because his limit would be higher in the mining and petroleum sectors.

Ellis One of Few MPs to Vacate Office

OTTAWA (CP) — There is little sign that many MPs will vacate their publicly-financed constituency offices during the federal election campaign.

It has been three weeks since the election was called and, so far, only eight have reported closing their offices for the campaign.

This is only a small percentage of the 130 members who have taken advantage of the program which allots funds for office space and a secretary.

Commons clerk Alastair Grier says more MPs may have given up their offices but they have not reported doing so.

Tom Bell, Conservative MP for Saint John-Lancaster, is one member who has closed his office, but the Commons is required to continue paying rent because of lease obligations.

A week after the election was called May 9, only four MPs had notified Mr. Fraser that they were vacating their offices: T. C. Douglas (NDP—Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands), David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) and Gordon Ritchie (L—Ottawa Centre).

Now, Mr. Fraser says he has similar notification from Mr. Bell, Jack Ellis (PC—Hastings), and Dan Heilands (PC—Pembina).

Parliament approved constituency offices last December. The program provided up to $500 a month for staff and a maximum of $300 a month for office rental. The Commons pays the bills directly.

Citizenship Promised Earlier

MONTREAL (CP) — Landed immigrants may be able to apply for citizenship after only three years residency in Canada, if the Liberals form the next government, Secretary of State Hugh Faulkner said during the weekend.

"One of the changes I intend to implement would be to reduce the time that landed immigrants must wait for citizenships from five years to three," Mr. Faulkner said at a conference marking the opening of two "storefront" citizenship offices here.

Gold Boom May Bring Social Stress

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — When six optometrists, making his two-day visit each month to this northwestern Ontario gold-mining town of 4,800, he frequently examines as many as 67 school children in a day.

When the visiting solicitor makes his call twice a month, a crowd waiting to see him outside the court room creates a scene "which is nothing short of pandemonium."

Kenora Mayor Pleads

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — Ontario cabinet ministers touring the northwest part of the province heard a stirring plea Saturday from an Indian leader for "a plan of action" to prevent what he said might be rampant destruction and violence by Kenora's disenchanted Ojibway population.

"I have a feeling the situation is getting out of hand," Robert Major, representing 23 reserves belonging to Grand Council II, said in an interview after delivering his brief to government leaders.

Most of the complaints of the community's Indian problem had been heard before.

But Kenora Mayor S. N. Davidson stepped on words in his brief, saying the problem has become worse and the council could not cope with it alone.

"The human degradation that results from the abuse of alcohol alone is plainly evident on the main street of Kenora and along the waterfront," the mayor told the seven ministers, headed by Margaret Birch, provincial secretary for social development.

"Why do humans of any race or condition of life in this wealthy province of Ontario set from average cans?"

He said the Indians, whom he described as "the least desirable" drink cheap, fortified wine obtained at the main street outlet of the Ontario Liquor Control Board "in great quantities."

The result was defecation, urination and copulation in public, as well as assorted acts of violence, fires of unknown origins, natural deaths from exposure, suicides and murders.

"These are symptoms of a moral pollution that deserve more attention than all the efforts now being made to eliminate sources of environmental pollution of our air, waterways and land," the mayor said.

Kenora produces 7,000 persons a year for drunkenness.

He said an all-out effort was needed by "the best brains in the province."

But he had no proposals for the ministers.

"I haven't got answers," the mayor said. "If I had I'd be giving them to you."

In his brief Mr. Major had several proposals for the leaders, including more diversified jobs and efforts to integrate the Indians into the white community.

He called for the creation of an Indian cultural centre here to which the Indians could come for comradeship with fellow Ojibways and which would contain facilities for education and recreation.

He said the Indians live in a social and economic ghetto with few jobs, little income and no housing.

"Little has been done to coordinate them to the life in town," he said.

Mrs. Birch promised that her secretariat would conduct a serious study of the problem but gave no commitment.

However, Health Minister Frank Miller announced the province is prepared to provide financial assistance for the establishment of a detoxification centre here. It would provide $25,000 for purchase of the land, some capital funds for the building and $130,000 a year for operating cost.

Obviously, says a citizens' committee, Red Lake needs a resident optometrist and a lawyer.

"It also has no medical specialties, no child or adolescent treatment centre, or serviced lot of Crown land on which to build houses, only one ambulance, only one highway and a problem with Indian ghettos and drunks.

The complaints were made in a 37-page brief presented Sunday to touring provincial cabinet ministers belonging to the social development secretariat, headed by Margaret Birch.

Ironically, as the brief was being distributed, Health Minister Frank Miller was operating a new $1.8-million, 44-bed hospital just up the road from the Red Dog Inn where the government leaders are staying. The old hospital will be converted into a long-sought senior citizen's home in the town 95 miles northeast of Kenora.

The brief, which will be presented formally when the secretariat sits for public meetings here today, warns that Red Lake's survival because of a new world demand for gold and high prices is creating a boom economy that will add to the social stresses.

About 30 per cent of the stable population and 80 per cent of the transients are Indians, the brief said.

The housing problem is so critical that the town condones sub-standard housing which leads to fires, high rents, and price-gouging by landlords, the brief said.

Nevertheless, it added, there must be a real commitment to "tearing down the rotting shacks of Red Lake."

It criticized the lack of local and specialists services. The nearest lawyer lives in Dryden, 120 miles away, and the optometrist travels here from Winnipeg.

The lawyer arrives only hours before court and the crowds become loud and restless. "Consequently, in the hour prior to court, clients are hustled in and out of the duty counsels' office with the speed of an assembly line."

A similar situation exists with the optometrist who can give his client only minutes of his time. "One cannot help but wonder whether all of them were fully examined and properly fitted."

And how does the citizen acquire help from a specialist when none is available? Only through a chain of events which the brief said southern Ontario citizens could not visualize.

"Is the pediatrician, obstetrician or surgeon in Winnipeg, 300 miles away or in Thunder Bay, 383 miles away? Who will escort the patient? Can the mother, recently moved from a reserve 200 miles north, cope with airports, city traffic, large medical buildings? Perhaps a nurse should go along? Who will pay her fare, her wages, her overnight accommodations."

Finally the brief asked what is described as an obscure government regulation that says no one ambulance cannot service any further than 50 miles away from the community.

This means that a patient requiring emergency care in Kenora must be transferred to an ambulance sent from Kenora a point on the highway 75 miles from here.

Whelan Criticizes B.C. Plan

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan was critical Sunday of the British Columbia government's plan to subsidize farmers who take out loan interest rates rise to more than eight per cent.

Mr. Whelan, who ended an election tour of B.C. Sunday, said he'd rather see the farmers earning enough to be able to pay the same interest rates as everyone else.

The minister also said he believes the Liberals will win more western seats than ever in the July 8 federal election—as many as 14 more than they've elected in the past.

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan says a lot of people, particularly producers and consumers, are going to feel the crunch if meat cutters in Alberta go out on strike, triggering a nationwide lockout by meat packers.

Mr. Whelan, interviewed Saturday during a tour of the British Columbia Interior, singled out beef and pork producers. He said that as far as he's concerned, when an animal is fit for market, it is a perishable product.

"You start losing when it reaches that peak, top-quality position and you can't deliver and it slides or deteriorate and the grade changes and this is very bad for both beef and pork producers," he said.

The minister said the federal government cannot intervene in the meat cutters dispute because of provincial jurisdiction, but added he is watching the situation in Alberta very closely.

Mr. Whelan also said that relief programs to help ranchers and farmers are being delayed because of the July 8 federal election. He said "we know that the cattlemen are finding themselves in a bit of a bind but I think it's very temporary".

"The same as pork producers—it's very temporary, because of our new programs that once we get back in the house and get them into force we shouldn't be wasting time on an election campaign when we should be doing these 'people things' as far as I'm concerned."

Fall TV to Have 31 New Series

NEW YORK ((AP)—A total of 31 new series will be on the networks next fall. That's the highest number in recent history, but don't get the idea it has suddenly become easy to get a new series on TV.

It's still the same old story: Many are culled but few are chosen.

Larry White, the man in charge of programming for the NBC television network, estimates he gets between 500 and 600 proposals for new series each year "and I think you'll find the figures are approximately the same at every network."

Out of this pile, NBC culls about 120 prospects that it considers interesting enough to warrant a financial investment.

The majority of these only get as far as the outline or script stage. About 25 actually are filmed as "pilot" shows for new series, but the attrition doesn't stop there.

At NBC, just 12 weekly prospects get the green light for the 1974-75 season. It's a higher - than - usual number, but still represents only 10 per cent of all the shows NBC had under serious consideration.

From where do new series people come from?

"You get the bulk of them from the professionals in the business, but you also get some from out of the woodwork," as to "speak," White said, referring to ideas submitted by amateur writers.

White adds, "we could not regard a case in which a network made a series submitted by an amateur writer, was satisfied what factors determine whether a new series gets on the air.

He said network executives look for such things as: "Are the characters the kinds of characters who will have a lot of available stories? Is the concept the kind that will have staying power with varying stories?

"Are the characters the kind we believe audiences will like and identify with.

"In addition, there's a lot of feeling. We test the shows with audiences in theatres, on cable television and, on several occasions, we play the pilot on the air prior to decision time."

How significant are the ratings of a televised pilot show?

They are an important but not overwhelming factor" in the decision-making process, he said. "The most significant part of the rating is what happens while the show is on. Does the rating hold up—does it grow or does it deteriorate?

He said a major, but pleasant, problem he had in choosing next season's series was a big "plethora of riches," an oversabundance of good new programs.

Because of the wealth, he said, he had to cancel several current shows, which, while marginal performers, in the ratings race, probably would have returned next season.

Keeping Busy

Charley's Aunt Lays'em in Aisles

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — The chuckles and laughter that greeted the Shaw Festival production of Charley's Aunt on Saturday night made a fair bid to outlast the spoken lines on the stage.

In the hands of Paxton Whitehead, the festival's artistic director and leader, the 83-year-old comedy took on new farce and wit. In its famous garden tea-party scene, damsels and their suitors, parents, guardians and misplaced aunts engaged in the wildest and most absurd mixups imaginable.

All the original script was, of course, preserved, with Charley's college mate impersonating his aunt in sails and lace, stealing a cigar and being caught by the real aunt, who tenderly kissed him on the cheek when he would have preferred the hug and a squeeze.

But Mr. Whitehead added touches of his own: bird songs and the inevitable bird damage to napery while the table is being set for tea, and hiding under a tablecloth in such a way as to make a man look 13 feet tall—"just stretching my legs."

Brendon Thomas wrote the play in 1892 and he isn't remembered in theatre literature for much else. It is to comedy what Shakespeare's Hamlet is to tragic-drama and it has been played in virtually every language in every part of the world.

The Shaw Festival,set by Maurice Strike won applause for itself, a faithful reproduction of a student's fuzzy garters, college garden and wealthy lawyer's drawing room at Oxford University in the 1880s. He used false footlights and curtain drapery to recreate the Victorian Age.

In addition to Mr. Whitehead in the leading role of Lord Fancourt Babberley—Babbs, James Valentine and John Horton managed to look sufficiently well heeled and youthful to be Oxford undergraduates.

Comic Kenneth Wickes played Brassett, the "college" porter, with a knowledgeable twinkle. He even put fresh humor into the tired old line: "Hello, hello, hello, what have we here?"—dropping his H's along the way.

Norman Welsh played Col. Sir Francis Chesney with the noble mixture of avarice and military bearing befitting an army man fresh from service from India. Patrick Boxhill was entirely foppish as the Oxford solicitor, Stephen Spettigue.

The ladies of the play were suitably inclined to be demure and swoon. Lorraine Foreman was the real and fabulous Italian comedy in the 16th and 17th centuries.

He has directed The Imaginary Invalid in a style reminiscent of William Hogarth, the English painter whose engraving were a biting commentary on society of his day, almost a century after Moliere flourished in France.

He will also direct the characteristicly French Offenbach operetta in English, an event Shaw Festival audiences are anticipating.

Stratford Opens Tonight

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — Gov.-Gen. and Mme. Jules Leger attend the opening tonight of the first of the 1974 Stratford Festival's four classical dramas, three operas and two contemporary plays.

The vice-regal couple arrive for a reception and dinner to be given by John Killer, festival president, at the Stratford County Club and then go to the theatre. After the performance they will meet the actors backstage and then leave for Ottawa.

The festival opens its 22nd season with The Imaginary Invalid by Moliere.

Starring William Hutt, Pat Galloway and William Needles, the satirical story is about a hypochondriac's attempt to marry his daughter to his physician's son so he will have a built-in family medicare plan. Ironically, Moliere died after his fourth performance, in which he played the invalid, in 1673.

The play, directed by Jean Gascon, the festival company's retiring artistic director, toured Australia early this spring, winning plaudits as an ebullient classic as Stratford was in Russia last year with Mr. Hutt playing King Lear.

On Tuesday, the Festival revives last year's Shakespearean play, Pericles, also directed by Mr. Gascon, with Nicholas Pennell in the title role.

On Wednesday, Mr. Hutt, Miss Galloway and Mr. Pennell come back to the stage with the Dawn Greenhagh in a new production of Love's Labor Lost, directed by Michael Bawtree.

These three will occupy the main theatre until July 23, when Shakespeare's historical drama King John is added to the repertoire.

At the Avon theatre on June 27, Jacques Offenbach's opera La Vie Parisienne will open in English under the title Life in Paris, starring Douglas Campbell and Jack Medley.

At the festival's Third Stage, the program opening July 10 includes the Canadian opera Summoning of Everyman by Charles Wilson, Glan-Carlo Menotti's The Medium starring Maureen Forrester; a drama of Walsh of the Northwest-theatre-goers are anticipating.

Mounted Police and Chief Sitting Bull; and a children's play, Ready Steady Go.

Most interest in this year's festival centres on the work of Mr. Gascon who is going on a year's sabatical after turning over his duties(his summer to the young English director Robin Phillips.

Mr. Gascon, the first Quebec director to head the festival has brought it a certain Gallic charm, especially noted in last year's production of The Taming of the Shrew, in which he had it played in the style of Italian comedy in the 16th and 17th centuries.

Other officers are vice-president, David Kidd, Harry J. Clarke, and secretary-treasurer, John Smith, vice-principal elect of Foxboro Senior Public School.

The federation expressed its desire to contribute to Education Week 1975, when Hastings county will be the host for the provincial opening ceremonies.

Blind Musician To Be Ordained

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — Don't tell Walt Gibbons he can't do it.

By his own admission it might take the 29-year-old singing evangelist a bit longer than the average person to achieve his aims, but with persistence, he succeeds.

Walt Gibbons is blind, and although this has held him back from his chosen vocation, the ministry, he has built a strong rapport with young people through guitar-strumming, his singing and guitar work.

At the age of six, Walk told his mother he wanted to be a missionary. But he later found that no one wanted to train a blind person for the ministry. He was told he would be a burden on the student and was politely refused.

Every North American seminary of the Protestant denomination turned him away—with one exception. The New Jersey-born ministry student was accepted at Waterloo-Lutheran University, but again Walk found his acceptance was limited.

After graduating in 1967 with a general divinity degree, no one would give him a ministry to work in. Nor could he become ordained. Only recently was he offered a ministry in Manitoba, with ordination to take place next May.

For the last three years, Walk has been working with the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, singing and speaking to audiences wherever he goes. His unbridled enthusiasm is contagious and he is quick to building a rapport with people.

Packing two guitars, he has visited his Ontario high schools during the last school year, performing for student assemblies and special luncheons.

"I like to get people involved in things and music is one way to get everyone together," he told one school.

The self-taught guitarist has a set musical approach to religion. He doesn't preach and he doesn't lecture.

"I like to show people that you can have a good time somewhere, and especially church.

"My coming to the school is to illustrate that discipline will free us rather than freeze us in a church."

A recent school appearance was representative of the many others Walk has made this year. The students were receptive to his sermon, yet mellow, voice as he accompanied himself on a 12-string, and later six-string guitar.

The hand-clapping and singing were at a spontaneous and energetic as his performance.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Tuesday, June 4, 1974

Aries (March 21-April 19) Don't try to cover up or rebel-lious your rebellion. Nothing will be gained personally if you take a stand on a hopeless position.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Your business affairs are likely to be complex and jumbled at present. It could be due to an unrealistic outlook.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) You wouldn't be wise to be your own "attorney" if you're involved in some sort of legal matter at this time. Get expert advice.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) Try not to make any commitments regarding work or service that you don't have the competency to perform. Bluffs won't work.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) The big-whot role will prove to be a very expensive one today. Just "do yourself . . . others will still be impressed.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're apt to base an important judgment on inaccurate information. Be certain of all the facts before saying "yes" to anything.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today you'll look for easy outs. You'll promise things you will never trouble devoting later just so others will think you're a nice guy.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not the shrewd buyer you usually are. You could easily be taken in, and purchase merchandise of inferior quality.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're assuming that others are as sincere as you are about keeping their promises. They're not. Get it in writing.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) At present, you're apt to rely more heavily on your hunches and intuition than you should. Stick with what you see, not with what you feel.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You're not likely to be moderate or prudent regarding your social interests. Waste or overindulgence has the upper hand.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Be very careful today that you don't do anything that would reflect unfavorably on your honor or reputation.

One Can Even be Too Regular

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can excessive bowel movements be injurious in any way? Until two years ago I was regular, once a day. At that time I stopped taking codeine tablets which I had taken for many years.

The last two years I have had five to six movements daily regardless of what my diet consisted of. If this does harm, what can be done to bring me back to regularity?—Mrs. M.

Yes, excessively frequent action can be harmful. It is evident that the system loses too much water, minerals, and even food value which ultimately would result in weight loss and weakness.

In your case there is too much information missing for me to draw definite conclusions. Why, particularly, were you taking codeine? Frequent and regular doses of that can in itself subdue bowel action and even lead to constipation.

Then, for example, you were taking codeine because of colitis—to retard bowel action—the colitis may be manifesting itself now.

Likewise you say nothing of some other symptoms which could have a bearing—pressure, pain, bleeding, mucus or whatever.

The best I can advise you—but I do need more—is to have your condition investigated thoroughly by your doctor. What should then be done would depend on the findings—whether it is the result of infection, allergy, intestinal parasites, colitis, nerves. It could, you see, be from quite a few things.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read somewhere that smoke from a cigarette is just about as harmful for a non-smoker's lungs as it is for the smoker. I then told this to a smoker and he didn't believe me. Could you clarify?—C.N.

Not much. I don't think much factual information is known, and the mere fact that somebody says so doesn't make it so.

In fact, I doubt if that statement is true. The basic statistics on lung cancer and smoking showed over 10 times the mortality for smokers as compared to non-smokers. Yet in our present society we can assume that very few non-smokers escape exposure to the cigarette smoke of other people.

It is not to say that gases and particulate matter from someone else's cigarette are totally harmless. The potential for irritation is still there. But a person inhales vastly more smoke, and it is of a higher temperature, which probably has some bearing on the questions, too.

None of the above should be interpreted as saying that non-smokers shouldn't be able to escape from a smoky atmosphere, however. Some with asthma or bronchitis are extremely intolerant even of a trace of smoke in the air, and they are entitled to escape relief. Non-smokers have rights that deserve to be respected.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please give your opinion. My grandson, who is four years old, is allowed to stay up as late as his parents, around 10:30 to 11 p.m. I have told my daughter-in-law he needs his rest, but her answer is that he sleeps until 11 the next morning and is not tired enough for a nap. Please comment.—Mrs. B.A.N.

Twelve hours is probably adequate for a child that age. My only thought is that pretty soon he'll be starting school, and will have to start getting up earlier. So why not start getting him on that practical sleep pattern now? It may not be easy for him to change patterns when that time comes.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald: "A look at the North-South cards only would suggest a seven diamond contract. It makes easily if diamonds break three-two. All declarer has to do is to draw trumps ruff one heart in dummy and discard the other heart on the fourth spade."

Jim: "Even seven notrump isn't too bad a contract. Not that it makes the way ♠ East-West cards are set up, but it would wheel in a lot of the time."

Oswald: "Clubs don't break; diamonds don't break, the heart finesse is wrong and a careless declarer might actually get set at six notrump."

Jim: "He shouldn't be. There is a very simple end play to bring home 12 tricks."

Oswald: "South starts by cashing three diamonds. Then he runs off four spades while discarding a diamond from his hand. Next come three rounds of clubs. At this time West is known to be holding one diamond and two hearts. South throws West in with dummy's last diamond and West has to lead a heart to give South the last two tricks."

You, South, hold: ♠ 6 5 4 ♥ J 4 3 2 ♦ A Q 9 7 ♣ 8 5 3 2. What do you bid now?

A—Bid three diamonds. With seven, high-card points your hand warrants a competitive bid here. Remember, your two-heart call showed an six-card suit.

Your partner has bid three hearts over West's two spades. What do you do after East passes?

Police Still Search for Seven-year-old

OAK RIDGES, Ont. (CP) — Hundreds of police and volunteers searched unsuccessfully during the weekend for a seven-year-old girl missing since Friday night after she left her home in this community 25 miles north of Toronto to spend the night at a friend's house.

Police said Sunday they believe the girl, Cheryl Ann Hanson, may have been picked up by a car and is no longer in the area.

About 800 volunteer searchers and off-duty police combed the area, calling in volunteer firefighters, tracking dogs, a plane and a Toronto radio club.

"We've looked everywhere," Insp. Don Hillock of the York regional police said Sunday. "Thirty-five square miles and we've found nothing."

Cheryl's mother, Mrs. Trevor Hanson, said the girl was going to visit a cousin, Linda Van Horne, about a "10-minute walk" on the same sideroad where the Hanson live.

"I've often walked there myself," Mrs. Hanson said. "The Van Horne kids come back and forth all the time and so did Linda. I didn't have any worries at all about her. She just never got there this time, that's all."

Insp. Hillock sai that "she has just vanished with no clues."

However, commenting on speculation that she might have been picked up in a car, he added:

"Everybody's making them. We're simply looking for her. There's been nothing to say whether there was a car near there or whether she got into a car."

Insp. Hillock noted that the child's disappearance is remiscent of that of Ingrid Bauer, 14, who vanished in August, 1972, from the nearby Kleinburg area. Miss Bauer, who had been bitch-hiking to a friend's house, has never been found.

Davis Supporting Wage-price Plank

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Premier William Davis offered his support Saturday for federal Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield's proposals for wage and price controls.

Mr. Davis also defended his government's controversial land speculation tax and predicted it will be copied by other political jurisdictions in Canada and the western world.

The premier and five or his cabinet members were attending the annual conference of the Young Progressive Conservatives which was held here.

Speaking to 250 delegates at a luncheon, Mr. Davis said if the issue in the federal election campaign is leadership, he supports Robert Stanfield.

"If Stanfield and price controls aren't a long-term solution (to inflation)," Mr. Davis said, "then I say to those people who say it isn't the answer . . . 'For heaven's sake what's yours?'"

Attacking Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, the premier said a "strug of the shoulders isn't the answer. . . . I can't find a single thing in the federal budget . . . a single measure that is anti-inflationary."

The premier said his own government's tax on land speculation is complicated and may need revision in the future but he made no apology for it.

"If can tell you now that it is working," he said. "There is no question that land costs at this moment have stabilized."

He said Ontario is the first jurisdiction in Canada which has attempted to take the heat out of land values.

"If inflation is not brought under some degree of control in other parts of Canada and other Western countries, Ontario won't be the only jurisdiction with some land tax controls."

The premier said responsible people in the development industry have told him the measure was the only thing the government could do.

"It has also had an impact in stabilizing the cost of housing," Mr. Davis said.

Automobile Insurance Premiums Go Up Across Country July 1

TORONTO (CP) — Increases in automobile insurance premiums ranging from six per cent to 16 per cent are expected to go into effect July 1 when private insurance companies in Canada, starting July 1, the Canadian Underwriters' Association (CUA) said Monday.

The CUA is composed of 55 member companies operating in seven provinces. Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia have government-operated car insurance plans.

The proposed new premium rates have been submitted for consideration to the departments of insurance in each of the seven provinces. But only in Alberta must the companies receive provincial approval before using the new rates.

Average proposed rate increases for cars by province: Newfoundland 11.5 per cent; Prince Edward Island 16.3 per cent; Nova Scotia 17.9 per cent; New Brunswick 18 per cent; Ontario 8.3 per cent; and Alberta 16.3 per cent.

Average proposed premium increases for commercial vehicles: Newfoundland 11.3 per cent; P.E.I. 15.1 per cent; Nova Scotia 17.2 per cent; New Brunswick 18.2 per cent; Quebec 10.5 per cent; Ontario 7.2 per cent; Alberta 17.6 per cent.

CUA spokesman said the higher premiums are needed because the insurance companies' operating losses on motor vehicle policies in 1973 "for some companies, reported even larger underwriting losses in the first quarter of this year than they had for 1973, he said.

The losses were attributed to inflationary increases in medical expenses, auto replacement parts and body shop wages.

First UN Troops Arrive at Golan

DAMASCUS (Reuter) — The first troops of the United Nations force which will police disengagement of Syrian and Israeli forces took up positions on the Syrian side of the Golan Heights front today.

A 23-man Austrian reconnaissance team crossed here 30 days after the signing of a disengagement agreement between Israel and Syria.

A spokesman for the United Nations Disengagement Force (UNDOF) said its Peruvian commander, Gen. Gonzale Briceno, arrived here Monday night from Cairo.

Gen. Briceno will have talks here today with UN Secretary-General Kur Waldheim on the role of the UN force in manning the buffer zone to be set up between the Israeli and Syrian armies once disengagement plans have been completed by senior officers from both sides in Geneva.

The UNDOF will increase to about 1,240 men in the next three weeks. A UN spokesman in Cairo said a group of 40 Peruvian soldiers left Egypt Monday night to travel across Israel to the Golan Heights by truck.

The spokesman said the first troops to arrive on the Golan will be followed by further Austrian and Peruvian contingents, plus a 250-man logistics force made up of Poles and Canadians.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Sharp said Canada has dispatched 100 to 150 men to the UNDOF. The troops will be drawn from the 1,000-man Canadian peacekeeping force now in the Middle East. Sharp said the Canadians will be "quickly withdrawn" if fighting breaks out again on the Golan front.

J. Waldheim, who had talks about the Middle East situation with Lebanese President Suleiman Frangieh in Beirut Monday night, was due to arrive here today.

He will discuss with Syrian leaders the UN role in policing the ceasefire and will also tour UN observation posts along the front.

Rabin Passes Test

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Yitzhak Rabin's new Israeli cabinet holds its inaugural meeting today following its approval by a 61-to-51 vote of confidence in the Israeli parliament.

The Knesset accepted the Jewish nation's first native-born — or sabra — premier and his 19-member cabinet after nearly eight hours of stormy debate in which conservative hard-liners said that the new government was too heavy with doves.

The winning margin was one of the closest on a confirmation vote in Israeli history. But it is likely to be much closer on votes to be future since Rabin's coalition numbers only 61 of the 120 Knesset members, or a majority of two.

Although Rabin is known as a moderate on relations with the Arabs and his cabinet includes at least four members who considered the previous government's foreign policy unyielding, the new premier in his statement to the Knesset outlined a policy toward Israel's Arab foes no different from that of his predecessor, Premier Golda Meir.

He said he will work for "a just, honorable" peace by stages "but not at any price" and meanwhile will keep the armed forces at maximum strength. He rejected an independent Palestinian state, negotiations with the Palestinian guerrillas and return of all the territory captured in the 1967 war.

Rabin said his first objective will be to advance the process of peace negotiations with Egypt. Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy in a comment on the new premier's speech called on him to respect Israel's "old colonialist concept" and "accept the presence of a secular 'Palestine state' within or beside her."

Meanwhile, the Palestine guerrilla movement was reported to have agreed at a meeting in Cairo not to join in Arab-Israeli peace negotiations at this time and to set conditions for future participation that Israel would never accept.

The 161-man Palestine National Council was reported preparing to adopt a policy statement declaring that the Palestinian cannot participate in any peace talks as long as they are classified as refugees by United Nation Security Council Resolution 242. The statement says it the refugee designation is changed, they will go to Geneva only if the participants in the negotiations there recognize their right to continue guerrilla warfare against Israel and against King Hussein of Jordan.

On the oil front, the economic commission of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) recommended that the posted price of Arabian light crude oil be raised to $11.67 a barrel from $11.65. But informed sources said the OPEC is expected to reject the proposal since Abderrahman Khene, OPEC's secretary-general, said earlier this week that the organization wants to keep oil prices at the current level for the third quarter of the year.

Faces 8-year Sentence

Rose Appeal Rejected

MONTREAL (CP) — Three justices of the Quebec Court of Appeal have unanimously rejected Jacques Rose's appeal of his conviction July 17, 1973, as an accessory after the fact in the kidnapping of Pierre Laporte.

Barring further appeals, Rose, 29, now faces an eight-year prison sentence.

Chief Justice Lucien Tremblay ruled Monday that Rose had not only evaded arrest but also helped his brother Paul escape following the October, 1970, kidnapping of Mr. Laporte, the Quebec labor minister.

Paul Rose is serving two concurrent life sentences for the kidnapping and murder of Mr. Laporte.

Crown prosecutor Fernand Cote said charges of violating bail conditions probably will be dropped against Jacques Rose, who disappeared three months ago while free on bail pending his appeal on the conviction.

He was arrested by police Saturday in a small apartment in west-end Montreal.

The Crown charged Monday that Rose had violated two of his bail conditions by not establishing residency with his mother in suburban Longueil and failing to report periodically to his probation officer.

Robert Lemieux, Rose's lawyer, has not yet announced whether another appeal will be lodged against the conviction.

Mr. Lemieux said he was refused permission to see Rose "claiming I had been disbarred."

The lawyer was recently given a three-month suspension by the disciplinary committee of the Quebec Bar Association. The suspension was based on allegations that Mr. Lemieux had threatened a garage owner with arrest after he had seized one of his clients' car.

Rose was acquitted of kidnap and murder charges after several trials following the Laporte murder but was convicted as an accessory after the fact in the kidnapping of the labor minister.

Bryce Rejoins Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Bryce Mackasey, the affable Irishman who resigned as minister of immigration minister 18 months ago, was brought back into the federal cabinet as minister of state Monday in a surprise mid-election campaign move by Prime Minister Trudeau.

"In the cabinet; there's nothing wrong with it," the 52-year-old veteran politician told reporters after walking with Mr. Trudeau to the brief swearing-in ceremony at Government House.

First elected in 1962 and running again in the suburban Montreal riding of Verdun, Mr. Mackasey resigned from the cabinet less than a month after the Liberals lost their enormous majority in the October, 1972, election.

Although there were reports to the contrary, he said at the time he was leaving voluntarily, for family and health reasons, not because of pressure or controversy over programs and policies within his department.

Mr. Trudeau said he welcomes Mr. Mackasey back but will not assign him responsibilities until after the election — unless a trouble spot develops.

"If there is, I will send Mackasey there."

Mr. Mackasey becomes the only minister of state with no designated responsibilities.

Opinion Costs $50

CALGARY (CP) — A man who expressed his opinion about Canadian politics by ripping up a voters list was fined $50 in provincial court Monday.

Clarence Louis James Bissett, 36, admitted in court that he removed a voters list posted near city hall and ripped it to pieces. He said he was not sure if it was the minister for before committing the offence.

Bad Kettles Placed Under Ban

CALGARY (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray announced Monday he will issue regulations Thursday banning immediately the importation, advertising and sale of electric kettles releasing potentially hazardous amount of lead in boiling water.

He told the 27th annual meeting of the Consumers' Association of Canada that the ban would apply to electric kettles made with lead solders releasing more than 0.05 parts per million lead in boiling water, considered unsafe by the federal health department.

The association itself was debating a resolution calling on Mr. Gray's department to ban the sale of kettles made with lead solder and order the recall of those types of kettles already sold. That resolution was to be voted today but Mr. Gray beat the association to it.

Mr. Gray said his department does not have authority to order a recall, but added that it would be prepared to assist manufacturers and the association in developing a recall program.

The minister, who opened the annual meeting, also announced a second-year grant of $114,000 for the association's consumer advocacy program, a two-year experimental project. The grant is to help pay for the services of legal counsel and research.

Trenton Boosts Taxes For $4.8 Million Budget

By COLIN BRUCE Staff Reporter

TRENTON — This community's general tax levy went up three mills Monday night.

Coupled with other record requests, the public school auditorial levy on an additional $4,000,000 (thirty-six mills at the average residential tax bill) in the fall, the mill rate for the separate school supporter will pay an extra 27 mills ($6.75).

For the residential ratepayer, public school supporters will pay an 18.5 mill increase and separate school supporters a 9.5-mill hike.

Brian Payne, Town treasurer, said the commercial sector's higher increases cushion the tax boost to residential ratepayers. He says the residential sector picks up 19 per cent more of school budgets than the residential assessment.

Most interesting facet of the budget is a 36-per-cent increase in spending totalling $4.8 million which is yet only a four per cent increase in the tax levy.

Making this possible is the province's full stabilization which pumped an additional $332,000 into Trenton's municipal treasury this year. The total of grants under the act is about $700,000.

Earlier, the question had been where to spend the provincial money. Council had debated whether to dissolve some of the town's capital debt or use the money as a buffer against a large mill rate increase.

The public works department is the town's biggest spender indicates the budget. The department will spend in excess of $2-million — nearly a quarter of the town's budget and 32 per cent more than last year.

Mayor Robert Patrick said council was particularly concerned with better roads and this accounted for the bulk of expenditures in public works. "Council is trying to fulfil election promises," the mayor said.

Also included in the works department budget is a $25,000 personnel study, the basis for a revamping the department.

Next big spender is education, knocking more than 31 per cent out of the town's budget, followed by police costs of $370,000 or 13 per cent of town funds.

The mayor said he was "very happy" with the budget brought in with a relatively small mill increase and said the town had much to thank the provincial government for its grants.

Still, he said "reasonable cutting" was necessary to make spending fit the "times".

Two of the more controversial cuts were to the Chamber of Commerce and the Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Councillor John Bonn, after excusing himself for being absent during some budget discussions, figured the "some" behind cutting the Chamber by 20 per cent and the hospital by 10 per cent grant.

He said council may be doing the same thing as in the past by cutting off the Chamber and then being realizing its benefits and reinstating it.

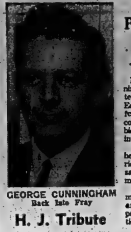
He also pointed out the town gets a grant in lieu of taxes for the hospital and that the town would still "come out ahead" if a $5,000 grant was made to the institution.

He termed both situations as "regrettable decisions."

Councillor Bonn gave a partial list of social agencies that were reduced or chopped by council. These included the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, John Howard Society, Ontario Mental Health, Hastings Historical Society, Chinese Bureau, Mount Evergreen Cemetery, Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association, the town Library, and the Community Gardens.

Total budget figures were not available for these groups which were inviable in the current budget passed Monday.

Plebescite Sought On Legion Plan



TRENTON — A referendum is likely this fall to give town council an indication how Trentonians feel about the east-west alternatives in re-alignment.

Councillor John Bonn, supported by Councillor Peter De Groot, made the suggestion at Monday night's council meeting.

Mayor Robert Patrick said he didn't think a referendum was completely necessary since, completion of a study was not "binding". He said council would use it only as information. A study is now to be taken showing Trenton in a western region with Northumberland-Durham.

Councillor Bonn said because "it would be an easy way to get the people's feelings during the election balloting." he felt it was a "responsible move."

Council also accepted an invitation from Hastings County council to discuss the regional issue. The meeting is expected to take place later in June.

H. J. Tribute Is Still Under Study

PICTON — A special committee of town council, appointed to consider an appropriate memorial to Picton's late mayor H. J. McFarland is continuing its study of proposals.

Larry Richardson, Picton deputy-reeve, chairman of the committee told council that Mrs. McFarland has requested a project that can be completed without cost to the taxpayer.

He said that the committee, including Mayor James Bird and councillors Jack Evans and Bessie Ward, will examine such proposals and when a choice is chosen, bring it before council.

Condominium Project Has General Approval

PICTON — Plans for a 36-unit condominium complex on Pitt Street have received general approval from town council, pending specified submissions by the developer.

A proposal for the condominium-style housing project was discussed at council Monday night following a request by J. and L. Developments of Oshawa for information concerning a building permit.

Town solicitor Jack Ward noted that it has now been confirmed that developer L. McDonald does own land in this area.

"The town is not in a position to complete an agreement with a developer or promoter who does not own land," said the solicitor.

He said if the town was to make an agreement with a party other than the land owner, it would be necessary to re-draw the agreement.

"Also, there is the question of sharing the cost of improvement of the water main services in the Delhi area," added Mr. Ward.

Site of the proposed new development will be on Pitt Street in Delhi.

"We are not speculators, we are builders," Mr. McDonald assured council.

Mr. Ward pointed out that the town has no bylaw dealing with condominiums since this is the first time such a proposal has been made. He suggested council might give thought to this for future development.

The solicitor added that building inspector Morley Brooks probably would expect to see a site plan of the development before a building permit is issued.

"It may look like sticking," said Councillor Jack Evans, "but any requirements for you to consult with the Public Utilities Commission is just a built-in protection for yourself."

Council passed a motion generally approving the condominium project with a request for submission of a detailed application to the building inspector. A request also was made for a complete set of plans and specifications, including a site plan to be approved by the building inspector.

The applicant also must establish his ownership of the property where the project is to be located.

Prince Edward-Hastings Election

It's Cunningham for Liberals

BATAWA — George Cunningham, Trenton High School teacher and twice Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal federal candidate, was acclaimed contested Monday night in his bid for the Liberal nomination in the July 8 federal election.

Mr. Cunningham — though he has failed to take the riding in the last two elections says new plans are being made for this year.

He said following the meeting, "campaign people are working on a new approach for the coming election.

"We'll be taking a new direction this time around," he said.

Mr. Cunningham said his party machinery was set up for the July contest but would not elaborate on plans. He said an announcement of the new approach would be made soon.

Speaking to a packed Batawa auditorium, he said "Canada is in good shape."

Attacking the Conservative price and income freeze scheme he said the system "has failed in every Western industrialized nation it has been tried in."

Mr. Cunningham, an active campaigner in 1972 — said he didn't know if he could work any harder, explaining the reason for the new approach.

Jim Fleming, member of the last parliament for York West, told the convention: "If I save this country money any other convention, I'd say we're almost even."

He urged local Liberals to spend two or three afternoons and evenings campaigning "to get a home-grown George elected."

"Lewis (David Lewis leader of the new Democratic Party) and his party will have in the election," said Mr. Fleming who predicted NDP seats swinging to the Liberals.

"The biggest ripoff in Canadian history was done by David Lewis," he said.

He said "all the good in the budget created by John Turner and all the controls on industry were defeated by Lewis". It was the budget vote that finally brought the Liberal government to its knees after weathering dozens of non confidence motions in its 18 months of power, he said.

Mr. Fleming said "it is time the town had a caring member of parliament and time to re-elect the support of a strong leader."

The riding has been held in the last two elections by Conservative George Hees, after the riding was created by redistribution.

165th Anniversary Marked at Chapel

PICTON — More than 100 visitors turned out Sunday for the 165th anniversary service at Prince Edward County's historic White Chapel.

Opening its doors every year at this time, the White Chapel, otherwise known as the old or Cougar Chapel, the structure takes its visitors back through the etched pages of time to an era of hardships and toils as well as faith and dedication.

Guest speaker for the gathering was Rev. J. Clare Kellogg of Holloway United Church, Belleville, who is being his first service at the historic site. The service was conducted by Rev. Robert Cranston of the Picton United Church, with music provided by Picton United Church organist, Robert Koczot and the United Church Choir.

The Chapel, built in 1809 on land donated by Stephen Cougar, a Loyalist from New Jersey who settled here in 1787, was the first Methodist Church in Prince Edward County, and has since maintained as a place of worship for a longer period than any other church of Methodist origin in Ontario.

The St. Lawrence and Quinte Chapter 379 of the Experimental Aircraft Association is holding their airshow and get-together Saturday June 15, at the Selby Airport.

In case of rain on Saturday, the airshow will be held June 16.

Picton Council Backs Inquiry

PICTON — Town council has endorsed a resolution from the regional municipality of Hastings calling for an inquiry in hockey to the Ontario Hockey Association.

The resolution requests the OHA to hold a special league inquiry into violence permitted in the OHA junior B final first game between the Bramalea Blues and the Hamilton Red Wings.

Picton reeve Ross Cronkwright commented that the government commission named to investigate the question of violence in small and report council to "take a stand" and support the resolution. He observed that the government has allocated $5,000 for this study and said he felt this was an inadequate amount.

"It's not merely a government issue, it's a parent issue," he claimed.

Picton mayor James Bird remarked, "I deplore violence in any of our games." He stressed that he does not want young persons educated to commit "mayhem on ice."

Mayor Bird observed that many televised hockey games end "in a Donnybrook".

He commented, however, that he did not feel endorsement of the resolution was in council's jurisdiction as the government already has decided to act.

"There is an awful lot of coaching today that is teaching these kids how to spear," said councillor Norman March.

"I think its disgusting," he added.

The councillor said that the first of this season's NHL games was "just a show" and suggested that each municipality should convey its feelings to the OHA.

Getting Rolling

PICTON — NDP candidate Harvey Gottfried's campaign got its wheels in motion at a recent NDP working meeting in Picton.

Discussing the NDP track record at the meeting, it was said that the Liberal success in the last Parliament was a direct result of pressure from the NDP caucus. In addition, the increases in old age pensions and family allowances were as a result of NDP efforts.

Hees: Jones Member of No Party

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask. (CP) — The reason Robert Stanfield rejected Leonard Jones as the party's candidate in Moncton is that Mr. Jones is not a party member, George Hees told local Conservatives Monday night.

"You all know, Mr. Jones is not a member of any political party," Mr. Hees, MP for Prince Edward-Hastings in the last parliament, told a party meeting that chose Frank Hamilton as candidate for Swift Current-Maple Creek.

Conservative leader Robert Stanfield has said he rejected Mr. Jones, Mayor of Moncton, because Mr. Jones' opposition to federal bilingualism policy also conflicts with the Conservative party's bilingualism policy.

Mr. Jones won the nomination from a party meeting in Moncton, narrowly defeating Charles Thomas, who had represented the riding in the last parliament.

Mr. Hees said that "Mr. Stanfield refused to accept Leonard Jones as a PC candidate because he is not a member of the PC party and if elective members of the Progressive Conservative party in Moncton voted unanimously against him as a representative of the party."

Mr. Hees also said that the Conservative proposal to freeze wage and price freeze has been carefully thought out and will be practical in application.

He said controls will be immediately introduced if the Conservatives form the government on prices and all forms of income, including wages, fees, dividends, interest, mortgages, and rents.

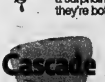
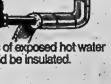
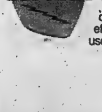
It takes energy to make hot water.
Let's not waste it.



Whatever kind of water heater you have, it makes good sense to use hot water carefully, to conserve energy. Here are a few tips which may help to avoid waste.



You'll use less hot water in the laundry if you wash only full loads. If your washing machine has a water level selector, choose the right amount for the size of the load.



If you have a dishwasher, don't use it until it's fully loaded.

A dripping tap or shower head wastes a surprising amount of hot water, and they're both easy to fix.

Long runs of exposed hot water pipe should be insulated.

While the Cascade water heater is designed to use electricity efficiently, it's up to you to use it wisely, not wastefully.

Thirty Years

The invasion of Normandy 30 years ago was a traumatic time in the world's history. It is commemorated this week — Thursday is the anniversary of D-Day — and for those who took part and survived, and for those who had husbands or sons amid that catastrophic event, memory is tinged with mixed emotions.

If there is hurt, there is gratitude too, for what emerged in the way of freedom and hopes of a better world. Of course it is still far from being a perfect world. Other and even more terrible events and trends have come to haunt the human race, but at least there is peace of a sort, a "balance of terror" as it has been called. Or as Harold MacMillan said when he was Prime Minister of Britain: "War happily has become too dangerous." He was speaking of nuclear war and that of course is the kind of conflict which no nation can afford.

There are signs that the world generally wants permanent peace. But as we have noted, there is much else that must be put right. There is starvation and other inequities between peoples. Enough to occupy our "global village," hopefully in positive and peaceful endeavor, for the rest of our time.

Summertime

While we are waiting for summer to attain something of its full glory — its official start, mid-year, and longest day are not far off — it is pleasant to contemplate in these otherwise frenetic times some of the signs of this season.

In the countryside it is lilac time with its heady scent and farmers and an increasing number of home growers are busy in field and plot.

Downtown, the bright outfits of the fair sex defy any lingering coolness of temperature.

Shoppers are out and about and while Metropolitan Stores on the one hand has closed down, on the other the city has another sign of progress in the shape of the Bank of Nova Scotia's handsome new building. It occupies the corner site on Victoria and Front which was the scene a couple of years or so ago of a disastrous fire. One of the city's more venerable business blocks was lost in that blaze.

The past is past though and it is a reflection of the business area's essential strength that this bank has gone up in place of what was there before. Meanwhile it is ironic with regard to the seasonal theme above, that the paintings of Canadian scenes in one of Front Street's more attractive show windows reflect in most instances a fall theme — autumn leaves and all that.

Roll on summer!

Matter Of Origin

An unsigned note, written in the white space of our recent editorial on CBC coverage of David Lewis and the NDP, avers: "I think you should apologize to the Welsh people! David Lewis was born in Poland July 23, 1909 and is a Welsh Jew. That is perhaps where his philosophy comes from."

Well we were indeed aware of Mr. Lewis' East European origins, but in noting his Welsh intonation we recall a television interview some years ago when the interviewer also made reference to it. We came in too late to the interview to hear the whole story of Mr. Lewis' "Welsh connection" if any. However, the name Lewis bears now is Welsh and we alluded to the accent simply as part of the Lewis legend.

Since the editorial was written we have the impression CBC coverage has balanced out more vis-a-vis the various parties.

A Record Of Double Dealing

Canada's Foreign Policy Exhibits Many Contradictions

By JOHN D. HARBRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Canada's mixed or perhaps confusing foreign policy in several international areas also has its affects on where and how we develop our export trade and overseas aid.

Hence one government agency like the Canadian International Development Agency prepares to give "humanitarian aid" to southern African liberation movements while another one, the department of industry trade and commerce, promotes business with racist South Africa.

The Export Development Corp. recently signed an agreement with the National Bank of Cuba to finance the sale of 20 diesel locomotives to the Cuban state railways.

At the same time the EDC is also involved in financing private companies in Canada doing business in booming and capitalistic Brazil, very strong ideological enemy of Castro's Marxist Cuba in Latin America.

The Export Development Corp. (EDC) came under particular fire recently for alleged moves to make funds available to Chile under Allende as a bad business risk, though it is now ready and able to do so again with the new military junta.

Perhaps the most criticized of our apparent double dealings in foreign economic and political policies have been our defence-sharing contracts with the United States, maintained for many years at the same time we were a member nation of the old International Control Commission overseeing the Vietnam war.

Successive cabinet representatives have never satisfactorily explained how Canada, a traditional neutral role in Vietnam could maintain this while Canada's defence products, for example Caribou STOL aircraft were on duty with the U.S. Army in Vietnam. On one occasion a well-published Canadian picture showed a U.S. Army Caribou split in two in mid-air over Danang in the Corps area rocket.

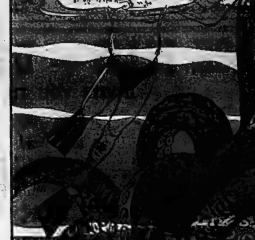
That aircraft and hundreds of other directly and indirectly related defence products were made available to the U.S. under a 1945 agreement which did not specifically exempt its use like the one in Vietnam between 1963 and 1973.

The rationale from our point of view was that defence production sharing meant a sizable and growing portion of our trade with the United States and was therefore very much in the national economic interest to maintain.

Hence it would appear than the matter of sustaining it while serving as a neutral observation on the old Control in the mid and late 1960s.

There has been no adequate explanations over the years why we could sell arms on one hand, function as a neutral country in the same war where they were being used on the other, the rationale for trading with competing authoritarian nations might just defy credibility but there they don't want their money to be tied up in something that isn't being used.

In short, gold is just another commodity.



True, it is a commodity that has risen five-fold in value in recent years, because of worldinflation, supply shortages, political instability, and a drop in production from the world's mines.

Any rational analysis of today's market for gold — if such is possible, in view of the psychological tricks that the plays on us—would suggest a cautious approach.

It is by no means certain that millions of Americans will rush to buy gold when and if their president permits them to do so.

But even if they do, their demand could well be offset by supply emanating from the central banks of the Western world.

It may be true that almost nobody understands gold and its price. But one thing is known— it has already had a short, sharp rise, and this is the morning after.

Gold Yields Up Its Mystique To Few

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

The latest flurry of buying in gold bullion—touched off by the U.S. Senate's passage of a bill that might eventually permit Americans to own gold—illustrates a point attributed to Baron Nathan de Rothschild:

"There are only two men who know about gold. One is a director of the Bank of England. The other is a clerk in the Bank of France. The trouble is that they disagree."

If some of us—apart from the English director and the French clerk—know about gold, we hide it under the price shoots up on news of a largely meaningless political action in Washington.

The U.S. Congress on Sept. 21, 1973, passed the Par Value Modification Act which authorizes the president to lift the ban on gold ownership by private U.S. citizens.

Perhaps because of other things on his mind, or because he's concerned about adverse effects on the U.S. balance of payments, Richard Nixon has never exercised that authority much to the displeasure of the U.S. gold industry.

The bill passed by the U.S. Senate on May 29 is similar to the 1973 bill—and still requires the approval of the House of Representatives and then of the president.

People who take a speculative fling in gold bullion or in the stocks of mining companies may be taking a bigger gamble than they realize.

It's worth remembering, for example, that the shortage of underground miners is an increasingly difficult operating problem for Canadian gold mines.

And that higher bullion prices don't necessarily mean higher earnings, since wages are indexed to the prices of gold at some companies.

And that some mines respond to higher bullion prices by producing lower grades, thus maintaining a level rate of pay-out.

"Taking an even longer view, speculators should consider the possibility that governments may decide to cash in their gold holdings, thus depressing the price of the yellow metal.

After all, the present system of international transactions has functioned without gold for some years now, and the major trading nations might just decide that they don't want their money to be tied up in something that isn't being used.

In short, gold is just another commodity.

True, it is a commodity that has risen five-fold in value in recent years, because of worldinflation, supply shortages, political instability, and a drop in production from the world's mines.

Any rational analysis of today's market for gold — if such is possible, in view of the psychological tricks that it plays on us—would suggest a cautious approach.

It is by no means certain that millions of Americans will rush to buy gold when and if their president permits them to do so.

But even if they do, their demand could well be offset by supply emanating from the central banks of the Western world.

It may be true that almost nobody understands gold and its price. But one thing is known— it has already had a short, sharp rise, and this is the morning after.

Denticare Program Anticipated

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Ontario eventually will have a denticare program.

One can say this with certainty. The only question is the timing and the form it will take.

Both opposition parties echoed a demand Premier Davis and even the government says, and says quite strongly, that a denticare plan is what there isn't the money available at the moment.

A good guess, at least, can be made about the timing.

It can be predicted with some conviction that denticare will be the next general election, probably a year from this fall, the government party knows some provision in their platform for a dental program.

The pressure will have increased even more for one by then, from the public as well as the politicians (dentists themselves favor a program).

And as it appears now the government will be looking for some popular planks, and perhaps desperately, to take to the public.

Assuming that the government does come up with a program, it will be interesting to see what form it takes.

Presumably it will follow the lines of the present medical program, based on a semi-insurance principle with a small premium and large premiums but the major share of the cost coming out of public funds.

From a standpoint of pure equity this, of course, is not ideal.

It means that those who take care of their teeth, who use preventive measures and regular check-ups, pay more than their share and carry a section of the public.

But a denticare program that directly rewards dentists themselves, Yorster's racist South African regime, various Communist-bloc governments, a range of Latin American strongmen regimes, we would destroy many trade prospects.

One does not need to be a man's politician to do business with him. A big newcomer to our land who has had Iran from which in spite of the shah's economic policies remains, in short as despotic a country as you can find in Asia.

Stock Exchange Causes Misgivings

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

The stock market has lately seemed like a machine whose gears are loose, worn or not quite round. It creaks along, making steam with every passing week.

Some would say that it is growing redundant, soon to be the subject of ever-dwindling reminiscences.

"I feel concerned about what seems for the first time to be some shaken confidence in the system generally," says the newly elected chairman of the Toronto Stock Exchange, Robert T. Morgan of Wood Gundy Ltd.

He argues that the stock-market system has "a very important economic function in the economy—that is, to direct capital as efficiently as possible. If the system was not there, people could not raise money to finance new businesses.

To replace charges that the recent substantial increase in brokerage commissions was a reason for the stock market's malaise.

If we cut the commission rates in half tomorrow morning, it would not result in any increase in business," Mr. Morgan contends.

J. R. Kimber, the full-time president of the TSE, blames misguided government policies for the market's deterioration.

"We have so many major goals in Canada. One of those goals is for Canadians to own more of the Canadian 'economy.

"Yet we see governments in Canada, hitting at the corporations, which is really hitting at the individual shareholder. People in government don't appreciate the significance of the shareholder, who is the owner of our enterprise."

The TSE president described as "shocking" the proposal in federal Finance Minister John Turner's May 6 budget to exempt the first $1,000 of interest income from tax.

"This would discourage Canadians from investing in Canadian securities, including mutual funds, and thus run counter to the government's apparent interest in promoting greater ownership of domestic industry," he said.

But the budget proposal appears to have been designed, at least in part, to encourage owners of deposit Savings Bonds to retain them. Redemptions have been a big concern because of the reducing government cash balances to unusually low levels.)

Another veteran professional of the stock market thinks that it can overcome its current problems, critical as they are.

He is Arthur Irving of the liquid savings and investments of the Canadian public through inflation and its normal political fall-out—accelerated legislation to the doctrinaire left which is hostile to private savings and investment—has led many people to question whether the system can survive the strains imposed on it," says Robert C. Stone of McEwen Securities Ltd., Toronto.

"The system is probably strong enough to survive," he adds.

What happens as a result of each of these crises, however, is that the system gets bigger—in the expense of the private sector."

What will it take to restore stock markets to a reasonable state of confidence?

That's anybody's guess—perhaps a change in the U.S. presidency or the Canadian government would do it.

Failing that, the signal might not come until the upward spiral in interest rates is checked—and that will happen only when the ultimate borrower refuses to pay the going rate of interest.

Labor Council Proposal 'Divisive'

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Since Mr. Reilly introduced his notice of motion at the labor council meeting, I could not help thinking about the implications of the move. The more I thought, the more I became aware of the serious and devisive implications that would result regardless of the outcome of the meeting.

I have a particular interest in the education system and its reasoning, during the birth of the United Way, that we could not be happy financially or successful without the inclusion of organized labor in the decision-making level, so that we can influence and direct the contributions of the many. My reasoning was based on what I learned by attending the mid-winter conference in Toronto and studying the successful campaigns and their organizations.

The record shows that we did have successful campaigns when every facet of our community participated in harmony, and it is my humble opinion that we cannot succeed until peace and harmony permeate our community again. That will not happen regardless whether the motion succeeds or fails, since it will polarize opinions that will be further magnified for and against, and retard the success of the United Appeal. That will create serious consequences for all the agencies, for all those thousands who receive benefits.

Now let us look at the facts. I am not a member and am not fully aware of all the services provided by the YMCA. However, I do know there is a fine swimming pool, and well qualified instructors are provided to teach swimming to all who desire. To learn this basic human state is the world does make sense.

If we were to cut ourselves off from trading with countries whose governments are not to our liking, Yorster's racist South African regime, various Communist-bloc governments, a range of Latin American strongmen regimes, we would destroy many trade prospects.

One does not need to be a man's politician to do business with him. A big newcomer to our land who has had Iran from which in spite of the shah's economic policies remains, in short as despotic a country as you can find in Asia.

Hees Differs

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP) — Inflation, not leadership, is the most important issue in the July 8 federal election campaign, Progressive Conservative George Hees said Monday.

Mr. Hees, member for the Ontario riding of Prince Edward-Hastings in the last House, said Prime Minister Trudeau was raising leadership as a red herring because he did not want to deal with the issue of inflation.

Freeze Under Fire

HAMILTON (CP) — Robert Andras, manpower and immigration minister, said Monday that Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield's proposal for a 90-day freeze on prices is "just an inducement to retailers to put up their prices for those 90 days."

Mr. Stanfield "hasn't said what he'll do after those 90 days," Mr. Andras said at a meeting with the campaign committee for Gus MacFarlane, Liberal candidate for Hamilton Mountain.

The manpower minister conceded the major issue in the July 8 election campaign is the generally rising cost of living.

Communists Expand Field

EDMONTON (CP) — The Communist Party of Canada has fielded 67 candidates so far for the July 8 federal election, more than twice as many as it entered in 1972, William Kashtan, national party leader, said Monday.

He told a news conference the party hoped to do better than in the last federal election when all 31 candidates lost their deposits, failing to receive at least half of the total votes of voters.

Lewis Woos Elusive Quebec

By GERRY BOURDEAU
The Canadian Press

While other political leaders rested Monday, New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis wooed the elusive NDP vote in Quebec and received good news.

The Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL), the province's largest labor group, called on its 200,000 members to support the NDP for the July 8 general election.

The NDP has never elected a member to the Commons in Quebec.

In Saint John, N.B., just before moving on to the Quebec City area Monday, Mr. Lewis expressed delight with QFL's backing.

He said it marks the first time the group has thrown its weight behind the NDP in such a specific way, "although there has been support before."

Prime Minister Trudeau, who was to move his campaign to Vancouver today, announced the appointment of Bryce Mackasey, former manpower and immigration minister, to the federal cabinet.

Mr. Mackasey, who resigned Nov. 27, 1972, amid controversy over reforms he instituted in the unemployment insurance program, was sworn in as minister of state. No other changes were involved in the cabinet now 31 members.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, who completed a six-day tour through Central and Western Canada last weekend, went to Montreal today and then to the East Coast.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette was to begin his western campaign in Vancouver today.

While, in Saint John, Mr. Lewis toured the farmers' market and was made an "honorary Loyalist" by Mayor Bob Lockhart.

Later, in Quebec City, he criticized the government for subsidizing ship-building companies without establishing a Canadian merchant marine.

He told a news conference after a 30-minute ferry ride across the St. Lawrence between Quebec City and Levis, that each shipbuilding should provide both shipyard jobs and build the merchant navy.

During the ferry crossing, Mr. Lewis made brief use of his rapidly improving French, greeting passengers and speaking exclusively in French.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the inflamed, infected tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent bleeding which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Land Tax Bill Becomes Law

TORONTO (CP) — The government controversial land speculation tax received third reading and royal assent Monday night, after more than a month of hard-fought debate.

The tax, which places a 50-per-cent surcharge on profits from land speculation, was approved by a 64-to-35 vote, with the New Democratic Party joining the Liberals in opposing the measure.

Only key point remains unresolved — it still is not known whether the federal government will allow the speculation taxes to be deducted as business expenses when federal taxes are calculated.

If the land taxes are not deductible, the over-all tax rate could be as high as 115 per cent of the profits gained from a land sale.

The Conservatives have said that precedents favor federal agreement in allowing the land taxes as deductions, but opposition MPs say that matters have battled the opposite is true.

Finance Minister John Turner, responsible for federal tax policy, has said he wants to clarify the proposals before making a decision.

More than 30 amendments were tacked on to the original bill, introduced April 9.

In the final day of debate Monday, Treasurer John White and Revenue Minister Arthur Meen — the sponsor of the bill — both supported the measure strongly.

Mr. White described the bill as a ballmark legislation that breaks new ground in the field of controlling speculators.

Mr. Meen said he believes the tax will be allowed as a federal deduction.

Opposition spokesmen from both the NDP and the Liberals criticized the bill, as they have done for more than a month.

NDP Leader Stephen Lewis said the measure is full of loopholes.

Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) increase the price of both land and rental properties.

Morton Shulman (NDP—High Park) said the bill "will come back to haunt us all."

He said it will serve to dissuade builders from developing apartment properties.

Pat Lawlor (NDP—Lakeshore) predicted that the tax "will make a major contribution to bring the Tory government down."

Traffic Tribunal Tested

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario North York tribunal will test has launched a traffic tribunal new procedures aimed at gradas a pilot project in an attempt ually removing provincial offto remove certai provincial fences from the criminal procfic offences from the court- ess.

Attorney-General Robert Welch told the legislature Monday that the newly-created pilot project, he said, allows a new plea — "guilty with an explanation."

"In many instances an offender may feel that although he or she has committed an offence, there were mitigating circumstances surrounding the commission of the charge which they would like to bring to the attention of the court.

"The only present avenue of appeal is a plea of not guilty, whereupon the offender proceeds to trial," said Mr. Welch.

He explained that the new plea will not be available to motorists charged with parking offences, careless driving or traffic offences resulting from accidents.

The tribunal—for minor traffic offences only — will use a number of experienced justices of the peace from Metropolitan Toronto as hearing officers.

The innovations were recommendations made in the report to the committee on alternative forms of trial and disposition for minor traffic offences under provincial statutes and municipal bylaws.

The new project will allow an offender to visit a hearing room in the Metro Toronto borough of any time following the service of the summons and up to one day before the trial date.

An integral part of the new motoring process will be a driver improvement program, he said.

Few Women In LCBO

TORONTO (CP) — John Clarke, spokesman for consumer and commercial relations, told the legislature Monday he is not aware of any discrimination against women in the hiring policies of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario (LCBO).

Mr. Clarke's remarks followed questions by Opposition MP Michael Cassidy (NDP—Ottawa Centre) who alleged that the LCBO discourages women from seeking jobs with the board and pays them lower wages than men in the same positions.

Mr. Cassidy called for an inquiry.

He said figures provided by the board show that 184 women are employed full-time with the LCBO, compared with 3,222 men.

All of the board's 389 store managers and 390 assistant-managers are men, he added.

Lewis Questions Car Prices

TORONTO (CP) — The price ranging.

Mr. Lewis said automobile prices in the U.S. are 11% per cent lower than in Canada and he asked the minister to take action to protect consumers.

Mr. Clement said he has no intention of writing to either the companies or the federal government on the matter.

"... I would, if I felt any purpose was to be served, certainly be the first to do so," the minister said.

The NDP leader said the Ford Motor Co., has an 14.5-per-cent return rate in the U.S. and a 35½-per-cent in Canada.

"I ask you, who protects the consumers of Ontario from what may be price gouging some of us think clearly is price gouging?"

Mr. Clement said most of the cars manufactured in Canada are sold domestically and that makes it a matter for federal monitoring.

Transportation Full of Myths

MONTREAL (CP)—Transportation in Canada may be beset with more myths than any other economic sector, members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association were told today.

Howard Darling of Ottawa said one such myth is that freight rates are holding back the economic development of many regions of Canada.

Mr. Darling, a former federal government transport advisor now engaged in private consulting work, said no amount of adjusting freight rates could bring about the economic advantages that some regions seem to want.

"The idea that any town or village should have the possibility to become an industrial hub of the nation is harmless rhetoric that reach the ears of any child could become prime minister or that anyone considers first prize in the Olympic lottery," he said.

Donald E. Armstrong, head of the business faculty at McGill University, said it is wrong to believe that transportation would be improved if completely nationalized.

If there is a shortage of rail capacity, new capacity would be installed if only the price of transportation services were allowed to rise relative to other prices, he said.

Another fallacy, said John Eyre, president of Montreal-based Sagaway Shipping Ltd., is that Canada is suffering from a lack of a merchant marine.

Competition among shipping firms in several countries is intense enough to protect industry and shipping operations there, he said.

"This may explain the fact that there is no real demand from Canadian labor or industry for a national flag merchant marine," he said.

However, Mr. Eyre said uncertainties that are likely to crop up in cargo availability at reasonable rates dictate that Canada should have "some nucleus salt-water marine activity" to go into use after 1980.

A spokesman for the trucking industry identified the major transportation problem for the rest of the century as rebuilding the railway infrastructure.

J. C. Carruth of Mississauga, Ont., president of the Canadian Trucking Association, said the question is whether railways will be allowed to generate the capital necessary for reinvestment or whether expansion will be funded through "half-baked" government subsidies.

Mayors Discuss Finances

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities launched a two-day convention Monday with news that could shape future municipal financing systems.

Today the more than 1,000 delegates consider scores of resolutions and break into regional groups to discuss proposed changes to the federation constitution.

Before the delegates was the announcement of a tri-level task force to study public financing of municipal programs.

In other words, the federation, provincial and federal governments are going to get an accounting of what financial programs are available to Canadian municipalities. They also hope to get some idea of how the municipalities can meet rising demand for services with limited tax resources.

The way Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford put it:

"This (task force) could be the beginning of a process that may well revolutionize public finances in this country.

"It may well trigger a complete rethinking of how tax dollars are collected and how they are returned to the taxpayer in the form of government programs and services."

Mr. Basford said it is hoped the report, expected by October, 1975, will lead to better coordination of municipal problems than the piecemive suggestion of one province.

"An example is the Ontario treasurer's proposal to give through any extra dollars that he receives from the federal government to the municipalities," he said. But there is no guarantee that this is the way it will be done.

Bell Gives Elderly 25-cent Break

OTTAWA (CP) — A Bell Canada spokesman said Monday the company would exempt anyone over age 65 from the company plan to implement a 25-cent charge for directory assistance.

Ernest Saunders, the Bell lawyer who has argued the company's case for higher rates before the Canadian transport commission, said this is proof that Bell is open to suggestions from outside the company.

His closing remarks in the rate case suggests the company is smarting under accusations that it is insensitive to problems of the poor and infirm.

To benefit from the exemption persons more than 65 would make application to the company and provide proof of age. The exemption would apply to local calls only.

Quebec had opposed Bell's plans to raise the rate for local pay telephone calls to 20 cents from 10.

Quebec lawyer Ross Goodyear had argued that available evidence indicated the public accounted for a major portion of pay calls at pay phones.

Skeleton Identified

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A skeleton found eight days ago near Stratford, Ont., has been identified through dental records as that of a London girl who disappeared almost four years ago, police said today.

Sergeant O'Connell, 15 at the time, has was seen leaving a drop-in centre here Aug. 14, 1970.

Insp. Nicholas Purdell of the provincial police criminal investigation branch said he is treating the girl's death as homicide but that the cause of death has not been determined.

Indications are the girl had been dead since to 18 months, he said, adding there was no evidence of violence.

"The skeleton was discovered May 26 in a depression near a concession road.

Fashions From Future Designers

TORONTO (CP) — A fashion show of 94 garments by almost as many of Canada's future fashion designers was presented in Toronto recently. The audience included clothing manufacturers, there to see what the young designers had to offer.

The show, staged by design college graduates Suzanne Mallinson and Anne Podwin, was sponsored by Fashion Canada, the arm of the federal department of industry, trade and commerce which exists and promotes Canadian fashions. The show presented the best of designs submitted by students from all the Canadian design colleges and private fashion institutes.

Most of the entries were from Toronto-area colleges, but two were from Cohoir Cappoel in Montreal, and several were from British Columbia — the B.C. Academy of Fashion, the Lydia Lawrence Institute and Douglas College.

The models were all student studying modelling at design colleges or private modelling schools.

Gatsby Look

Helen McManus of Oakville, Ont., and Sheridan college designed this three-piece cream knit suit with green patterned top, reflecting the current Gatsby look. The outfit was one of the winning designs at a recent fashion show featuring designs by students. (CP Photo)

This green crepe evening gown by Nancy Moriabita of the B.C. Academy of Fashion is reminiscent of medieval times. The long pointed sleeves are trimmed with pearls. It was among 94 fashions by student designers shown in Toronto recently.

McAuley—Upton

A wedding of local interest took place recently in St. Francis-in-the-Woods Church, West Vancouver, B.C. when Rev. R. C. Wild united in marriage Heather Allison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Upton of Vancouver, and Dennis James McAuley, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. (Mike) McAuley of Vancouver, formerly of Belleville.

The bride wore a silk shantung gown appliqued with sequins and seed pearls. Her full-length silk tulle veil fell from a headdress of sequins and seed pearls, and her bouquet was gardenias, white roses, baby's breath and heather.

Her attendants were her sisters Colleen and Shelagh Upton, and the groom's sister, Jane McAuley. All three wore dotted yellow Swiss organdy over crepe with daisy trim and large picture hats. They carried bouquets of white daisies, yellow friesia and baby's breath.

The groom's attendants were Tony Tennant of Vancouver, Earl McDonald of Vancouver, formerly of Belleville, and Arlen Burleigh of Nanaimo, formerly of Trenton.

The reception was held at Spuraway Lodge, after which the newly-married couple left on a motor trip to California. On their return they will reside in West Vancouver.

Seeley — See

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT SEELEY

On Saturday May 4, 1974, Patti Lynda See, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ormond See of Kingston Ont., became the bride of Robert Seeley, son of Bernice Seeley of Belleville and Gilbert Seeley of RR 7 Belleville.

Father Fleury officiated the ceremony in Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Kingston.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The bride's sister, Debbie MacRae of Mississauga Ont., acted as Matron of Honour, Judy See of Kingston, sister-in-law of the bride and Charlene Seeley of Belleville sister of the groom, acted as bridesmaids.

Robert Mitchell of Kingston acted as bestman. David See of Kingston, brother of the bride, and Darrell Seeley of Belleville, brother of the groom acted as ushers.

Following the ceremony the couple attended a reception and dance at the 401 Inn; later they left on their honeymoon.

The couple will reside in Kingston, Ontario.

Customers look over homebaked goods and kitchen essentials at a Women's Institute market at St. Albans in England. The Women's Institute movement now has about 250 Co-operative Markets operating in the country and reports the business service is a total success — commercially and from a customer's standpoint. (CP Photo)

WI Markets Are British Hit

LONDON (CP) — British's 320,000-member Women's Institute (WI) movement is involved in a business venture that is a total success, both commercially and from a customer's standpoint.

The organization's Co-operative Markets—which now number about 250—offer consumers foodstuffs ranging from homebaked goods and kitchen essentials to the exotic culinary delights such as aubergines and courgettes and celeriac.

Producers of these foods can carry home 90 per cent of the takings since the WI markets operate at a low overhead. Operating costs are kept o a minimum and none of the proceeds go to middlemen.

Basically, the success of the markets lies in the proprietors of the market stalls themselves. They are persons who grow or make their wares on their own premises and who might not otherwise be able to distribute the rnto the public.

Because these proprietors are not hard-nosed businessmen, they know exactly what their product and service appeals to their customers.

The co-operative market concept started in 1932 to help unemployed persons and forces' military personnel find outlets for the surplus produce from their gardens and small holdings. Today the WI markets help relative newcomers in the shopping arena—such as young mothers who would like to earn money but whose home commitments will not allow them to take steady employment—to be a commercial enterprise," says the National Federation of Women's Institutes.

"Turnover is not the only yardstick for us. We're pleased because we're filling a real need."

Miss Balmer said that often young women hesitantly approach stallholders for advice on domestic matters—how to cook a chicken or how to preserve garden produce, for example. Such young women may never have thought of joining their local WI chapter, she said, where they can attend classes to learn domestic and other useful skills.

In some localities, one-day craft schools help propagate traditional crafts such as rug and macrame.

Although the whole sentiment underlying the Co-operative Market concept is one of a friendly, people-oriented program, the commercial viability cannot be ignored.

Miss Balmer says, the markets' turnover has nearly quadrupled since 1969 to £2 million (about $4 million. Takings by markets vary according to area, site location, but earnings for half-day markets can be anywhere from £50 or £75 to £100 or £200, Miss Balmer said.

Successful Living

Clean Is Beautiful!

By DORIS CLARK

This message is for our Canadian girls, but if the boys want to peek, they might get a hint or two about being eye-catching when they are in their teens.

How we look is so important to first impressions that it can make all the difference in our approach to people and all the difference in having self-confidence or a dismayed feeling of inferiority. Beauty, in this sense, is far more than skin deep.

Why do you think doctors prescribe beauty care for women making a comeback from a nervous breakdown? It's because of the fact that the way they look makes such a great difference in the way they feel.

To be young is to be lovely to look at. Even if you think your nose is too long or your eyes are the wrong color, there is a freshness and alertness, a natural pinkness to skin tones, in the teens, that some of us older folk would give our eye teeth for. Every one of you blossoming young things can be a living doll.

Of course there are things you have to do about it, you have to bath — clearing your skin of body wastes, avoiding B.O., relaxing your-tensed-up nerves in a warm, sudsy tub, and stimulating blood flow.

Male or female, you need complexion care; and if you have obvious pimples or blackheads you need a soap and scrub routine at least three or four times a day.

If you have an oily skin type, the massaging in of a night cream will not only give skin that dewy look but it will stimulate circulation underneath.

Cleanliness applies to hair, skin, nails, everything. Make-up looks like a new disguise if the skin underneath is still greasy or layered with dust.

So cleanliness comes first, I'll give you the next installment later.

Dear Doris: Where I work there are these three girls all about the same age as I am 26 I don them favors at work, and they talk real nice to me, but sometimes when I look up they'll be whispering and kind of look at me and give me a fake smile.

My mother thinks I am being used by them. Everyone else says the same thing, but I don't know.

Don't Know Who To Trust Anymore.

Dear Don't Know: If it is so obvious to everyone else, perhaps you are being used. Of course there is no reason why you should not be nice to these girls, but you don't have to take their whispering to heart.

Be as good a person as you know how, and they'll have only pleasant things to say about you! Meanwhile, keep your own counsel, and don't get involved in office gossip.

Confidential to Heartsick: In order to inherit, it is not necessary to be present at the reading of the will. As for travelling long distances to funerals, it depends entirely on how well you can afford the trip, and how dear the deceased was. If you can't manage it financially, you shouldn't feel guilty.

(Have you asked Doris about your dilemma? Perhaps she can suggest a Canadian resource that will help. Write to her in care of this newspaper.

Ann Landers

Quack's Help Can Hinder

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a 50-year-old woman and have the children's consent to write this letter. You'll never print it. Everyone knows you are in the hip pocket of the physicians and psychiatrists, but here goes anyway.

My particular subject is by the "Psychiatric Help." It's nothing but a jungle of quacks, competents, and —consciders who are crazier than their patients. Under the guidance of her two therapists, I experienced my two divorces and have seen my daughter turn as trashy and as foul-mouthed—that when she left home, I was relieved.

According to my first psychiatrist I needed treatment for "a childish need to be dependent." The symptom: My husband spent (by actual count) 67 days a week at home, never changing sleeping. The rest of the time he was out carousing around. My therapis told me I exhibited a pathological dependency on my husband and that now my husband was dependent with such details as, "Should I

Dear Smarter: Psychiatry has done beautifully for some very little for others, and has been downright destructive for those who fell into the wrong hands. Of course there are some really psychiatrist. In fact, many of them selected the field in search of solutions to their own problems.

Your problem was staying too long — with the wrong one. If you weren't helping, Don't damn the entire profession because you drew a couple of losers. For many patients, therapy has been a life-saving experience, and I've received hundreds of letters to prove it.

IODE Image Changing

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire (IODE) members are wearing middle-class matrons in flowered hats and white gloves. Right?

Wrong, says Lorna Dean, national president of IODE's Canadian branch. That image is fading fast, she says, partly because many of the wheel-and-deal clubwomen who once dominated the ranks of the IODE have cast off their gloves and joined the labor force.

On Sunday, about 800 women from across the country will begin the group's 74th annual meeting with a four-day agenda that will include discussion of projects in the 900 IODE chapters from Yellowknife to St. John's, Nfld., such as veterans' welfare information, grants to research and help for kidney-disease victims.

The typical volunteer now is a younger, more socially involved person, Mrs. Dean says.

"Volunteers today want to see what they are doing. They don't just want to write a cheque and be done with it."

Mrs. Dean says IODE membership has reached out to include native and immigrant women, and the group is trying to adjust its structure to the busier but more society-oriented woman.

As a result, she says, much of the more than $1 million the IODE raises each year is being poured into community projects. Less and less is being committed to tax-visible overseas project.

Uppermost in everyone's mind, Mrs. Dean says, will be the group's 75th anniversary next year. For the occasion, the IODE has been a special red poppy developed by Toronto horticulturist John Schlecen. It hopes to sell 75,000 of the bushes in 1975 to support its various projects.

Mrs. Dean chuckles when asked if she thinks the name Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire may stop potential new members in their tracks.

"Certainly, the name is no drawback within our own membership. To many people, changing it would mean losing a large part of our traditions and stability."

"It's a grand old name," she sighs, but it may not stand up to pressure for a more-unisexist flavor from modern voiceers.

Rapid System Stalls

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government's experimental magnetic levitation rapid transit system will not operate as intended at next year's Canadian National Exhibition because of delays over wording of construction contracts, the head of the Crown-owned Ontario Transportation Development Corp. said Monday.

Ken Foley said it will take about 3½ months to reword contracts, redesign stations and guideways and submit them for new tenders.

The existing wording of the contracts was such "that it made a guy who built a station platform responsible for making the trains work," he said. "It didn't make sense."

Morgentaler Loses Round

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler of Montreal, already convicted of performing an illegal abortion, lost another legal round in the Supreme Court of Canada Monday.

The high court ruled that the 58-year-old doctor must return to the courtroom of trial Judge James Hugessen of he Quebec Court of Queen's Bench to be sentenced.

Sentenced to Three Lives

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — William Prater was sentenced Monday to three concurrent life sentences for the shooting deaths of United Mine Workers official Joseph Yablonski and Yablonski's wife and daughter.

Judge Edward Carney of Erie County court, who imposed the sentences, said they are to be served concurrently with a federal life sentence Prater received earlier on a charge of violating the Yablonskis' civil rights.

Prater, a 53-year-old former UMW official from LaFollette, Tenn., was convicted in March, 1973, on three counts of first-degree murder in the 1969 deaths of the Yablonskis.

Prater had testified for the prosecution at the trials of former UMW head W. A. (Tony) Boyle and Albert Pass, former lieutenant to Boyle.

Boyle and Pass also have been convicted of first-degree murder in the case. Boyle was sentenced to life in prison. Pass has not yet been sentenced.

Study Way To Free Pilot

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Monday that Canada and the United States are still "attempting to figure out the best way" of getting kidnapped citizens out of the clutches of Ethiopian guerrillas.

At a meeting earlier in the day, Mr. Sharp said he and U.S. Ambassador William Porter had discussed the capture of Calgary helicopter pilot Grant Wyatt and an unidentified U.S. nurse.

Mr. Wyatt, 30, a flyer for Can West Aviation Ltd. of Calgary, under contract to Tenneco Oil Co. of Houston, Tex., and the nurse were captured a week ago on a flight to pick up five other people captured by the guerrillas in March.

Mail Bomb Kills Judge

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — A court official says he knows of no controversial cases handled by a judge who was killed when a mailed package he was opening exploded in his office.

County administrator Jim Boldt expresses his view after the blast killed Superior Court Judge James Lawless, 50, late Monday.

Officials here said they do not know why the judge was the target. He had served on the bench for 17 years.

Police would not say whether they suspected any connection between the blast and the bombing of a police car and a deliberately set fire in mid-April in the Prosser area, 35 miles from here.

Iranian Drug Charge

Canadians Jailed 74 Days

HAMILTON (CP) — Iranian customs officers were "laughing and singing and dancing" when they arrested eight persons, including four Canadians, for smuggling hashish oil through the Afghanistan-Iran border, one of the Canadians said Monday.

Sandy Soutar, 29, and Nell Cody, 18, both of Hamilton, arrived at Toronto International Airport Monday after spending 74 days in an Iranian jail on drug charges.

The pair, plus Vicki Assen, 20, and Trudy Boardman, 20, both of Burnaby, B.C., two Frenchmen, a French girl and German girl, were arrested at the border.

The eight were freed May 28 after pleading guilty to possession of the hashish oil.

They were fined $1,000 each or 60 days in jail, but since they had spent longer than 60 days awaiting trial they were released immediately.

The B.C. girls arrived home Sunday.

In an interview at his home Monday, Nell said the customs officers were "very nice people."

"The customs officers were laughing and singing and dancing. They get bonuses for each arrest they make. There was no brutality."

The adventure started when the youths, touring Europe, answered a notice on a Khol, Afghanistan, hotel bulletin board, offering to take visitors to France for $40 each.

The van stopped for a night at Kandahar after travelling through the Hindu Kush mountains of Afghanistan.

Nell said he walked into the van driver's hotel room and found him placing vials of hashish oil into prophylactics and sewing them inside his coat.

"He told me not to worry," Nell said. "He was confident he could get across the border."

"The next day we got through the Afghanistan side OK. They searched us, but not very thoroughly.

"But on the Iran side, we were sitting seven making out the customs forms and you could smell hashish coming from the driver's coat. Two men walked by, stopped and sniffed and then smiled.

"I said to the driver, 'You're caught, you know.' Then they body-searched us and began dismantling the van looking for more stuff."

After three days in a small border town jail, the eight appeared before a judge and signed a statement admitting guilt on the charges.

Nell said that although the hashish belonged to the Frenchmen, the driver and his brother, all eight signed the statement because they had been assured they would get off with a small fine.

He said they feared they would be involved in a long, drawn-out court case and spend extra time in jail if they refused to plead guilty.

SENT TO PRISON

Then they were sent to a large prison near the Soviet Union border where a judge reviewed the case and remanded them for sentencing.

When they were told that drug offenders in Iran usually spend three months in jail awaiting sentence, the four Canadians realized they had made a mistake by pleading guilty, Nell said.

Sentencing originally was scheduled for this June but was moved to May after repeated requests from the Canadian embassy in Iran, he said.

An English-speaking lawyer was obtained through the embassy.

Nell said they were treated well in jail.

Sandy, who suffered from sciatic disease, was able to take quite special food needed by ociac patients but had to pay extra for it he states.

Mixed Reviews Greet Stratford's Moliere

STRATFORD, Ont., (CP) — Mixed reviews greeted the Stratford Festival's first production of the 22nd season, Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid, directed by Jean Gascon and starring William Hutt and Pat Galloway.

Associated Press drama critic Williams Glover called it a "blahsharp romp . . . a laugh-packed cure for any ailment except a crushed lip."

But Montreal and Toronto drama critics found it overacted and too dependent on bodily ills for witty good taste.

The play—Moliere's last; he died after the fourth performance as Argan, the hypochondriac—is given a fast-paced, colorful portrayal by the Stratford company. It was critical acclaim in its Australian tour earlier this year.

And Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger gave his personal accolade to his old friend Mr. Gascon. When he retiring artistic director invited the Governor-General and backstage after Monday night's opening performance. Mr. Leger embraced him in the French fashion and kissed him on both cheeks.

The festival continues tonight with a revival of last year's production of Pericles, one of Shakespeare's last plays. Wednesday, it opens a new production of Love's Labor's Lost.

In the Moliere work, the festival again had the services of its first designer, Tanya Moiseiwitsch. A special exhibit of her work over the last two decades is being staged this summer at Stratford's City hall.

One of her, and director Gascon's difficulties, in The Imaginary Invalid is that all of the action takes place in the hypochondriac Argan's bedroom. The Stratford stage was designed by Miss Moiseiwitsch originally to facilitate transitions among many supposed settings.

For this, she set the balcony as another bedroom—not used in the play—and the wings of the stage as hallways and lobbies. Over-all, the mood browns and greens, including Argan's bilious old carpet housecoat.

Mr. Hutt, one of Stratford's most distinguished and versatile actors, played Argan brawnily.

Miss Galloway, playing Argan's housemaid Toinette, was at pert and high-handed with her master as Moliere demands in the part.

Myron Galloway of the Montreal Star, wrote, that, the production was being "marked with every line blatantly delivered and every bit of mugging emphasized, but said it was apparent the audience was in no mood to be critical.

Dave Billington of the Montreal Gazette found Mr. Hutt "stomped, and roared and trampled his way through the Moliere like an elephant with gout."

Urjo Kareda of the Toronto Star wrote that the production is "inordinately enamored of backside," but describes Mr. Hutt's portrayal as a hardworking crowd-pleaser.

Herbert Whittaker of the Toronto Globe and Mail wrote that Mr. Gascon's production did not come up to the high standard of his Twelfth, by Moliere, a few years ago.

Miss Moiseiwitsch dressed the masked actors in red capes and Mr. Gascon had them build in a climax of opera-like music, with an orchestra composed of bone-saws and other 17th-century surgical instruments.

Gilbert, Sullivan Revue a Winner

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, Ont. (CP) — Mix the Victorian operetta music of Gilbert and Sullivan with the modern mannerisms of Tom Kneebone and Howard Cable and the result is a scintillating 90-minute musical show, Gilbert and Sullivan Tonight!

Played to a crowded 75-seat bar called Treasures of Yesterday, the show drew some sentimental tears but mostly laughter and chuckles of genuine amusement Saturday night.

It will run until Oct. 6, and by the end of the season's production, it deserves to go on tour after that. Next year is the centennial of W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan's first collaboration.

Mr. Kneebone, a sad-eyed singer and actor who also makes his home here, has inside the upper floor of the town's principal main-street restaurant his own private theatre for a number of years. Last year, he did a revue of Cole Porter music.

For this show, he and Peggy Feltmate—who is Mrs. Howard Cable—did research on the lives and writings of Gilbert and Sullivan to produce a semi-biographical revue of the late Victorian period when the world was mad for H.M.S. Pinafore, The Mikado, and Pirates of Penzance.

Mr. Kneebone tells us, for instance, that one firm made 100,000 barrel organs that it sold to the popular music from Pinafore.

His cohorts in the revue are Susan Keller and Michael Fletcher, both talented singers and actors. Miss Keller gives a sampling of Sweet Little Buttercup as it was sung in German and His Sisters and His Cousins sang in French.

Mr. Fletcher samples how Greatly to His Credit might have sounded if it had been taken over by the the Americans under the lease copyright laws of those days. In his version, it is greatly to his credit that he is an American when he might have been an Englishman.

Two lesser-known songs are included—the Curate's Song from The Sorcerer and Parliament Man from Princess Ida.

Recorded inserts in the show by Kate Reid bring in the voice of Queen Victoria into the act. Mr. Kneebone modifies the Mikado's Little List song with locally topical references to country western singers and to people who like Charley's Aunt, currently playing down the street at the Shaw Festival.

Global's Problems Growing

TORONTO (CP) — The financial problems of Global Communications Ltd., apparently quantified Monday as unsecured creditors of the television network prepared to vote today on a bankruptcy proposal.

One group's bid to take over the network was rejected, a second company put in another bid and Global's former president issued a cautionary statement to the present creditors.

Scarcely had Global rejected an offer from a group led by advertising executive Peter Simpson to take over control, when an offer was made by Channel 79, owner of CITY-TV here. Response to the latter offer was not disclosed.

John Ross, president of Robert Lawrence Productions Ltd. of Toronto, said a postponement of the company's going into bankruptcy would be helpful "so long as there is a possibility, however remote, of a better offer."

Mr. Ross's company's owed $54,000 by Global.

TWC Communications Ltd., present custodian of Global, has offered unsecured creditors 25 cents on the dollar or full payment over several years.

Allan Slaight, Global president, said if the offer is rejected, Global would go into bankruptcy and a bank which is owed about $5 million would appoint a receiver.

Municipal Board Okays Purchase of Parkland

The Ontario Municipal Board has given approval for the Metro River Conservation Authority to purchase the 360-acre Ernie Potter property on the western outskirts of Belleville.

Municipal Board Chairman William Palmer granted permission for the purchase Monday afternoon in Toronto after meeting with a special delegation of local municipal and river authority officials.

Going to Toronto were authority chairman Guy Hughes of Frankford, Belleville Mayor Robin Jeffrey and Sidney township reeve Gordon Wilman. Also included in the delegation was authority secretary-treasurer James McLeod.

Purchase of the Potter property by the Metro Authority as a greenbelt and trailer park and the city's participation in the purchase price of $700,000, plus legal and other fees was questioned last week by Clarence Young of Belleville who lodged an objection with the Municipal Board.

In his letter to the OMB Mr. Young said there were suggestions that the Potter property a short time ago had been offered to a local developer for $300,000 but the offer had been withdrawn.

Mr. Young said the feelings of a large number of residents were that the purchase by the city should be the subject of a referendum by the people of Belleville.

Monday, after returning from Toronto authority chairman Hughes said local officials had earlier contacted OMB chairman Palmer who had said he'd like to see confirmation of everything leading up to the purchase offer.

After getting confirmation, Mr. Palmer gave approval for the purchase. Mr. Hughes said the purchase option has now been taken up.

Under the terms of the proposed purchase, Belleville, the township of Sidney and the Metro authority would share in the purchase price with the major share of the cost being shared by provincial grant. Take 3

Belleville's share would be between $140,000 and $160,000, depending on the amount of the provincial grant, and would be paid over a three-year period. Sidney's share would be just under $28,000, also payable over three years.

The $700,000 purchase price for the 360-acre tract, which stretches from the Bay of Quinte to the CN double track, was arrived at following appraisals by a professional appraiser and the regional assessment commissioner.

The authority chairman expressed satisfaction that Municipal Board approval for the purchase of the Potter property had now been received.

Everyone in the group was happy," said Mr. Hughes.

Ratepayers Plan Park

Bayles Drive Ratepayers Association members are considering purchasing a bay front lot for use as a parking and boat launching area, association president Thomas Fisher told Sidney council Monday.

In its Monday council, Mr. Fisher said the group wants to know whether council has any plans for the property that the ratepayers should take into account.

The township has a right-of-way through the lot at the foot of Bayles Drive, Mr. Fisher said, "so definite plans have not been made."

Sidney council will look into the property and place it, it might have to be Reeve Gordon Wilman said.

Driver Ordered To Stand Trial

Provincial Court Judge J. L. Clendenning yesterday ordered Charles Oscar Wood, 37, of RR 5 Belleville to stand trial at the next sitting of a court of competent jurisdiction on a charge of failing to stop at the scene of a March 13 accident in which a 16-year-old Belleville girl was killed.

Wood was ordered to stand trial yesterday following a preliminary hearing Thursday in which Judge Clendenning heard the testimony of four Crown witnesses. The judge had reserved judgment until the case till Monday.

Wood had been charged in relation to the hit-and-run death March 13 of Arlene Burke, 16, of Bronk Street, near the Georges Vanier Public School.

The Burke girl was struck by a train while walking westward along Tracey Street with a girl friend on her way home from school.

Bayles Drive Limit Asked

Drivers travelling Bayles Dr. will likely be facing speed limits within the next two months following a request for road signs issued by Dale Fisher before Sidney council Monday.

Mr. Fisher, Bayles Drive Ratepayers Association president said residents and drivers are traveling the road "at a good clip". To safeguard the lives of area children, he requested council to post 30 mph speed signs on the road.

Approximately 30 families live on the street, on the south side of Highway 3 at Bayside.

Most people driving on the street do not travel at an excess speed, Mr. Fisher said, "people who are not from the area who are speeding."

Council is to be assisted in general agreement to Mr. Fisher's request.

Mr. Fisher also requested council to consider installation of a new 30 mph sign at the intersection of the street and Highway 2.

Speeder Fined Licence Lifted

An Ottawa man, John J. Rheaume, 22, was fined $150 and had his driver's licence suspended for 30 days after he was convicted in provincial court Belleville yesterday of speeding 106 miles an hour in a 70 mile-an-hour zone on Highway 401.

Rheaume was stopped and charged with speeding by the Ontario Provincial Police April 13 after he led a constable on a chase along the west bound lane of Highway 401 for a distance of approximately 9 miles.

During the chase, the OPP officer had clocked Rheaume at speeds approaching 125 miles an hour.

Judge J.L. Clendenning imposed the fine and licence suspension on Rheaume after he noted that Rheaume had already had four speeding convictions registered against him since July of 1971.

Police Check For Break-in

Belleville police are investigating a possible break-in attempt at the government dock building here.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that officers from his department discovered a broken window, valued at $11, on the east side of the building with an extension ladder leading to it, sometime yesterday morning.

At present nothing has been reported missing from the building.

Exceptional Teachers

Theresa Boyd, special education co-ordinator for the separate school board chats with Catherine Michalski, education officer with the curriculum development branch of the ministry of education. Mrs. Michalski was speaker at the annual meeting of the Council for Exceptional Children, held at Mother's Restaurant, near Madoc Monday night.

As More Get Education Standards Seem Lower

A ministry of education official Monday night debunked the belief that the standard of excellence has gone forever from education.

Catherine Michalski, an education officer with the curriculum development branch of the ministry in Toronto said employers are comparing the graduates of today with the academically elite by students they used to be able to hire 20 or 30 years ago. Most people in the business of the Council for Exceptional Children at their annual meeting at Mother's Restaurant near Madoc.

The standards in Canadian schools has always been an academic achievement, she said.

"Twenty or 30 years ago, 10 per cent of students, the academically elite went through high school. About 80 to 90 per cent are now retained until graduation. We are still forcing to that 80 per cent the regime we used on the elite.

"If we were to compare the top 10 per cent of 25 years ago to the top 10 per cent of today, I expect the kids of today would be brighter.

"The bank manager says his tellers can't spell. Shop assistants can't count. Thirty years ago the employer was able to hire kids who could have gone on to get their PhDs, but didn't have the money.

"Today, he's getting the drop-outs of the 60s. We have an academically upwardly mobile population."

Mrs. Michalski asked what purpose schools should serve.

"The ancient Spartans needed soldiers, so they passed only the good athletes. Medieval Europe needed artisans and scholars so they trained them. Nineteenth century North America needs managers and technicians, so our schools were geared to turn them out.

"With violence, unsafe streets and dishonest politicians, faith, honesty and humanity is what our world needs most. Because our generation made academic achievement the criterion of worth, we perpetuate the folly. There are other criteria of human worth. When I think of people who have bombed, murdered, exterminated, most of those stinkers could read. We would be better off if the emphasis in their education had been in humanism.

Mrs. Michalski, a specialist in special education, said a bed load study had found that slow learners are more moral than others in the schools.

"We used to think it was the other way around," she said.

"The occupations course (a two year high school course for slow learners) is the place where "kids who don't fit the social system are put," said Mrs. Michalski.

Only 5 per cent of the children of professional parents are placed in these classes. About 95 per cent of the occupations students are the children of unemployed and of New Canadians, a Toronto survey found.

Judge's Ruling Allows Man to Keep Working

By PETER GOODSPEED
Staff Reporter

According to a provincial court ruling made by Judge J. L. Clendenning here Monday, motorists found guilty of impaired driving will be susceptible for a conditional or an absolute discharge if their livelihood depends upon their ability to drive an automobile.

Judge Clendenning made the ruling when he gave a 19-year-old Belleville man, Jack Cooledge, a conditional discharge placed him on one year's probation after finding him guilty last Thursday of impaired driving and of refusing to take a breathalyzer test.

In speaking to sentence Thursday, Cooledge's lawyer, Robert Temple, asked the judge to consider granting his client a conditional or an absolute discharge, since Cooledge was a truck driver and the registering of a conviction would automatically result in the province withdrawing his driving privileges.

Judge Clendenning reserved judgement on the case and, after agreeing in a recent Ontario Court of Appeal decision, concluded that it was possible to grant a conditional or an absolute discharge to persons found guilty of offences under the impaired driving sections of the criminal code, since those sections do not carry a minimum penalty clause.

In making the ruling, the judge noted that a fine and a licence suspension imposed an undue hardship on those persons who made their living driving. However, the judge added that in many cases a probation order can be more demanding than a fine.

Judge Clendenning also noted that his court would seriously entertain the imposition of a custodial jail term on persons convicted of a breach of probation after they had received a conditional discharge for an impaired driving conviction.

Later in the day, while speaking to another case, the judge made note of the fact that he hoped the possibility of a jail term for those convicted of breaking a probation order would deter lawyers from making applications for conditional discharges in all but exceptional cases.

When the judge made his ruling Thursday attention is the fact that nearly 40 per cent of the 58 criminal code cases listed on the court's 112-item docket alleged offences under the impaired driving sections of the code.

The judge also recognized press reports of an increase in the number of impaired driving charges appearing before the courts and noted reves. retribution for failure of fines and licence suspensions to deter people from driving after they had been drinking.

Terms of the probation order imposed upon Cooledge include stipulations that he drive only in the course of his employment and that he not be found in any motor vehicle, other than a means of public transportation, when he has been consuming alcohol.

Judge Clendenning also said that his court would supply the police department's national detention and retrieval service, CPIC, with the terms of each probation order granted to impaired drivers so that the police would be able to ensure the enforcement of those orders.

The CPIC system is an Ottawa-based information retrieval service that allows most Canadian police departments to determine, in a matter of second, what warrants or probation orders are outstanding on individuals who have appeared before the courts or are wanted by the police.

Summer's Coming

One sure sign of summer is when the Kinsmen Club go about painting their pool on Dundas Street East. With about 30 gallons of paint and 20 or so club members, the job can easily get done in less than three hours. Here past president of the club, Doug Jackson goes about the task at hand. The pool will open later this month.

Bridge St. Parking May Be Ruled Out

All parking on Bridge Street, East, from Church Street to MacDonald Ave. could be ruled out for the fall if Ontario Department reconstruction on Dundas Street and Victoria Ave. is finished by the time City Manager Adam Stalker is through.

The view taken is that with reconstruction on Victoria and Dundas, Bridge Street will be used as a detour and that detour could become the heavier volume of traffic.

No immediate action was taken by the traffic committee on the city manager's suggestion at Monday's session on Dundas street has still not been commenced.

The matter will be reviewed by the October meeting.

In other business, the committee concurred in a recommendation from Police Chief Douglas Crosbie that parking on the south side of West College Street be prohibited from North Front Street to a point 300 feet west, or approximately to the Hugh Murray Equipment Company premises.

Reeve Draws Reeve's Ticket

The Corbyville volunteer firefighters' club held its traffic draw to raise funds for a new Thurlow rescue van at the Corbyville fire hall last night and Thurlow Reeve Horace Casey drew the winning ticket that belonged to Tyendinaga Reeve Leonard Wahl.

Mr. Wahl won his choice of a steer, $300 cash, or a propane barbecue and $50 worth of steaks.

Tyendinaga councillor George Beer sold the winning ticket and turned the $50 he won over to the volunteers' fund for the new rescue van.

The Corbyville firefighters will continue to accept donations toward the purchase of a new truck for the rescue squad.

Chief's Charge Sticks

A Rexdale, Ont., man, William Duncan Derry Ballard, was arrested last May 3 by Belleville City Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie, was fined a total of $143 in provincial court here yesterday after he was convicted of speeding 68 miles an hour in a 50 mile-an-hour zone and of failing to produce his drivers licence when asked to do so by police.

Elliott was arrested by Police Chief Crosbie on a Sunday afternoon, when the chief, who was off-duty and driving his private car, noticed three vehicles speeding along Station Street.

The chief chased the three cars along Station Street, across the Upper Bridge and down Coleman Street, until

Broke Window Fined $100

A 24-year-old Belleville man, Leonard Hay, was fined $100 in provincial court here yesterday, after he was convicted of a charge of wilful damage arising from an incident at 14 Isabel St. home in which he intentionally broke a window valued at $50.

Hay was arrested by police May 9, around 9:35 p.m. after he had been breaking a bedroom window at an apartment at 21 Isabel St., another police cruiser, driven by Constable Brett Bullock, managed to intercept Elliott's motorcycle at the intersection of Bridge Street and Coleman.

During the chase the Police Chief had observed Elliott's motorcycle at speeds approaching 90 miles an hour.

Stolen Goods Found in House

A 24-year-old Belleville man, Warren Alexander Casselman, of 19 Pepper Ave., was found guilty or possessing stolen goods in provincial court yesterday after he pleaded guilty to a charge of having a number of items in his home that were stolen last week from the Hillcrest Community Centre.

Casselman was arrested May 28, after police searched his house, under the authority of a search warrant, and found a coffee percolator, the head of a parking meter, ashtrays, silverware and sugar container that had been reported stolen from the Hillcrest Community Centre last Monday May 27.

Judge Clendenning remanded Casselman's case for sentence July 2 to allow the preparation of a presentence report.

Artist Strings Work for Show

Artist Needs Time

Time has not treated Katharine Zalstead well.

Her painting has suffered, though not to the same that she considers it poor, or unartistic factory, or unsatisfying.

No, she's ashamed of the length of time it has taken her to produce the 25-odd pieces in her one-person week exhibition at the Corby Public Library.

Five years.

Once, eight years ago, in Rome, she produced five, not drawings, sketches, a day.

But since she returned to Canada, time she once had in abundance evaporated. Marriage five years ago, and then caring for her daughter, consumed her hours.

But now there will be changes and she is thankful for the benefit can make. Her three-year-old daughter is old enough to amuse herself less care than in her diaper years.

"I can't be same pietrive twice. I tried it once. Impossible. I don't want to do one, she claims.

"Different things need different expressions. Though she grants that it is old enough for the artist to identify her work.

Her husband, a jeweller, is being transferred to Toronto later this summer, a problem again he bers.

Edmund. I'm going to ask for a loan and try to get a studio," she confided.

A great deal will be behind her.

Educated in her native Hungary, she spent two years in Belgrade studying interior design and planning before going to Italy on a visitors permit. In Rome, she was granted political asylum and then studied at the Academy of Fine Art. Courtesy of Fine Arts for a year and a half till money ran out.

That time in Rome was the happiest she says, in words she's learnt strongest with Hungarian accents. She adopted the 'professed,' who was happier there than since.

Emigrating to Montreal, she says, was "good for a story but experience." New to Canada, she couldn't speak French or English... couldn't find work. Again, studies were cut short when funds ran out.

"All eight years I've spent in Canada I didn't do as much work as I did in Rome," she said.

Her style? She doesn't have one, she claims.

"Different things need different expressions. Though she grants that it is old enough for the artist to identify her work.

"I can't be same pietrive twice. I tried it once. Impossible. I don't want to do one, she claims.

And yet, she'll work intermittently for years on a single painting. One, a purple study she has worked with for three years.

She doesn't think she'll sell it. Some several offers from interested buyers.

"I like to see them around. I like to correct them. I enjoy them... I can't explain it otherwise," she said.

Ron Cey – Dodger Infielder the Penguin

Even First Place Team Has Its Moving Problems

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lon and they weren't generated by Sunday's frustrating 7-6 loss to the Cubs in Chicago.

The first big spike is perhaps the oldest. Reserve Von Joshua said immediately after the game that he was "fed up" and "wants out" of the Dodger organization because he isn't playing enough. The remark came just after the .238 hitter had banged out a two-run, pinch-hit single in the sixth inning, giving the Dodgers a temporary 4-3 lead. Joshua left the game at that point.

Joshua hit .455 in the spring but has started just three of the Dodgers' 52 games.

The next bit of controversy arose after third baseman Ron Cey and catcher Joe Ferguson collided going for a foul pop-up in the fourth inning. The ball wasn't caught and Cey was charged with an error.

"I was calling for it and (Don) Sutton was yelling, 'Penguin, Penguin,' and as far as I know, I'm the only guy on this team known as Penguin," growled the usually mild-mannered Cey.

But Ferguson countered:

"Twenty-thousand people were screaming their heads off. I didn't hear anyone call. But that doesn't matter. I had time . . . and that means I could have made the catch."

The Joshua incident apparently lit the rest of the fuse.

"I met with Alston in St. Louis and told him how I felt," said the 5-foot-10, left-hand hitting outfielder. "They've destroyed my confidence. I hit .455 in the spring and then what?"

In 11 pinch hitting appearances this year, Joshua has four hits.

Wannamaker Blanks Woodstock On 4 Hits

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Oshawa defeated Woodstock 3-0 in Ontario Football League action Monday night that saw Woodstock stretch its scoreless streak this season to 44 consecutive innings. It was the only scheduled game.

Oshawa went ahead in the fifth inning on Daryl Hodge's single and the run scored on error. Jack Sneddon singled to lead off the eighth inning and scored the second Oshawa run on Paul Gibbard's single.

Oshawa added the final run in the top of the ninth when Hodgin dropped a bunt barely in front of the plate and rounded the bases on a pair of Woodstock errors.

Pitcher Paul Wannamaker went the distance for the win, giving up four hits, one walk and striking out 10. Ron Reeder was the loser as he allowed eight hits and struck out six.

Bowa Steals No. 3

Special Treatment For Reds' Pete Rose

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While public enemy Pete Rose was under heavy surveillance in New York Monday night, Larry Bowa had Cart Morton all staked out in Philadelphia.

Rose returned to the scene of his playoff scrap with New York's Bud Harrelson last season for the first time and was serenaded with a chorus of boos during Cincinnati Reds' 5-2 National League triumph over the Mets.

Meanwhile, Bowa learned something while watching Atlanta pitcher Morton, and he turned his knowledge into a stolen base that set up the tie-breaking run in the Philadelphia Phillies' 5-2 victory over the Braves.

In the only American League game, Minnesota's Twins edged Boston Red Sox 5-4 in 12 innings and Baltimore Orioles stopped Kansas City Royals 4-3.

The Mets had extra security guards at Shea Stadium and they didn't sell any seats in the left field stands, as left fielder Rose had a quiet evening except for the boos and a first inning, first-pitch single off Jon Matlack.

"All I heard was George Foster calling me off the fly balls," said the National League's Most Valuable Player, who was pelted with bottles and other debris last October following his brawl with Harrelson. "Oh, I heard a few remarks. You know, the stuff like, 'Ya bum, ya.' But I hear the same stuff around the rest of the league."

Three pinch-hitters responded from the bench to help Rose in the ballpark and then spent the evening in Cincinnati's bullpen.

Bowa opened the eighth with a single off Morton and went to second on Greg Luzinski's one-out single. Bowa then stole third—his 16th consecutive theft—and beat Morton's delayed throw to the plate on Dave Cash's bunt.

"I was watching Morton all night," Bowa explained. "I noticed that he looked only once with a runner at second base and then threw to the plate."

Mike Schmidt, whose throwing error gave the Braves a first-inning run, drove in Phillies' only first two runs with a single and his 16th homer.

Larry Hisle singled home the winning run for the Twins with the bases loaded in the 12th inning, and Phil Hanck contributed a brilliant relief stint to snatch his 10th major league victory.

Steve Braun, who had three hits in the game, opened the 12th with a single off Diego Segui and stole second. Tony Oliva was walked intentionally and, after Bob Darwin flied out, Segui also walked Eric Soderholm, loading the bases. Hisle then drilled his game-winning hit to left field.

Hanck, who entered the game with an 0-4 record and 6.95 earned-run average, pitched 4-2-3 hitless innings, striking out eight and retaring the last batters he faced.

Grant Jackson, Baltimore's third pitcher of the seventh inning, choked off a Kansas City rally and preserved Baltimore's victory. Doyle Alexander, making only his third start, entered the inning with a 4-1 lead but was replaced by Bob Reynolds with two on and two out. A line-drive single by Amos Otis scored George Brett. - Jackson then came on and his first delivery was his high into short right field by John Mayberry.

But Jim Fuller stopped and was charged with an error for failing to catch the ball as Jim Wohlford scored. Hal McRae then hit into an inning-ending forceout.

PETE ROSE

and singled, driving in one run and scoring another, and made a run-saving throw from centre field to support Clay Kirby's seven-hit pitching.

Del Unser squeezed Bowa home from third base with the Phillies' tie-breaking run in the eighth inning and Willie Montanez followed with a two-run double. Meanwhile, Steve Carlton held the Braves to six hits

Juniors Prove It's Never Too Late

By ALAN TEEWORTH

According to the old saying, the game isn't over until the fat lady sings, and that came true for the Ellis Printing Juniors in the final game of the Quinte Fastball League doubleheader at the Alemite last night.

The Juniors were behind in these contest with Trenton Augers Men's Wear 3-0 going into their half of the seventh. They came out of the top of the inning with an 8-2 lead on five hits and two Auger errors. The score ended that way for the Juniors' second win of the season.

Augers had jumped into an early 2-0 lead in the bottom of the first inning with runs by Jim Clements and Joe Theriault. Clements banted to get to first to lead off, with Steve Barker sacrificing him to second. Theriault followed with a walk, with Roger Drake loading the bases with yet another free pass.

Both runs crossed the plate when the Juniors' Kelvin Pope misjudged a fly ball in shallow left field. The ball got by the rookie.

Auger's Bob Richardson had been coasting along on a cool two-hitter until the seventh.

Ken Vee opened the inning with a base on balls, and Jim Richardson followed with a single to left. Ken Vee then replaced Richardson on the Auger mound, with a cold reception to follow.

Steve Campbell's infield hit was thrown away by Auger's third sacker Art Barker, with designated hitter Grant McKenna coming in next to score in the first run of the rally with a base hit.

Wayne Anderson who had replaced Pope after filling in as a designated hitter twice, then cranked a bases loaded triple to deep right centre field. Three hits and a fielder's choice accounted for the other four runs in the inning.

John Sprackett took the win after it looked like the fourth defeat for the Printers. He came out of the game with a five-hitter, whiffing six and walking a pair of Trenton batters.

Swan was tagged with the loss, giving up six of the eight runs.

Cobourg Tony's Soccer Club created a three-way tie for first place in the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association with a 9 — 3 Monday win over Trenton Panelas in a game played in Cobourg.

Tony's, Belleville Golden Mile Restaurant and Cooney's each has eight points.

Juniors' runs. R.—Richardson, manager; four strikeouts, walking two, while Swan fanned one and didn't walk a man.

Dave Horwood led the winners with a triple and single in four trips to the plate, with Pete Stalkovitch, Richardson, McKenna, Dave Dolan, and Andrews kidding the other hits for the winners.

Clements had three of the five Trenton hits in four times at bat, a double and two singles. Theriault's double and a fifth inning single by Barker were the others.

In the nightcap, Devolin Motors squeezed past Howard Robert Printing by a narrow 3-2 count.

Devolin opened with a run in their half of the first frame, with Jim Horwood collecting an infield hit and scoring on three wild pitches by H and R's Scott Reid.

The Printers got the run back in the bottom of the inning, with Larry Potter the man to cross the plate. He reached first on a fielder's choice, and advanced on a walk to second. A passed ball sent him to third with an infield ball bobbled by Devolin second baseman Eric Mc-Morrow scoring him.

The Printers went one up in the fourth with a run by Reid. He opened the inning with a bloop double to left, was sacrificed to third by Ken Genereaux and was driven in by Dwight Rathwell's infield hit.

The winning runs for the Motormen came in the fifth. Rick Rosebush drilled a shot over third base with one out, followed by a two out liner over second by Don Holway, which scored the runner.

Rick Watt was sent in to run for Holway under the designated runner rule, advancing to second on a dispated passed ball.

Howard and Robert coach Ray Lucas and plate umpire Bill McCormick were involved in a discussion about alleged interference by Terry Mallgrer on the play. Lucas claimed Meagher had been standing on the ball. He lost the argument.

Meagher ended up driving in the winning run with a shot to left field. Pug Keller cracked up hearing the ball over the backstop, from his field position, allowing Meagher to advance to third on the play. He died there, with Bruce Stickle flying out to Keller to finish off the inning.

Holway completed the game for Devolin, picking up his second win of the season. He gave up only three hits to the Printers, whiffing nine, and issuing four free passes.

Reid was the loser for Howard and Robert, giving up only five hits in defeat. He blew third strikes past 11 Devolin batters, while not walking a man.

Devolin hits, all singles, went to Meagher, Jim Horwood, Rosebush, Hill, and Holway.

Reid had the only extra baser in the game with his double. Potter and Rathwell were the other hitters for the printers.

Devolin goes right back at it for the first game of the doubleheader tonight, meeting Bardon Supplies at 7 p.m. In the second game of the twin bill league-leading Rollins' Construction meets Auger Men's Wear.

CLARENCE CAMPBELL

NHL President Calls Fighting A 'Safety Valve'

TORONTO (CP) — Fighting is the "best safety valve" in hockey a ven tough initiator of professional players by children if it is inevitable, Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said Monday.

"Everyone emulates everyone else," he said and the NHL cannot be blamed for it.

Campbell was testifying at the Ontario inquiry into violence in amateur hockey in order, he said, to defend the NHL's position concerning fighting.

He said the role of the NHL is "condoning the sport of hockey in a manner that will be conducive to support at the box office."

Campbell said the league is in the show business. He added that he would not "sanction or condone" the use of any actions that go against the sport.

Toronto lawyer William McMurtry, acting as commissioner of the inquiry, said he was told by three general managers, who did not want to be named, that the NHL was attempting to "sell hockey" without regard to the quality of play.

Campbell said if the general managers McMurtry mentioned "won't stand up and be counted," then their opinion must be an "absurd hypothesis."

McMurtry asked Campbell whether the NHL would be willing to take the advice of other professional leagues and issue game misconducts for fighting.

"We always consider aspects of other sports," Campbell said, "but I don't think we're under any obligation to adhere to them."

He said there were some teams in the league that "purr" the matter of fighting more than others, but added that Philadelphia Flyers won the Stanley Cup by using skill, not their fighting technique.

McMurtry said there were certain players on NHL teams who have admitted that they are used solely as fighters.

"I don't think there are any such players in the league," Campbell said.

Inquiry members were shown a replay of a Montreal Canadiens-New York Rangers game last season in which the Canadiens' Yvan Cournoyer was mocked after by a punch from Ron Harris.

McMurtry said that Harris's subsequent double minor penalty for roughing and high sticking was not enough.

Campbell placed fighting third or fourth in a list of the most violent actions in hockey, after criticized International fighting.

hockey rules for not allowing

"International hockey produces more of the most violent and violent games you can ask for. It is most disgusting—the kicking, spearing and butt-ending.

Campbell said to choose fighters over skill would be "terribly unrewarding."

Seven Enter Hall of Fame

HAMILTON (CP) — Four players and three builders were inducted in the Canadian Football Hall of Fame today.

Bernie Faloney, George Dixon, Lee Leal and Martin Ruby were the players inducted while Annis Stukus, Wilfred Perry (Billy) Hughes and Andrew Currie went in as builders.

Faloney, a quarterback, played with Edmonton Eskimos, Hamilton Tiger-Cats, Montreal Alouettes and British Columbia Lions during a 12-year career in the Canadian Football League.

The graduate of the University of Maryland, who now lives in Hamilton, was named Canada's outstanding player in 1961 with the Ticats.

He is fourth on the CFL's list for most yards gained with 34,264 and second for most passes thrown, 2,876. He completed 1,693 passes for 24 touchdowns in 13 seasons.

Dixon, one of the most exciting running backs ever to play in Canada, set an Interprovincial Conference rushing record in 1962, gaining 1,338 yards, and scored 15 touchdowns. He was named outstanding player in Canada that year.

He played five full seasons for Montreal Alouettes and part of two others. He now lives in Montreal and coaches college football at Loyola.

Leal learned to play football while in school in Winnipeg and joined the Blue Bombers in 1938. He played on two Grey Cup teams in Winnipeg, in 1939 and 1941, and later was on a winner in Calgary in 1948.

He was the first Canadian developed player to progress to the National Football League, playing as a guard for Cleveland Browns, Los Angeles Rams and Detroit Lions.

Leal was the last coach in Canada to take a team through an undefeated season—at Calgary in 1948.

He now lives in Florida where he owns and trains horses.

Ruby played for seven years with Saskatchewan Roughriders and was an all-star in each season, including four years when he was an all-star on both defence and defence.

LORD KILLANIN

$12 Seats For MLG

TORONTO (CP) — It will cost more money to watch Toronto Maple Leafs play in the National Hockey League next season.

The seat colors are being changed and the top price will be $12, up from $7.70 last season.

A spokesman for Maple Leaf Gardens said Monday the red seats and seats will jump to $12 and be colored gold. The other reds and the $10 blue seats along the sides of the rink will all be reds in 1976-76 and the price will be $10. The reds were $7.70 last season and the blues $6.60. A pair of reds will cost $960 this year for 43 games, which includes three pre-season games.

The blues in the mezzanine (the ends) will go to $8 from $6.60.

In a letter to subscribers, the Maple Leaf Gardens said the jump in prices is to "meet ever-increasing costs of operating the Maple Leaf Hockey Club."

Killanin Wants Some Answers

LAUSANNE (CP) — Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), said Monday he will be "very worried" if questions about Montreal's preparations for the 1976 Games are not answered by this fall.

However, speaking to reporters after a three-day meeting of the IOC's executive board, he made no comment on the state of preparations in Montreal.

Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau reported at the meeting on the "success of the lottery and sale of coins" to finance the 1976 Games. Lord Killanin said that Montreal organizers are readying a report for mid-June on the Olympic village, preparations of the press centre, the venue for several events and the sale of tickets.

That report, he said, "hopes to have the answers to a lot of questions."

"I would be very worried if those points were not finalized and agreed upon in fall," by the time the Olympic congress

Good Start

MURFIELDD (AP) — Defending champion Dick Sidercof of the United States started defence of his British Amateur golf championship in good style Monday, but another former winner fell by the wayside.

Sidercof, a 26-year-old stockbroker who hasn't practiced much this year, easily beat Perry Malone of Ireland 5 and 3.

Michael BonaKock of England, a five-time winner, was upset 1 by Phil Smith of Scotland.

Russ Prior Convicted Of Assault

HAMILTON (CP) — Russell Prior, 25, of Hamilton, who won the British Commonwealth Games heavyweight weightlifting championship at Christchurch, N.Z., in February, was convicted Monday in provincial court of assault and fined $150. Prior had pleaded not guilty to the charge laid after an incident at a hotel last April 20. Judge Albert Marck ruled Prior used undue force in attempting to stop Raymond Pasmore, 19, of Hamilton from returning to his seat in the hotel.

Pros in World Hockey By 1977 Says Juckes

TORONTO (CP) — Professional hockey players from Canada may play in world hockey competition as early as 1977, Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Monday.

Juckes made his announcement following a meeting between officials of six countries—Canada, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland and the United States.

"Canadian pro hockey players will be registered with the CAHA as non-professionals for the purposes of world cup and international tournament competition," said Juckes.

Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said his teams would co-operate in allowing players to compete at the International level providing dates could be worked out.

The International Ice Hockey Federation's (IIHF) constitution says players representing their country must be registered with that country's national amateur hockey body.

Campbell cited the operation of the London, England, Lions' hockey club in 1972-74 as a typical example as to how the system might work.

"The London Lions were a non-amateur team made of players from the NHL's Detroit Red Wings' organization playing against amateurs. They the British Ice Hockey Federation and playing exhibition games sanctioned by the IIHF," said Campbell.

Cat Scratches Can Pose Problem

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently I heard that if a pregnant woman gets scratched by a cat she could bear a defective child. I suspect I am pregnant and since I have been scratched twice since my last period I am worried sick.—Mrs. A.T.

I think you or whoever told you about it is confusing cat scratch fever with toxoplasmosis.

Cat scratch fever is caused by an organism that causes skin infection and lymph gland swelling, and is not caused from a scratch by a healthy kitten or cat.

While it's a nuisance, and in any event not very common, it isn't something for you to worry about.

Toxoplasmosis is an entirely different matter. That is a parasite sometimes present in cats and of infected animals and rather common in cats.

In a pregnant woman, the disease can be transmitted to an unborn child. For whatever reason, this rarely happens with a first pregnancy, but it is common enough in later pregnancies to be cause for some concern.

Early in pregnancy it is likely to cause an abortion. Later in pregnancy it can cause eye or brain damage in the child.

While I don't urge hamster-cats from a household, I do most distinctly urge that pregnant women, or women who suspect they are pregnant, avoid handling a cat's litter box. If unavoidable, then wash very thoroughly.

In cases of doubt, skin and blood tests will determine whether you have toxoplasmosis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can you advise me how to get tetracycline?—E.J.

Tetracycline, which is proving helpful in a good many cases of acne, is a drug that requires a doctor's prescription.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you discuss hemophilia as it affects females? Friends of ours have five children, a son and four daughters. The son and two daughters are hemophiliacs and the girls have been in the hospital numerous times for blood transfusions.

Their parents seem to think that only males are affected, but with the disease transmitted through females.—M.C.

Hemophilia is rare in girls—but not unknown. It is true that the trait is transmitted through the female.

If a girl is homozygous—that is, has the genes for hemophilia from both parents—then she can develop hemophilia. This is rare, however.

There is also another disorder called von Willebrand's disease which causes prolonged bleeding as well as a deficiency of what is known as Factor VIII. That disorder (not common) can occur in females as frequently as in males.

If in any case the family you describe is indeed an unusual one.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I came down with Herpes infection (shingles) which involved the eye, forehead and top of my head. I have a discoloration on my forehead and am wondering whether it will disappear in time.—Mrs. E.S.

The pigment changes following shingles may be permanent, particularly if the infection was deep and severe. There is usually some fading however, that generally can be managed easily with cosmetics.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: As a collector of postage stamps is there any chance of contracting an infection of any kind by handling used stamps from foreign countries?—H.F.

No.

Opening lead—♦K

By Oswald and James Jacoby

The letter R in the code word ARCH stands for "Review the bidding." It is usually less important than the other letters which stand for "Analyze the lead," "Count your winners and losers" and "How can I make my contract." But there are times when it is important.

South ruffs the third diamond and sees that in order to make his contract he can only afford to lose one spade trick. The simple play to do this is to play East for the jack of spades. However, if South reviews the bidding he will remember that West overcalled one spade and is almost certain to hold the jack.

The play is not obvious but it can be worked out. South starts with two rounds of trumps. The suit breaks 4-2 so there is no need to play a third round. Then he ruffs dummy's last diamond, plays ace king and another club to eliminate that suit and finally leads out his king of spades.

West takes his ace and is helpless. If he leads the suit South gets his 11 tricks around to his 10. If he leads something else, South ruffs in dummy and discards a spade.

♦♥CHRD Series♠♣

The bidding has been:

West	North	East	South
1♠	Double	Pass	2♥
2♠	3♥	Pass	4♥
Pass	Pass	Pass

You, South, hold:
♠ 6 5 3 ♥ J 3 2 ♦ A Q 9 7 ♣ 8 5 3

What do you do now?

A—Pass or bid four hearts. It all depends on your partner's bidding style.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Instead of bidding three hearts your partner bid two notrump to show a good two spades. What do you do now?

Provincial Treasurers Try To Cushion Inflation's Blow

By SANDRA INGALESE
The Canadian Press

OTTAWA (CP) — Provincial treasurers, mostly Conservatives, installed 17-5-74.

T'ry to cushion taxpayers against inflation, most provincial governments this year have offered some form of tax relief.

With the exception of Newfoundland, none of the provincial budgets brought down so far increased personal income taxes. The Nova Scotia budget has yet to be announced.

Plans to use increased revenue from the booming resource industries to finance new programs were announced in Ontario and provinces in Western Canada.

Ontario and Manitoba imposed higher taxes on mining companies. Money from previously announced oil tax increases in Saskatchewan, will be used for government-directed development of the industry. In Alberta, revenues from higher oil taxes are expected to be used to diversify the provincial economy, increased resource revenues in British Columbia will help pay for more social services.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows most provinces are offering tax break ranging from property-tax credits to subsidies for pensioners and low-income families to sales-tax reductions.

Here is a province-by-province summary of major budget developments:

Newfoundland: Spending is projected at $753.63 million and revenue at $621.86 million, including $185 million in federal tax-equalization payments. The sales-tax rate was increased to eight per cent from seven per cent and effective July 1 the personal income tax rate rises to 46 per cent from 36 per cent of basic federal tax.

New Brunswick: Projected expenditures of $794 million on revenues and recoveries of $783.3 million will result in a deficit of $41.7 million, bringing the provincial debt to about $454 million. The eight-per-cent sales tax on clothes, footwear and some microfilm and all sales taxes paid by status Indians were removed.

Prince Edward Island: A fourth successive surplus was estimated despite the government's announcement of the "largest general tax reduction" in the province's history. Measures included reduction in real property assessment and elimination of the eight-per-cent sales tax on yard goods, cleaning materials and items valued at less than 16 cents. Projected spending is $130 million on revenues of $150.839 million.

Quebec: A fifth straight budget with no tax increases estimated spending at $6.160 billion, up 13 per cent over 1973-74, on revenues of $5.865 billion for an anticipated deficit of $275 million. Single persons earning less than $5,000, married couples earning less than $8,500 a year no longer pay income tax.

There were increased exemptions for the aged and the handicapped and an increase try $500 from $250 in the amount a spouse can earn before earnings affect tax assumption.

Ontario: Expenditures are estimated at $8.341 billion, an increase of 14.3 per-cent, on deficit of $612 million, up from $421 million last year.

Through an income supplement, the elderly, blind and disabled will be guaranteed an income of $35 a week for single persons and $100 for married couples.

Tax cuts included elimination of the seven-per-cent sales tax on footwear costing $30 or less and on a wide range of household and toiletry articles.

Mining and timber firms were hit with higher taxes—$50 million on mine profits and $12 million on doubled Crown dues on timber.

A speculation tax of 50 per cent was imposed on owners who buy and sell real estate without adding any real value and a tax of 10 per cent was put on purchases by non-residents of Canada.

An auto-fuels property tax credit system, subsidies for public transit and increased aid to municipalities were announced. The basic exemption for succession duties on family farms was increased by 50 per cent to $150,000.

Manitoba: Total spending is estimated at $934.2 million, up about 20 per cent, with current revenue estimates projected a surplus of $162,300. A $14-million tax credit-scheme, allowing credits of up to $400 on 1974 tax returns with maximum benefits to the elderly and low-income families, is to be financed largarly by a doubling of taxes on mineral production. No major changes in personal taxes were proposed. Other programs included a $20-million land-servicing and home mortgage fund, extension of provincial drug subsidies to all Manitobans and a day-care program involving income-related subsidies for families.

Saskatchewan: The budget proposed financial aid to low-income groups, measures to develop the non-grain sectors of the economy and no increases in any major provincial tax. Spending is estimated at $899 million on revenues of $851 million, increases of more than 24 per cent in both.

Programs include $19 million in income supplements to lower-income families, a $100-million five-year aid package for urban municipalities and doubled spending on northern Saskatchewan. The government said all money from special oil taxes will go to a fund to develop the oil industry and explore for new reserves.

Alberta: A $18-million surplus is expected from $1.524 billion in earnings and $1.815 billion in spending. The budget did not take into account the "hundreds of millions to a billion" dollars expected from higher crude oil prices and taxes; expected to go to projects to diversify the provincial economy. Provincial tax on gasoline and diesel fuel was reduced by five cents a gallon April 1 and a $25 million natural gas rebate plan retroactive to Jan. 1 will offset possible increases in the cost of natural gas.

The budget removed the provincial education tax, provided tax credits for renters and reduced health care premiums, paid for the elderly and low-income citizens.

British Columbia: The province's first $3-billion budget, promised no personal or corporate tax increases but outlined plans to use greatly increased resource revenues to finance increased social services. Subsidized was a three-part $100-million assault on the housing shortage.

A $30 annual renters' grant was given to persons under 65 and the allowance to renters over 65 was increased to $80 a year from $50. Some property tax deferments were announced for low-income residents over 65, widows, the blind and the disabled.

TAX reductions averaging $30 to $40 were announced for homeowners as a start on a five-year plan to remove school taxes from residential property. Income payments to the elderly were increased.

McKuen Refutes Image Of Destitute Poets

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — The poet with a slim volume of self-published poems under his arm has long been a symbol of poverty but Rod McKuen has shattered that image by shining millions of dollars.

McKuen's seven slim volumes have so far sold nine million hard-cover copies. Not only can few poets lay claim to that, few novelists can.

Illegitimate, the product of a hard, poverty-stricken up bringing, McKuen, poet, composer, guitarist, singer was not surprised when success finally came.

"I am rather astonished, though, that things came though, that things came about through poetry," he said.

Written in blank verse, stylishly type-set and rhapsodizing about lost love, loneliness and private anguish, the poems were attacked by some critics but enthusiastically received by the public.

Working hard on concert tours, poems and new record-ings, McKuen did not even notice when he became one of the rarest species in humankind—a millionaire poet.

"It really surprised me when I read about it," said McKuen who lives in a Hollywood Hills villa surrounded by vivid flower beds and decorated inside with statuary and valuable paintings.

"So I immediately called my accountant to ask if it were true and he said, 'Yes,' several times over, but don't go spending it."

Born in Oakland, Calif., in 1933, he spent his boyhood drifting from town to town with his mother, a part-time waitress and dancehall hostess.

He never knew his father. McKuen wisecracks about it: "Being born in a blizzard gives you an advantage over the people who spend their entire lives becoming one."

At 11 he had to go to work to support his family and in that year he started keeping a diary, which included some five attempts at poetry.

He had a first book of poetry published when he was 21. "It sold about five copies—four to me. Then I became a closet poet. Never showed it to anyone."

McKuen served with the army in Japan and, returning home, found times just as hard as ever.

No one was willing to read his poems or listen to his songs and for several years he worked as a lumberjack, cowboy, cookie maker, disc jockey, even selling his blood every week to get food.

He became a nightclub singer, working so hard he lost his voice and acquired the raspy singing voice he has today.

McKuen won some recognition for his folk songs and translations of the post-war French singers and decided it was time to unearth his poetry again.

"I took out a book and took it round to the publishers. They all liked it but they said poetry wouldn't sell.

"So I published it myself and it sold 65,000 copies."

Then all the publishers were after him. Printed by a major publishing house, Stanyan Street and Other Sorrows—the title poem is about a wrecking ball knocking down one of San Francisco's lovely facades—sold a million copies.

His next, Listen to the Warm, sold more than two million.

A year later, for the first time in the 70-year history of the Publishers' Weekly, McKuen had three books in the top 10 best-seller list.

His poetry volumes sell for about $3 a copy.

McKuen's musical career did not lag far behind his success as a poet.

Because of his poetic lyrics, and his' long-standing affection for the French songwriters, McKuen found success in Europe long before it came in the United States.

In 1966 he was awarded the Grand Prix du Disque in Cannes for Seasons in the Sun, the result of a collaboration with Belgian singer Jacques Brel.

He has just re-recorded that long-play disc to find it as popular as ever. A single printing of 250,000 records was sold out in one day.

Among his trophies are four platinum records—a million copies sold in each of the markets in which the record was released—and two gold books—a million copies sold in hard cover.

McKuen still has an unpretentious manner, wearing perpetual blue jeans and preferring to squat on the floor as he is interviewed.

To the critics who have branded his poetry "simplistic" McKuen said he finds this a compliment.

"The nicest remark that was ever made about me was by a television talk show host who introduced me by saying, 'Meet Rod McKuen, the most undersized poet of our generation.'"

Cattle Egrets Back Again

Prince Edward County — The island county is once again enjoying a visit by a colony of white egrets, accompanied with their cattle (these birds are not native to Ontario).

The birds, mainly Cattle Egrets, are relatively new to Ontario, first appearing in the early '50s. No one knows for sure just how the birds, native of Africa, arrived in this western hemisphere. Their sightings in Prince Edward County coincided with the first Canadian nesting at Presqu'ile Park in 1963.

The all-white birds, about 20 inches in length, habitually forage with cattle, where grazing activities stir up insects, which are a large proportion of their food.

According to Mrs. Orr, ornithological records of Prince Edward County, at least two or three Cattle Egrets manage to turn up in the county every spring.

Only Two Weddings In Chapel

PICTON — The first couple ever married in Prince Edward County's historic White Chapel was Melissa Crook and Nelson Congor — Sept. 4, 1871.

Record of this event was one of many items of historical interest on exhibit at the White Chapel's Anniversary Service, Sunday.

The only other marriage ceremony ever performed within this church was of Kathleen W. Ackerman to Archie W. Pierce, Aug. 2, 1946, with the Reverend A. E. McCutcheon officiating.

Automation Issue

Mail Boycott Real Threat

By ANN LAUGHLIN

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) resolved Tuesday to boycott "in every possible way" automation of mail handling until the government agrees to negotiate the introduction of technological changes in the post office.

The resolution further empowered the union's national executive to refuse to have member-ship ratify any collective agreements without talks about mechanization which threatens the classification levels of post office workers.

The CUPW plans an information campaign to encourage the public and other unions to stop using the postal code. Other forms the boycott will take have not yet been spelled out.

"It's time for federal governments to do something for its own employees because private industry already has the right to negotiate technological change," said Jean-Claude Parrot, national chief steward of the 20,000-member CUPW. "If they don't maybe there won't be a postal service in Canada."

The gradual introduction of equipment to handle coded mail led to a government proposal downgrading the jobs of some mail sorters who would be paid less at similar code machine operators. The proposal prompted a three-week national strike by postal workers in April.

This is a more radical approach and a new orientation is needed if we are to be a fighting union," said Marcel Perreault, president of the Montreal CUPW local.

The Montreal local triggered the national postal strike with its protest against the effects of automation in the post office.

No sooner had the convention agreed to the Quebec resolution for further boycott than the Quebec delegation came to loggerheads over the issue.

The dispute was settled by turning down another Quebec resolution asking that the current system of maintaining seniority only in each class of job be maintained.

Other resolutions call for universal seniority which would allow a worker who changes to another job within the post office to keep his acquired seniority and not have to start from the bottom again.

Tories Promise Two Pensions On Retirement

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Stanfield said Tuesday night a Progressive Conservative government would pay old-age pensions to both husband and wife once the breadwinner in the family reached the age of 65.

He made the promise for the first time in the July 8 election campaign before an overflow crowd of about 2,000 at an east-end Montreal rally described by many officials as the most enthusiastic Mr. Stanfield has ever encountered in Quebec.

Prior to the election campaign, the Conservative leader said he favored paying the pension to both husband and wife when the main supporter of the family reached 65. He added a new touch Tuesday by saying that the other partner must be 60 or more to be eligible for the pension.

Resuming his election campaigning after a two-day weekend break, Mr. Stanfield was accompanied by his wife Mary, his daughter Mimi and New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield.

Montreal police said the meeting hall has a seating capacity of 1,500. When it was filled and standees clogged the aisles to bear Mr. Stanfield to it need 60 Conservative candidates from various Quebec ridings.

During his 30-minute speech, all but a few minutes of it delivered in French, Mr. Stanfield dwelt on his oft-repeated charges that the Trudeau government had given up fighting inflation.

Only those few Canadians who profit and prosper by inflation share the government's view that nothing can be done about it, said the Conservative leader.

He also accused the prime minister of having little or no concern for the ordinary Canadian.

"We've got Stanfield and we want 400,000 ... 15000 ... 4250? ..."

Trudeau Says Platform Doesn't Offer Miracles

VNCOUVER (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday night the Liberal party will begin releasing details today of its July 8 election platform, but voters should not expect miracles.

"Just about half of it you already see in the budget (or) on the order paper," he told a packed audience of about 2,000 at a rally in nearby West Vancouver.

He said the platform will be an extension and continuation of programs and initiatives the government had under way when it was defeated in the Commons last month.

"We're going to be talking about housing, about transportation, about inflation, the high cost of living, the high cost of housing; we're going to be talking about pensions."

IRA Suspected In Kidnapping Of Irish Peer

DUBLIN (CP) — Police spokesmen speculated today that the kidnapping of an Irish deerly Irish peer and his wife are holding them hostage for five members of the Irish Republican Army on hunger strikes in British jails.

Three gunmen seized the 71-year-old Earl of Donoughmore and his wife early today when they returned to their 600-acre estate in County Tipperary after a visit to friends. The kidnappers bundled the couple into a car and drove off in the direction of Dublin, 120 miles to the northeast.

A senior police officer said Lord Donoughmore may have been wounded in the kidnapping. A fresh bloodstain was found on the driveway, and the son of the earl's chauffeur said he heard a shot, after several hours.

The police launched a search and set up roadblocks for a radius of 30 miles.

Police hobby said they rounded up three men for questioning. But they were released.

Police speculated that the kidnappers were spurred by the despatch Monday night in a British jail of IRA members Michael Gaughan, who died after a hunger strike since March 21 in support of his demand that he be classified a political prisoner and transferred to a jail in Northern Ireland.

Gaughan was serving a seven-year term for bank robbery. Five other IRA members serving life terms in British jail for bombings also launched a also fasting a press the same demand. Gaughan made, and the Irish government has not interceded on their behalf.

If the kidnapping of the Donoughmores was politically motivated, it was not apparent why the two were the targets.

The earl was a Conservative member of the British House of Commons from 1943 to 1945 but has not been active politically since then. However, he is grand master of the Free Masonic Grand Lodge of Ireland and a prominent owner and breeder of race horses.

Police said that the kidnapper were about 25 years old and two spoke with southern Irish accents while the third had a northern Irish accent.

Meanwhile, reinforced squads of armed detectives will protect the Queen at the Epsom Derby horse race in London today as fears grow that Irish terrorists may attempt a spectacular reprisal following the death of Gaughan.

Israel Calls Alert

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Israel was placed on a special alert today, the seventh anniversary of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Special security arrangements were in force to prevent guerrilla activity and Israelis were warned to be careful of suspicious-looking objects.

The new Israeli cabinet also was concerned about possible demonstrations against the visit of UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. Many Israelis accuse the United Nations of being anti-Israeli.

Waldheim arrived in Tel Aviv as part of a Middle East tour and promised every assistance from the world body in implementing disengagement agreements that Israel has with Egypt and Syria.

Waldheim will meet with the new Israeli government of Premier Yitzhak Rabin and with officials of the UN force observing the truce agreements. One thousand Canadian troops are taking part in the UN force.

"The U Nis ready to render every assistance for the implementation of the disengagement agreements," Waldheim said.

He said the disengagement agreement between Israel and Syria "is a very important step forward and opens the door for the resumption of the Geneva peace conference."

Meanwhile, Israeli security forces said a terrorist attack was averted by the capture of two Arab guerrillas near the Lebanese border Tuesday.

The pair, both 19, slipped across the border armed with guns, grenades and explosives, police said. The Israeli state radio quoted the two as saying they were ordered to "make a slaughter" by firing at random on civilians in the Metulla-Kfar Yuval area of Nahariya or the port city of Haifa.

In Geneva, Israeli and Syrian generals completed details for carrying out the troop-disengagement agreement signed by their governments last week.

Details of an exchange of prisoners to begin Thursday and repatriation of the dead of last October's war are part of the agreement, informed sources said in Geneva.

United States Secretary Henry Kissinger says he told Syrian leaders he would ask the U.S. Congress for $100 million in foreign aid for Syria if a disengagement agreement was reached with Israel.

However, no commitments "either implied or expressed" were made to Syria during this 34-day peacemaking trip to the Middle East, Kissinger told the House of Representatives foreign affairs committee Tuesday.

The $100 million, part of $4.3-billion in economic assistance contained in the foreign-aid bill, is "a special reconstruction fund" for use "to reinforce the peace process" in the Middle East, he said.

The bill sets out $900 million for aid to the Middle East, including Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria.

Unharmed by Guerrillas

Calgary Pilot Released

OTTAWA (CP) — The external affairs department confirmed Tuesday reports that Grant Wyatt, a 30-year-old Calgary pilot, has been released by guerrillas in Asmara, Ethiopia.

An external affairs spokesman said Mr. Wyatt appeared in Asmara in good health earlier in the day. But there were no details yet on how or why he was released.

There was no information yet on the fate of an American nurse captured with Mr. Wyatt May 27 by guerrillas of the Eritrean Liberation Front.

A Dutch nurse, Anna Stickwerda, was killed during the abduction.

The external affairs spokesman said Mr. Wyatt reported he was well treated by the guerrillas.

The Canadian pilot was flying for CanWest Aviation Ltd. of Calgary which is under contract to the Tenneco Oil Co. of Houston, Tex.

The guerrillas also captured five other persons flying in another CanWest helicopter leased to Tenneco in March. That plane was operated by President Don Wetherfort, 27, of Calgary.

Mr. Wyatt apparently was on his way to pick up the five prisoners last week when he landed between Tenneco and the guerrillas when he was seized.

While in Calgary pilot was on his way to a rendezvous with the prisoners, guerrillas attacked a nearby United States missionary hospital. When Mr. Wyatt arrived, he was told the guerrillas who forced him to fly to an unknown destination, the external affairs spokesman said.

Common Market Mends After Reaching Low Ebb

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — The Common Market is on the mend again after months of crisis which brought the nine-member community to the lowest ebb in its 16-year history. This was he strong impression to emerge from Tuesday's parallel sessions here of EEC foreign and farm ministers.

"A lot of progress has been made today in a number of areas," Foreign Minister Garret Fitzgerald of Ireland said after Tuesday's day-long discussion.

His reading of the situation was echoed by West Germany's new Foreign Minister, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who presided over the foreign ministers' council.

The meetings marked the debut of the new French and West German governments. Both pledged to do their utmost to lift the community out of its rut.

It also marked the formal go-ahead for a renegotiation of Britain's EEC entry terms, a controversial demand by the new Labor governments that did much to contribute to the community's state of disarray.

The farm ministers dissipated the gloom still further by taking a first step towards restoring free trade in agricultural produce with Italy following last month's introduction of the Italian import-deposit scheme.

When Britain launched its renegotiation bid last April, the atmosphere here was one of illhumor and pessimism about the whole future of the Common Market.

Tuesday, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan of Britain adopted a more dulcet tone and his EEC colleagues reciprocated by granting him what he wanted—a thorough study of the on EEC member states since the enlargement of the community last year.

Community College Teachers Quit Bargaining

Representatives of Ontario's 5,500 community college teachers broke off contract negotiations with the provincial government, yesterday.

A year of intermittent negotiations brought a final salary offer from the colleges' council of regents of 6.5 per cent for 1972 and 9 per cent for 1974. Teachers say the council also demanded that most teachers increase their workload to 800 teaching hours a year from 640.

Ross Rachar, chairman of the Colleges of Applied Arts and Technology academic negotiating team, notified teachers that negotiations were broken off by management's refusal to give assistances that the teaching load will not be increased, "among other things.

Andrew Todd, chief negotiator for the Civil Service Association of Ontario, representing the teachers, said they offered to reduce their council's offer of $775 a teacher to cover inflation to $98. In effect, this would have given back about $1 million, if the council had committed itself to stabilizing the teacher workload.

The first contract expired last September. Under the Crown Employees Collective Bargaining Act, negotiations were to go to compulsory arbitration, but earlier this year the teachers voted to boycott arbitration hearings.

Mr. Todd said he had "no idea what will happen next. The academic people are frustrated and very angry."

A release from Norman Sisco, chairman of the council of regents, says its offer represents an approximate 24 per cent increase. However, Paul Wall, president of Loyalist College's branch of OPAO CAATC academic division, says this percentage was "calculated by lumping together the inflation bonus, and the merit increment awarded at local administrations' discretion with the 6.5 and 9 per cent annual increases."

Mr. Sisco is basing the 24 per cent increase on the absolute maximum earnings of a full-teaching master, now $18,980. There are only three teaching classifications above full master's, which is a maximum now paying about $1,805, says Mr. Wall. A very small percentage of the 5,500 community college teachers are full masters, he adds.

The Metaphysical Attracts

MADOC — The PSI centre for studies in metaphysics has been attracting more and more disciples.

So much so, the centre now is in the throes of expanding to meet the influx of interest. By fall, what is expected to be busiest month on record, a new, three-storey building, housing administrative, dormitory and study areas now is being raised at the corner of Highways 7 and 62.

The PSI centre is the site of a former art school on Highway 7 east of here. It was here that the PSI project was first launched, three years ago.

The centre is a key facility of the Bartonian Metaphysical Society, which emphasizes the philosophy of personal strength through awareness and examination of inner self.

First started in the 1960s by Winifred G. Barton in Ottawa it has attracted adherents from across Canada and the United States.

It now counts 12 teaching centres, where students are instructed in the society's teaching. Belleville is among communities where the Bartonian message is imparted in night course session.

The PSI centre is its major facility which now attracts students of all ages, religious and cultural backgrounds — to the Madoc area from across Canada and the United States, says Dr. Barton.

She's on hand to help with the raising of the new building, which will supplement the cabins inherited from the art school.

The project, she says, is an upgrading of facility to accommodate more students.

Activities at the PSI centre run from May to October.

PSI is a derivation from the Greek. It signifies human inner spirit or essence and is work in human psychology is the study of human personality and behavioral patterns.

Mohawks Take Special Course To Qualify Them as Teachers

TYENDINAGA — Three people from Tyendinaga Reserve, two women and a man, have applied for the special course at Hamilton Teachers' College to qualify them as teachers after two seven-week summer courses.

The program, announced by minister of education Thomas Wells Tuesday, is sponsored by the federal and provincial governments. So far, 132 applications have been received for about 85 places in the course. University degree requirements have been waived in an effort to recruit more native teachers.

Chief William Brant of The Bay of Quinte Mohawks said he recommended the three people for the course. All are mature people.

Guy Filion, head of the teacher education and certification branch of the ministry of education said from Toronto that all applicants have to be recommended by a native organization. In the case of treaty Indians, this is usually the band chief. He said none of the applicants have yet received final approval.

Filion said the program is an effort to recruit more native teachers.

Salvationist Transferred

PICTON — Captain George Price of the Picton Salvation Army and his wife, Marion, will leave Picton this month for a new appointment.

Capt. Price has been named assistant administrator of the Sherbourne Street hostel for men. His new duties will begin June 27.

Capt. and Mrs. Price have served in Picton for more than a year and will participate in a farewell service here on Sunday, June 23.

Summer Visitors Won Over

Nature Study For Outlet

OUTLET — For the fourth consecutive season, plans are under way for the summer's interpretive program at Outlet-Sandbanks Provincial Park.

Geared to stimulate interest in the park's natural history, the program is receiving increasing interest and enthusiasm from the park's summer visitors, according to Assistant Park Superintendent, James Ives.

Heading up this summer's program is Rosemary Hood, of Havelock, this year's park naturalist. In addition to being an "information centre" at the park, Miss Hood's activities will include conducting organized and impromptu nature hikes along the various parks.

One of the more popular facets of the program every summer is the large amphitheatre, situated in Outlet Park. Featuring special talks, slides and films twice a week throughout the summer, the evening attraction has drawn as many as 1,500 people at one showing.

As well as following the general format of the park's interpretive program, Rosemary has introduced ideas of her own. One of these which she will be implementing this summer is an attempt to interest children in hobbies, such as collecting.

Rosemary has also brought along a microscope to be used in this year's interpretive program. "I hope to introduce the kids to some of the microscopic life in the two parks," she explained.

Although focusing primarily on natural history peculiar to the park, Rosemary intends to provide information regarding areas that are not connected with the Ministry of Natural Resources, how to get there and what one may see there.

A display cabinet housing items of interest from the park, a library of books on nature, canoe trips and information of Pollution Probe is also included in Rosemary's program for this summer, running from the end of June until late August.

For Rosemary, who is now in her fourth year at Queen's University, majoring in biology, the outdoors has always been one of her fondest interests. A member of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, she has also worked at the Kortwright Waterfowl Park at Guelph and Pollution Probe, Kingston.

Ted Snider Named Citizen of Year

TRENTON — Radio station personality Ted Snider has been named as Trenton's Citizen of the Year.

This marks the second year for presentation of the award which began in 1973 when it was given to Mrs. Reg. DeGroot for her work with children.

Mr. Snider was chosen by a ballot system of the Circle of Columbian Squires, primarily for his work with the Trenton Citizens Band.

Nine people showed up for the band's first audition 11 years ago. This number has expanded to a 32-man orchestra that is booked to play an average of two engagements a week for the summer. The band performs at civic functions, cadet inspections and is a bedskiing group for Trenton's Canada Day celebrations held on the July 1 weekend.

Mr. Snider said "The sort of thing shakes you up," when asked for his reactions on the award presentation. "I was taken aback ... it was very kind of them," he said.

Mr. Snider was born in Smithfield and attended public school there, completing his high school education at Trenton. He later left for air force duty and then to the University of Toronto.

Now Under Observation

STIRLING — A half-ton pickup truck driven by Melville Grills, RR 1, Stirling, received $800 damage Monday when it struck a cow.

The cow, owned by Norman Cooney, R 1, Stirling, and valued at $200, clambered up after the accident and was taken to the barn for observation.

The pickup truck was northbound on Highway 14 about four miles north of Stirling when the accident occurred.

Election Progress

Prime Minister Trudeau has been doing some back-slapping so far as his cabinet men are concerned. Take Mitchell Sharp for example: "one of the wisest and most humane of foreign ministers." And John Turner: "he has helped make Canada with its prosperity the envy of the world." And Eugene Whelan: "he talks in the language of the farmer."

Well Mr. Trudeau said all that, or words to that effect, and he is as entitled to his opinion as he is to ice the Government cake with the choicest ingredients at his disposal — however difficult of course it may be to have on his political cake and eat it. For it is not everyone who believes that the timid prosperity that Canada exhibits today is rooted in solid ground.

Turner has said inflation "will begin to subside as supplies come in better balance with demand." This of course is the traditional view of inflation and its cure; but why has it taken so long? Remember when Sharp was finance minister and the mini-budget in which he issued dire warnings that Canadians would have to tighten their belts — or else. Of course nothing changed.

The Government, as Opposition leader Robert Stanfield, points out, simply prints more money than it spends on money. A "fiscal" policy Stanfield calls it.

When people go to the polls July 8 anyone voting for the Prime Minister and a return of the present Government could be doing so for the wrong reasons. For if Mr. Trudeau, supported by his attractive young wife, is showing some of the old charisma, this time with more political punch in place of the 1972 presidential campaign, he has told us nothing as yet of the whys and wherefores of Government spending — offered no explanations for the high-priced bureaucracy, the strange side pockets and hideaways, or his own excessive spending on staff, official car and homes. Or the incredible extravagance of the bilingualism programs. An attractive personality should not be permitted to gloss over these issues.

Richard Gwyn of The Ottawa Journal puts his finger on Government evasion this way: "Much about this Liberal campaign is manipulative. If skilful, fairly expert strategos manufacture the visual color that looks good on television; stay away from specifics and the hard edge of policy; make leadership rather than ideas the issue."

But do we have leadership today? Is it not more skin-to drift and an erosion of many old values — including such long-forgotten basics as thrift and balancing of the books. Old-fashioned maybe in an era of almost unlimited credit, but something we should preserve at least to a greater extent than is the case today.

Where the Opposition is concerned, there is criticism of the PC's plan to control prices and incomes, but a point missed by many is that this is designed in part to benefit low-wage earners.

One thing for sneaking, the election may be decided not so much on issues or on facts and figures, but on personality and whoever has the slibbest tongue. If the present Government is returned, gone will be the opportunity for fresh approaches and what is needed most: a Government that is more accountable for its policies, more sensitive to the needs of people, and to the many pressing concerns of the domestic scene.

D-Day Memories

With preparations for the 30th anniversary of D-Day tomorrow there is news also of the death of F. G. (Topsy) Topham, 54, who won the Victoria Cross in 1945 for bravery in the Battle of the Rhine. A report from Toronto says he died suddenly last week. Bravery such as his: going to the aid of a wounded man after two other medical corpsmen had been killed, and carrying on after being shot in the face himself, is the kind of thing remembered with respect at this time. A native of Toronto and one-time Kirkland Lake miner, Topham had worked with Toronto hydro since the war.

They Don't Necessarily Go Together

Strong Men Of The Cabinet and Creeping Socialism

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — This "enchanted and enchanting circle of incompetence" is one of the more flattering descriptions of the executive Leader Stanfield has for the Minister Pierre Trudeau's cabinet.

The essential ingredients of incompetence have to be its competents.

Who are they?

There is quite a choice, for across his six years of power, the Prime Minister has played musical chairs in cabinet with as many as 30 ministers, the current count around the Privy Council's enormous oval table.

If you ask the Conservatives — matter of fact such an enquiry is unnecessary, since the Tories for weeks made their Number One choice for cabinet clown in their debates in Parliament — Supply and Services Jean-Pierre Goyer — automatically has to go to the foot of the cabinet class.

His media handle, you will remember in rousing up the administration of the RCMP, the National Parole Board, the Penitentiary Service and other federal agencies as Solicitor General.

He is not to be negative in this assessment.

And let us not call the Tories. They are not exactly unprejudiced witnesses.

Instead, let us back into it, or, turning it around, forget the losers in the cabinet and pick the winners.

And there are some.

Unmistakably the winners, 18 men who, over the perspective of 36 uninterrupted years of close-up, on-the-scene Parliament-watching would stand out in any Prime Minister's cabinet, from Mackenzie King through Louis St. Laurent, John Diefenbaker, Lester Pearson to Pierre Trudeau.

The pedigree of cabinet class has to be in this Commons track record, the kind of performance.

And that is a compatible of qualities involving the ability to run a department smoothly, avoiding the hungry trouble spots, keeping the over-aggressive Opposition at cooperate, and even, for the real experts in political human relations, winning its co-operation.

So who can do that?

Well, running down the list in order of seniority, there is Privy Council President and Government House Leader Allan MacEachen of Inverness, Cape Breton, whose diplomatic skill and parliamentary experience has made him a key performer in business for a year and a half. Allan MacEachen's secret weapon was friendship; the man to see was Sharp.

Treasury Board President Charles M. Drury, of Montreal, old Liberal family integrity to spare; a stern, and in private politics, tough-as-nails reformer able to survive among the Trudeau swingers on sheer guts. "I'm not a politician," he once said, "but they recognized his worth.

Indian and Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien of Shawinigan, tough, uncompromising and able to say no when the public, if not always the party interest needed it said.

Finance Minister John Turner of Ottawa, the man in the hot seats, Justice and Finance, with the courage to stand by his principles.

Labor Minister John Munro of Hamilton, impearing of blue-collar constituency.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan of Amherstburg — who has to be seen and heard to be believed. The common, down-to-earth dirt farmer touch, a cabinet to "many self-styled athlete.

Transport General Minister Jean Marchand of Montreal, the tall guy of the bunch, stark-raving labor leader of the old Federation of Trade Unions and still toying, like any PMG, being the least sophisticated member of the cabinet impossible less: Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie of Hamilton, the 10 silling watchdogs. The performers.

All challenging. It all goes to Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier, socialist-do-gooder confessed "reformer in income" as Tory frontbencher Ged Baldwin, in a typical Tory bloodletter of the middle class.

Internal Friction and Isolation Plague Burma: Since The War a Mysterious, Despotic, Land

By JOHN D. HARRISON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Asia's most isolated nation is the People's Republic of China, and in fact it never was, but much smaller Burma, her neighbor in Southeast Asia.

Since the Second World War and its "liberation" from Japanese occupation by some of the toughest fighting of that war, Burma has been an independent state. The Second World War also meant the end of its role as part of the pre-war British Empire of India. Burma shorn by war and its colonial status, the post-war sweep for independence in Asia, has remained a nation of deep mystery, almost total isolation and of confusing internal politics.

And yet few countries in Asia are as accurate and as clear a vision of a nation in the minds of millions of occidentals as this land of pagodas, long rivers and the place of the unforgettable, if simplistic novel The Road to Mandalay where the flying fishes play.

Almost literally no one outside of Burma, and not a few European has trod the Mandalay road, gawked at the Buddhist treasures of Rangoon since the days it was a British provincial capital.

Foreigners stopping over in Rangoon, which is all they are allowed to, move cautiously around this once great Asian city and never for more than 24 hours. What Rangoon has to offer is seen instead in bustling Bangkok or sedate and touristy Bangkok, capital of the neighboring kingdom of Thailand.

Yet Burma is torn with a dissension as complex, as Asian specialist is needed to unravel it. Warring participants include, if you can believe it, remnants of an entire army of Nationalist Chinese which collapsed on the mainland state in 1949, the growing Burmese Communist Party with its own guerrilla-type army, confusing array of restless ethnic communities mainly in the northeast of the country almost ceaseless fighting allegedly stimulated by Peking. The former army division of Chiang Kai-shek is a major developer and exporter of the opium which finds is way into Thailand and Vietnam and from there to both Asian users and the once huge American colonies in Asia.

The armed independence movements of the various ethnic communities fight both the Rangoon army, a Nationalist military presence which the Rangoon government cannot dislodge and the Rangoon regime itself, for a share of the very lucrative opium market and for survival.

As for that growing interest Communist army, the central Burmese government in Rangoon cannot say for sure whether Chinese or Russian Communist assistance to it is uppermost. The Burmese Communists are armed with the ubiquitous AK-47 automatic rifles now in the hands of just about every guerrilla outfit from the Burmese and the Palestinian Liberation outfits to the professional IRA to Latin America's urban guerrillas.

Burma Anti-Communist, China have been unfriendly to each other for a variety of reasons. So presumably the guns and stuff do not originate with Peking, especially since Burma now has a non-aggression treaty with China and is forging the re-introduction of a 500-million Communist Chinese aid program.

Yet officers of the Communist Party guerilla army have cap Chinese not Burmese in facial features, in their uniforms now from the various restless ethnic regions in revolt against distant Rangoon.

Yet so isolated has Burma remained from the West and East in spite of these suspected incursions from outside Communist sources, the recent con-agression treaty between Rangoon and Peking is the only international treaty yet signed by Burma with any country since independence in 1948.

Burma isolated and complex, is the true enigma of Asia.

Yugoslavia Ponders Future

By KEVIN DOYLE
The Canadian Press

The 10th congress of the Yugoslav Communist party is celebrating what looks like a clear victory for 82-year-old President Tito over forces that threatened to rip apart his country's hard-won unity.

But hand-in-hand with this victory is speculation about who will succeed the aging pivotal president, one of the most remarkable leaders in modern history.

Opening the congress, last week, Tito discussed a plan which led to the the expulsion of 50,000 members from the party since it last met in 1969 and said that as a result, the six republics which make up Yugoslavia now are united behind the central government.

Most observers have praised his frankness and honesty and generally accepted his estimation of the country's security. This contended that with unity restored, Yugoslavia now can safely co-operate with other Socialist and Communist countries without risking its independence.

The remark was considered especially significant because the congress was attended by Soviet representatives for only the second time since Tito broke with the Eastern bloc in 1948.

With an apparent display of confidence, he went out of his way to praise Soviet Political leaders in large numbers and expelling them from the party indefinitely.

His ability to accomplish this without bloodshed, for the most part, and without leveling harsh, crippling repression is a measure of Tito's capacity for leadership.

The most likely candidate for the job is 64-year-old Edvard Kardell, a Slovenian, who like Tito, was a hero of the anti-German resistance movement during the Second World War. But he lacks Tito's immense popular appeal and unfailing capacity for rallying all sections of the population in a crisis.

These characteristics may be vital for any future Yugoslav leader. While Tito pacified the country's disruptive forces for the time being, they are likely to remain dormant when he leaves the scene.

Yugoslavia's basic problem is that it is made up of out of a number of small Balkan states that were created immediately after the First World War. As in all federations, there have been sporadic separatist movements ever since.

The trouble came to a climax at the beginning of the 1970s after a decade in which Tito tried to develop a system of loose management by the central government, allowing a strong measure of autonomy to the various republics.

But this opened the way for the leadership in the republics to pass the basis of their nationalists whose demands for even greater freedom threatened to break up Yugoslavia.

In 1969, the problem had become acute. This was forced to act ruthlessly by dismissing local leaders in large numbers and expelling them from the party indefinitely.

His ability to accomplish this without bloodshed, for the most part, and without leveling harsh, crippling repression is a measure of Tito's capacity for leadership.

LETTERS

An Approach to the OMB

The following is the text of a letter addressed to the Ontario Municipal Board.

As a resident and taxpayer of the city of Belleville I wish to strongly protest the purchase of the so called Potter property outside the city limits for the outrageous price of $700,000.00.

The property, we have been given to understand is being purchased by the city of Belleville, Sidney township and the Moira River Conservation Authority. The government cannot draw on the grounds of cost and expense.

Even allowing for the fact that a road system to the site cost will be borne by the province, it is still taxpayers money that will be spent.

As a life time resident of this area I am fairly well versed as to what goes on in and around Belleville. There have been suggestions, which have not been denied, that this same property was offered a short time ago to a well known local developer for $300,000.00 and he declined it.

Ostensibly there is supposed to be some sort of plan to make the area into a trailer park complete with beach and other areas in the locality that are available at very considerably less.

I am of the opinion that this matter should be thoroughly investigated to ensure that, the purchase is necessary for the purpose claimed, that the price is a fair and equitable price in the light of current land values and that there is not, and will not be any conflict of interest. At this time, I share the feelings of a large number of residents that this purchase should be the subject of a referendum.

I look forward to your early reply.

CLARENCE E. YOUNG

Labor Motives Analysed

Editor,
The Intelligencer:

This is my reply to your Page 5 editorial note concerning the article, "Labor's Political Action Said: Labor's Right." I did in fact call attempt to prove that Mr. Reilly's motion, if passed, would not amount to black-mail. But arguing this point would have been redundant as I did not feel that the point, however, that persuasion, inducement, lobbying, political lure-wielding, etc., were employed by ALL special interest groups in the past. Labor cannot be expected, in fact should not be expected, to be holier than the rest. If you wish to call these methods "black-mail", o.k., that's fine with me, my guest. The usage of the word has become an esoteric one, assuming the connotation of blackmail now includes the application of political pressure. What I did find offensive in the article I replied to was your reserving the work "blackmail" for labor — but not for the (in earnest,) extortions employed by other special interest groups in preparation of raiding the city-treasury.

I believe in a system of checks and balances in which a dog is a dog, regardless of the color of his coat. The allegacity of fat-cats which currently in Belleville are, in my opinion, no more and no less repulsive, than the allegacity of lobbyhorses which may one day supplant them.

Our 200th drug store

Inspiration. It's a great thing. About ten years ago, the Shoppers Drug Mart people came out with an idea that changed the course of drugstore shopping in Canada. Through mass merchandising and volume buying, Shoppers Drug Mart stores were able to sell products at everyday-low prices. As the Shoppers Drug Mart idea grew, with more stores opening in cities from coast to coast, more Canadians began to discover the Shoppers Drug Mart method of buying their drugstore needs.

And now we have 200...200 stores in a uniquely Canadian family of drug stores that stretches from one end of this country to the other. Your Shoppers Drug Mart store is a part of it, offering you savings on your drugstore products throughout the year. We do it in the brightly lit, spacious and convenient locations that have made us a way of life for thousands of Canadians.

Today, we're proud of the fact that we have opened the 200th store in our family of drug stores, and we're offering you 200 tremendous specials during our 200th store celebration. (We approached major suppliers in Canada to help us pass on special low prices to you on 200 popular products. You'll find details of these savings in the Shoppers Drug Mart Moneysaver Special Issue, in this newspaper.)

We've opened our 200th store, but we're even prouder of the fact that so many people have come to rely on us as "their drug store".

Picnic Preparation Advice

By Doris Clark

We are getting into warm weather and picnic time. The families that are lucky enough are polishing up their trailers, looking at road maps and trailer camp literature. Outdoor fun is a great way to relax and appreciate our Canadian summers.

So I have been reading about a book which can be a useful guide, for the out-doors-minded. It gives ideas for safety with fire and water, good recipes for outdoor cooking and picnics, hikers love.

We have to admit that it rains sometimes (the fatuest would hate us if it didn't!). There are games and quizzes for the wet weather and ideas for hobbies or reading. It was written for a Canadian family by a Canadian mother.

There are even suggestions for family prayers suitable for summertime camp life. It might just get you going!

If you want details, write it, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envlope.

Dear Doris: I wish more depressed housewives would awaken themselves of your kind service. Your letter, was so very understanding.

The very fact that I did write a letter to you was in itself a sobering fact for my husband. Not a word was mentioned but the easier relationship that it brought about was very evident.

I have confronted him with my flat refusal to be bullying of our daughter. He was quite surprised I had noticed because I know he felt he was doing it behind my back. I have also told him that if is coolness I would not hesitate to go to a lawyer and have something done.

This has sobered him up somewhat. But to me, the great thing is that someone to whom I could "speak" in confidence is at hand to advise me — you!

Perhaps in my concern over keeping peace in the family I have been a doormat in the past but this talk with you and the result I have had with the shock treatment seems to be opening his eyes.

The atmosphere is better. Thanks to you and God bless you.

Grateful.

Dear Grateful: Then so am I grateful. So often I fear to communicate keeps a human impasse from strengthening out. Many husbands are unaware of the resentment seething below the surface in a wife who is being bullied.

And might I suggest that this happens the other way 'round, too? Being blamed and unpredictable, we simply must keep explaining ourselves, if we want understanding.

Dear Doris: Where could I find a book containing the text or different letters, like friendly letters, sympathies, business, etc?

I am educated in my native country, and often I need to answer or write different types of letters in English. It is very hard for me; I make so many mistakes.

Thank You.

Dear Thank You: Try your public library. "Amy Vanderbilt's Etiquette" has an entire section on correspondence which should be a big help to you. The librarian may be able to find other books on the subject, too.

Doris invites comments on correspondence, in care of this newspaper. If you read about a problem similar to the rue you have solved, let's hear about it.)

Life-Saving Formula For Premature Infants

VANCOUVER (CP) — The lives of at least 10 Vancouver babies who developed feeding problems shortly after birth have been saved in recent months through an intravenous feeding formula containing soybean fat.

Dr. Magaret Pendray, a full-time pediatrician at Vancouver General Hospital's intensive care nursery and assistant professor of pediatric sat the University of B.C., says at least 10 of the babies treated so far would have died without the formula.

Dr. Pendray and her colleagues combine soybean fat with protein hydrolysates (proteins broken down into amino acids and peptides) along with dextrose, minerals and vitamins.

Dr. Pendray said: "There are a couple of youngsters who are showing some signs of liver problems. These babies had to undergo surgery for an abdominal abnormality after birth and subsequently presented complications."

She said it is difficult to determine whether the original defects are to blame or the formula is lacking an important nutrient.

The soybean fat formula has been recognized in Europe for nearly 10 years as an effective life-saving aid to newborns in trouble.

In Canada, the health protection branch gave the green light to researchers and doctors here less than two years ago, sanctioning use of the formula.

Dr. Pendray credits Dr. Arvid Wretling, head of the department of nutrition at Karolinska Institute, Stockholm, for his full-scale research into the soybean fat formula.

"He has done the most work with it and we took our lead from him," she said.

For many years, newborns could not be fed fats intravenously because of serious side-effects, including high fever and bleeding disorders.

"These fats originally came from cottonseed oil and their use was quickly prohibited."

Scientists have since credited soybean oil with astonishing success. In fact, soybean oil fats closely resemble human fat particles, which may explain their compatibility in the human body.

Candidates for the soybean formula include premature infants unable to take food orally in the first few days of life and those born with congenital malformations which must be corrected surgically within the first week of life.

HIGH TIME

By Leslie Hillary

This is an account of a family trek to the land of the Sherpas by the wife of Sir Edmund Hillary; conqueror of Everest. Lady Hillary, and family (Peter, age 17; Sarah, 15; and Belinda, 13) joined Sir Edmund in Nepal with the aim of working on various Hillary Aid projects in the Everest region.

They talked to village councils, worked on building a new school, and endured hospitality so generous that it was hard on their health. Although enjoyable, Travelling in the Himalayas was sometimes dangerous and exhausting but according to Lady Hillary, compensations "found in brilliant and breathtaking views of the mountains and the friendship of the Sherpa people."

Lady Hillary, not the long suffering glamour type, didn't mind camping but was not very enthusiastic about peculiar food and intense cold.

However, she believes that their travels did a great deal for her children. They realize how lucky people with no formal education and none of our amenities can be every bit as civilized in other ways as we are.

The book is available in The Corby Public Library.

Ann Landers

Before You Jump, Think Of Family

Dear Ann Landers: I am a fairly attractive woman in my middle forties. To the outside world I appear to have everything a woman could want—a lovely home, beautiful children, a successful husband, and I've even excelled in sports and have won some trophies. No one would suspect that I've gone through periods of severe depression and about two years ago attempted suicide.

I have something important to say to the readers of your column who may have at any time contemplated taking their lives. The information I am about to pass along for free cost me $2,000 in psychiatric bills.

The next time you look longingly at that handgun, or that bottle of pills, or a bridge or window you believe will put an end to your agonies, remember the husband or wife or children or parents you would leave behind. No matter how blameless they may be, they will always think it was their fault that you killed yourself. All the rationalization in the world won't change it. They will carry to their graves the thought that something they did, or failed to do, caused you to take your life.

Do you want to place such a burden on your loved ones? If you commit suicide you'll surely do it.—Thank God I Didn't

Dear Friend: The impact of any letter is, of course, an unknown quantity, but I can tell you for certain that your letter prevented at least one suicide somewhere in the world today. Thank you for writing it.

Dear Ann Landers: I hope you won't think this is too far-out to print, but I need an answer. My girl-friend confided in me that since her husband returned from a trip up north their sex life has improved 100 per cent. The "secret," she said, is something he bought for $60 a half pound—powdered mountain-goat horns.

He mixes a half teaspoon of the stuff with a glass of water and drinks it just before he goes to bed. She claims it has performed miracles in their bedroom. I asked if she could spare a little, because my husband has been "too tired" or "too busy" for the last six weeks.

Yesterday when I suggested to Arnie that he try it, he laughed in my face. How come it works for my friend and not for us? Arnie insists I'm crazy. Please check with your experts and let me know.—Cold Feet

Dear Feet: My "experts" tell me that once the horns are off the goat they are useless, except as wall decorations—if you like that sort of thing.

"Love potions" have for centuries produced a neat income for hucksters. Since all sex stories begin in the mind, anything a person believes is credible will bring about the desired results. If you can sell Arnie on the stuff it might work for him, too. But it sounds too smart for such hogwash.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the teen-ager whose dad wouldn't let her drive the car for six months because somebody dented the fender (and there was no insurance) made me realize what a difference there is in fathers.

Mine had had gotten my driver's licence. It was a rainy night and I lost control of the car. I plugged a shiner and our 1973 sedan was nearly totaled. The repair bill was about $2,500.

My dad said one thing to me: Thank God you are all right. I can always buy another car, but I could never buy another daughter."—Lucky Me

Dear Yes: Double lucky, you mean. Thanks for a heart-warmer.

Dining On Lilies Of The Field, Violets Of The Forest

If you're equipped to brave the mosquitoes and blackflies, now is one of the loveliest times of the year to explore the fields and forests.

Not only will the outdoors yield bouquets to take home, but you can also find an abundance of things to eat, especially during this month.

Readers of Euell Gibbons' book "Stalking the Wild Asparagus" will be already acquainted with the variety of edible wild plants available to us here. From this book, and from local "authorities", here are a few recipes for preparing weeds and wild flowers in the tastiest possible way.

* * *

First, the most tempting recipe... and one you should make immediately before the violets are past their prime. Look for violets in shady woods and by the roadside, and use either purple or yellow ones, but not both in the same recipe.

This recipe is one used by Grace Ringrose and her daughter Wilda Day, who recommend it as especially high in Vitamin C, and therefore good for you as well as being good to eat. The jelly made from purple violets is good on toast, and the yellow violet jelly makes an excellent glaze on meats like ham.

VIOLET JELLY

Fill a large quart jar with blossoms. Cover with two and a half cups of boiling water. Seal for 24 hours. Then strain through cheesecloth to make two cups of infusion. (Even if you're using purple violets, the infusion will be yellow at this point.)

Mix the infusion with the juice of one lemon and one package of Certo powder. (The lemon juice will bring back the purple color.)

Bring to a boil, and then add four cups of white sugar, bring back to a hard boil for one minute.

Skim and pour into jars. Seal with wax or with a vacuum-seal lid.

Serve "on" to enjoy on the snowiest, blowiest day next winter.

* * *

If you're already acquainted with burdock, it's probably in an unpleasant way. You've been snagged by burrs, or have tried to rid your garden of this three-foot-high pest.

Happily, you can be burdock to your advantage if you catch it at the right time. During June and July eat the roots, difficult to dig out of the earth, but worth the effort. (In Hawaii, where the root is called "gobo" it is believed to give one strength and endurance, and likewise has a reputation as an aphrodisiac.)

BURDOCK ROOT

The long slender roots have a fairly thick rind which peels easily, from the edible succulent roots will be about half an inch in diameter, and up to a foot long.

Slice thinly, "crosswise, and cook for thirty minutes in lightly salted water. Drain off this water and re-heat the roots in a very little water, with butter and salt, for a few minutes. Serve.

While Day says that burdock root kept in ice water until it is perfectly chilled, is crisp and very like celery in taste.

* * *

Milkweed is another weed so common that we regard it with scorn unless its secrets are found out. In fact, milkweed can furnish several types of food at different times of the year.

What must be always remembered is the method of ridding the plant of its bitter "milkiness". This is done by putting the part to be eaten in already boiling water, boiling for one minute, draining, and repeating two more times. This brief process precedes a final ten-minute boiling.

MILKWEED BUDS

Gather the buds when they are still green and tightly clustered, looking rather like broccoli. They appear dull and slightly woolly when cooked, but turn a beautiful bright green after being put into boiled water.

Follow the three one-minute boiling process, and then boil briefly in salted water. Serve with butter the same way you would broccoli, but don't expect the same taste.

* * *

The wild plant with the sweetest taste, requiring the easiest preparation methods is the Day Lily. It grows as a flower in our gardens, as a weed by our roadsides, and many never suspect the bounty it can provide at the table.

However, in Asia the plant is grown domestically and used as a vegetable in several different ways. The buds and flowers are dried for out-of-season use, which may even improve their flavor.

The common garden and roadside day lily, showing the edible buds and flowers

FRESH DAY LILY BUDS

Gather the unopened flower buds when they are nearly full size but still green. Boil only a few minutes. (The water will turn purple!) and serve like green beans with butter and seasoning. They really are delicious, with no bad taste of any kind. Another fancier way to prepare the buds is to dip them in a rich egg batter, and then quickly fry them in very hot fat until golden brown. Served on their own they'd make a light lunch.

The green buds — or the opened flowers — add a delightful flavor to soups and stews when added in the last few minutes of cooking. They impart a slight thickening agent, rather like okra.

* * *

Filling our swamps and ditches is a weed that produces more kinds of food than any other. The humble cattail is the source of all sorts of goodies, and during June gives up its green bloom spikes to be boiled and eaten much like corn on the cob. Later, it provides pollen usable as flour.

CATTAIL SPIKES

Gather the green bloom spikes before the yellow pollen shows, just about the time they are ready to break through the papery sheath that encloses them. Remove this sheath as you would husk corn, and cook the spikes as soon as possible so that they retain their flavor.

Boil only a few minutes in salted water, and serve as you would corn: with salt, pepper and butter. The very core is inedible, and like a corn cob must be rubbed from the cob. Later, it provides pollen usable as flour.

CATTAIL POLLEN

When cattails spikes are left for a few days, they show a thick coat of yellow pollen, which can be rubbed off with your hand into a container. Put through a fine-meshed sieve, this pollen becomes as fine as bloom powder.

Substitute up to half pollen for wheat flour in your favorite pancake or muffin recipe and it will give a golden color and a pleasing flavor.

Good Fringe Benefits

LONDON (CP) — Enoch Powell, former Conservative MP noted for his right-wing views, suggests Britain's low-paid nurses are more than compensated by good marriage prospects. Writing in Soap, the Nurses' Newspaper, Powell says no occupation has a better start to marriage "almost because of working with young doctors." Powell is a former health minister.

Whalers Gone

WASHINGTON (AP) — The last American whalers were beached in 1972 after whaling was banned by the United States department of commerce. The three small ships with their bow-mounted harpoon guns were all that remained of what once was the largest whaling fleet in the world.

County Home Strike Possible

A last minute attempt to avert a strike by 70 employees of public workers at Hastings Manor is taking place today, at the Canadian Labor Relations Board.

The 57 workers of Local 1167, Canadian Union of Public Employees, voted 94-5 in favor of strike action Sunday, giving it union bosses the authority to call a walkout.

At issue in the question of vacation, vacation pay, sick wage payment and hourly two, four clinics expired on December 31.

Negotiation meeting between union representatives and county negotiators brought in from Toronto arbitrating place today in an attempt to settle differences.

Union vice-president, Milly Rumball said today that the union is seeking wage increases of $0.30 an hour over a two-year period as well as improved vacations and vacation pay.

The latest offer from the County allowed for hourly wage increases of 25 cents an hour in each of two years.

Said Douglas Lindsay, national representative for CUPE, "This 18 cent has already been gobbled up by the rise in inflation since January 1."

The workers involved include nursing assistants, cooks, kitchen help, dishwashers, orderlies and cleaners. They are part of 185,000 public employees in the province.

Mr. Lindsay said the high wage in the Manor was for a graduate nurse making $3.30 an hour. Cleaners and laundry and kitchen aides make $2.35 an hour he said.

He added that the workers are seeking increases in line with those for municipally owned homes for the aged. He said that recent wage increases for similar workers in Renfrew and Sault Ste. Marie brought wages there to $4.15.

Mr. Lindsay said that two days of conciliation talks with the Ministry of Labor failed to resolve any differences. He added that any strike decision is left up to the local union executive in consultation with its negotiation team.

"We hope to resolve this thing today," said Mr. Lindsay.

Organized Labor Votes To Boycott UCS Appeal

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Organized labor will boycott donations in Belleville's United Way campaign, this fall unless labor groups are given a "stronger voice in the inner circles of administration of the funds."

One month ago Ian Reilly, member of the Quinte District Labor Council executive, put the motion on the floor saying the boycott should be put into motion if Belleville's YMCA continued "double dipping" in the practice of getting funds from the appeal and then going to the public pocket again through city grants.

Tuesday night the motion was amended so that any of the "double dippers" could kindle a boycott. The other agencies listed as receiving money out of the public pocket twice are the United Community Services, Central Volunteer Bureau, CNIB, Victorian Order of Nurses, Navy League of Canada and Belleville Minor Sports.

The labor council represents more than a score of labor unions and their members.

Mr. Reilly says: "I know that only by some drastic action on our part would we get the attention of the United Way and the agencies."

Mr. Reilly believes labor can now sit down with the UCS and member agencies and conduct "frank discussions" about "sore spots."

"Labor should be represented on every United Way agency board of directors as well as being a member of the UCS board," he said. "Yes, I know we have a seat on a few of these boards but not in the decision-making level. This is where we belong."

Apparently, if this concession is not met, the labor council will set up a publicity program shortly before the October appeal, urging its members not to donate.

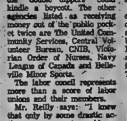
"Say, we've got their attention. They know it's the working man that pays the shot," said Mr. Reilly.

Jim Wasserman, council representative on the UCS board cast the single vote against the motion stating the labor council may be cutting its own throat. About 20 persons voted on the issue.

Calling minor sports the "biggest ripoff in double dipping," he went on to say a large number of labor people are involved in the group.

"They could make it financially difficult for us by going back to their locals and recommending contributions be cut off from the labor council," he said.

He said if the boycott goes through, "the UCS probably won't be able to raise enough money."



Mr. Reilly in his closing statement, said the UCS is a "disgrace and it's up to the guy who foots the bill to clean it up and get it back on the rails."

"We don't necessarily want the appeal — we want them (UCS) to come to their senses," he said.

It's difficult to determine exactly how much the campaign will suffer if organized labor pulls out.

Gordon Mollin, executive director of the UCS, said this morning both organized and non-organized labor contributed about $25,000 to the appeal last year.

"I don't know just how much would have been contributed solely by union workers," he said.

Easement Value To Be Determined

An Ontario Land Compensation Board hearing at the Hastings County Court House to determine the value of an easement taken by the city across Belleville Livestock Sales Co. Ltd. property on North Front Street, was expected to conclude today following a two-day sitting.

The hearing commenced Tuesday morning with property valuators for the two principals being the main witnesses called. The hearing is before R. H. Grant, vice chairman of the Land Compensation Board, and board members Lionel Lalonde and E. H. Reed, who are expected to announce their findings at a later date.

The city required a 50-foot-wide easement across the 564-foot-width of the Livestock Sales property to install its large diameter storm sewer, which runs from the Tracy Street area and across North Front Street to the Moira River south of the old Lazier's mill.

The city has offered $11,400 for the easement, while Livestock Sales owners are asking $59,787.82 for easement rights and loss of business during the pipeline installation.

Belleville realtor Douglas Grant testified as to the appraised value of the easement property. Giving appraisal testimony for the city was William Dietrich, of Ridner, Barrie and Dietrich of Peterborough.

Belleville solicitor Ronald Cass acted as counsel for Livestock Sales, while City Solicitor Gerry Miller represented for the city.

Apartment Robbed

Thieves stole approximately $34 worth of household goods from an apartment at 3 Hinton Street sometime between 7 p.m. yesterday and 1 a.m. today.

Police report that thieves forced open a ground floor window and entered apartment 27 where they stole two record albums, a carton of cigarettes and $16 in cash.

Sidney Sets Up Recreation Body

Sidney township has taken the first step toward creation of a recreation committee encompassing the entire Bay of Quinte area.

During a public meeting Tuesday, 25 township residents were astonished to form a Sidney recreation committee. Three members of Sidney's committee will serve on a regional committee as tentatively proposed during a meeting of area municipal officials early last month.

During last month's meeting, only the lack of a Sidney committee precluded almost immediate formation of the regional body.

Tuesday, approximately 25 township residents nominated 13 people to serve on Sidney's committee. All 13 names will be forwarded to township council which will okay the nominations by by-law, likely the next month.

Nominated are: Jack Bush, Ron Heagle, Robert Watson, Dianne DeCarg, Fred Mason, Phillip Meeks, George Bedard, Betty Ann McGrath, Marjorie Pruett, Fred Rollings and councillors Hadley Richardson and Reg McCurdy.

The latter three were not present during Tuesday's meeting. Walter Pat, Rollings, chairman of an ad hoc committee formed to study the township's need for an arena, nor councillor Richardson were reached today to indicate their intention to serve on the committee.

Councillor McCurdy said he would have to decline, the nomination due to his involvements elsewhere.

Wire Theft Fines $400

Two Belleville men were fined a total of $400 in provincial court Tuesday after they were convicted of stealing approximately $30 worth of copper wire that was strung along some poles beside the CNR railway tracks just south of the Sixth Concession of Thurlow last Nov. 1.

David John Bergeron, 20, of 163 Yeomans Street, Belleville, and Brian David Todd, 21, also of 163 Yeomans Street, were convicted of theft under $200 when their cases appeared before Judge J. L. Glendenning yesterday.

Bergeron and Todd had confessed to stealing a small quantity of copper wire from the CNR when they were arrested by police last Nov. 4.

Todd, who has a criminal record, was fined $250, while Bergeron was fined $150.

New Times For Pickup

Collections at postal boxes will change next Monday in Belleville.

It's due to two schedules for departure of mail from the city for Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, says Roy Wainwright, Belleville district Postmaster.

To meet the new time commitments, street letter boxes will be cleared at 1 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Sub post offices and boxes on Front St. will be cleared twice daily — the second time at 4:30 p.m.

Times of Saturday and Sunday deliveries will remain unchanged.

Mail at the post office will be processed at 8:30 p.m., which now closes at that time.

School Shed Broken Into

Belleville police are investigating a break-in at the sports equipment storage shed at Centennial Secondary School.

Late last night someone broke a heap off one of the doors on the southeast side of the building.

One of the items stolen, discovered in the breakin around midnight Tuesday and reported the incident to police.

At present nothing has been reported missing.

Parajumpers Competing For International Trophy

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

MOUNTAIN VIEW — Canadian airmen are working on a parachute competition hat trick, going for their third consecutive win over United States Air Force jumpers.

In the first two years of the North American Jumping competition, the southern cousins have failed to win the Allison Cup, signifying international excellence in pararescue work.

In 1972 the cup was taken by Summerside personnel followed in 1973 by Edmonton.

After the Canadian jumping position Thursday, Canadian crews are again showing strength placing first, second, fourth, fifth and sixth out of the seven crews competing.

American crews are in second and seventh places.

The meet covers three days of pararescue work, employed daily by air search and rescue personnel. These are para-jumping, parachute voyages to crash sites, free fall bundle drops and medical performance as a simulated crash site.

This is the first year for the crash site to be included in the competition. Marks are not being awarded for it. A spokesman at CFB Trenton said it is included this year more as an introduction to see if it should be continued in later competitions.

Tuesday marked the beginning of para-jumping while the "excellent weather held."

Winds must remain below 18 miles an hour for this segment as a safety factor. Jumping from an altitude of 1,500 feet, contestants were landing within two metres of the six-inch target.

For the remainder of the week, weather will not be as critical with supplies replacing men as parachute payloads.

The meet is expected to wrap up by Friday with a dinner for presentation of trophies.

Three trophies are awarded specifically for Canadian crews, with the Allison Cup the only one available for any contestant.

The cup is sponsored by Brig. — Gen. Bert Allison, retiring from the Canadian Armed Forces this summer.

Boat Recovered

Belleville police are attempting to determine who is the owner of a boat they was recovered by the LaSalle Ambulance Rescue Squad in the Bay of Quinte early this morning near the Bay of Quinte Fisheries.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reports that the LaSalle squad discovered the boat floating in the Bay around 2:51 a.m. today and towed it to shore where they turned it over to police.

At present the police believe the boat may belong to the Bay Bridge Rentals who reported the loss of a rowboat during the weekend.

The police have not yet made a positive identification of the recovered boat.

City's Centennial Committee Is Getting Down to Business

By JIM SMELLE
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Centennial Committee will meet first-of-June service on how to handle the city's upcoming big event in 1978.

The advice came from two organizers who worked on Kingston's tercentenary last year.

Chairman of the tercentenary, Walter Viner and executive secretary, Nancy Lords gave valuable hints to members of the committee on how to best prepare for the event and what to avoid during those preparations.

Both visitors to last night's meeting at City hall stressed the importance of preparing early for the event.

"If anyone is going to capture the imagination of the city, it won't happen overnight.

"The prime consideration is the length of the celebration whether it is to a year long celebration or something less than that," said Mr. Viner. He added that it was also important to involve as many people as possible in all levels of society in the celebration.

Speaking about the length of the celebration Mr. Viner suggested that rather than a continuous year-long celebration, it might be worthwhile to have specific celebrations on certain periods within a month or else have two or three specific celebrations. He should play up these areas. We can't expect people to be enthusiastic for 365 days in the year."

Turning to the handling of Kingston's tercentenary the former chairman mentioned that main events were scheduled for the beginning of the year, the summer and then at the end of the year.

The summer festivities included a visit by Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip to Kingston. Other highlights at this time included Homecoming '73 in July, and the re-enactment of the landing of Count Frontenac in Kingston.

Mr. Viner mentioned the importance of gaining the support of such groups as service clubs, the media, organizations in the city and the downtown merchants in promoting and carrying out the centennial. He mentioned that in the case of Kingston's tercentenary, the downtown merchants didn't have the support it could have from downtown merchants.

He said that his committee began planning for 1973 three years previous to that. The first of three public meetings was held on June 7, 1970. There were 18 people on the tercentenary committee.

Mr. Viner stressed the importance of selecting a committee that would be able to get along with each other for a long period of time.

He also emphasized the importance of appointing various subcommittees to handle various activities of the celebration. In the case of Kingston's celebrations, there were subcommittees for such activities as arts, historic tours, marketing, sports and publicity among other.

He added that a coordinating committee is essential to avoid duplication of events, pointing out that two service clubs may inadvertently decide on a similar project if there were no coordination.

Other helpful hints offered at the meeting conducted by chairman George Thompson and attended by Mayor Robin Jeffrey among other centennial committee members, included those dealing with quality rather than quantity; selecting an identifying logo and song or jingle; have a central office to work out of and have city council make a commitment now since there will be changes in it as time goes on.

Take 3

The mayor warmed to the idea of preparing early for the event. "We could have a warmup to centennial before 1978," she said. Public meetings on the city's centennial are planned for the fall.

Nixon Blasts Trent Report

TORONTO (CP) — The provincial government was accused Tuesday of "crass political patronage" in its approval of a subdivision project on the Trent River north of Belleville.

Opposition Leader Robert Nixon said the development, promoted by a former national Progressive Conservative party president and the son of a former Conservative MP, was going ahead despite three studies which said there should be no development.

The development of 256 lots is scheduled for Napanee, Ed-ond about 50 miles north of Belleville and will involve the trucking of sewage to a nearby rural community for dumping.

Mr. Nixon said the sewage should be dumped near the cottages of Bert Goodman, a former Conservative president.

Development of the island is being carried out by Troco Holdings Ltd. and Da, consulting firm is Metropolitan Consultants Ltd.

The president of both firms is Robert H. McGregor, son of a former Conservative MP.

Edward Good (L—Waterloo North) asked Environment Minister William Newman why the government was allowing the holding tanks to dispose of sewage when the government would not allow them elsewhere.

Mr. Good also said the federal government was not aware of the project which involved dredging in the Trent system.

The Liberals have said before that ecological damage might result from the project because the area contains bird-nesting and fish-spawning grounds.

"This whole blog has been covered up," said Mr. Good.

Mr. Newman said several earlier proposals by the developer-owned company were rejected by the government. The consulting firm is working toward fulfilling government requirements now.

The minister rejected a proposal by Mr. Nixon that the project be held up until a study indicated it was possible to proceed. He said the project could go ahead when his ministry's requirements are met.

Province Asked To Save Fruitland

TORONTO (CP) — A plea to save farm land in the Niagara peninsula and an exchange on Senagrant and illiberal farm labourers dominated the legislature's consideration of government agriculture estimates Tuesday night.

New Democratic Party members led both debates.

Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) asked the government to take action to save valuable farm land in the Niagara peninsula. He said that a great deal of fruit-producing acreage is disappearing, eaten up by urban development.

He said the land produces much of the country's better fruit and cannot be replaced.

Mr. Deans asked Agriculture Minister William Stewart to consider using government funds to buy land in the area to keep it in production.

The area might be competitive with any comparable area in the world if steps were taken to encourage farmers to stay on the land and if the land can be preserved from developers, he said.

He said the cost of such a program likely would be astronomical, but it would be worthwhile in the long run.

"You . . . can't reproduce the Niagara peninsula and you'll regret it when it's gone," he said.

Mr. Stewart said there are better ways of saving such areas, apart from massive government land purchases.

Maintaining good prices for fruit along with other programs to encourage farming will work just as well and will not cost the taxpayer enormous sums, he said.

The government was working with the regional government in the area in the production of a draft plan for land use. Strong local land planning can preserve farm acreage, he said.

James Renwick (NDP—Riverdale) attacked the government for its attitude toward migrant labourers working in southern Ontario as seasonal pickers.

He said they are paid poor wages, worked in intolerable conditions and were forced to live in poor housing.

He said the government is ignoring the situation.

Insurance Raises Spark House Row

TORONTO (CP) — Record increases in automobile insurance costs brought a storm of opposition criticism down on the government Tuesday.

Both Liberal Leader Robert Nixon and Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, attacked the government in the legislature for recent premium increases announced by 55 companies, members of the Canadian Underwriters Association.

Mr. Nixon called for a public hearing into the increases.

He suggested the province needs more control over the insurance industry.

John Clement, minister of consumer and commercial relations, said the increases were reviewed by the provincial superintendent of insurance and found to be justified.

He said that taken in the context of cost increases during the last two years, the premium increases are not excessive.

The minister said he reserves the right to call public hearings into the matter.

However, areas that used price-setting boards usually found prices rose higher than in areas of free competition.

Mr. Nixon asked where the competition is if 55 companies raise their rates in line with the underwriters association.

Mr. Clement said judgments are higher than in the past and repair costs have soared.

Mr. Lewis said the superintendent of insurance is a "patsy" of the companies and asked Mr. Clement to review the matter personally.

Mr. Clement said there are a number of factors involved in the increases and the superintendent of insurance is more knowledgeable in the field.

This brought Mr. Lewis to his feet shouting: "Who protects the consumer?"

The NDP leader said the new Ontario rates are higher than in provinces such as Manitoba and British Columbia, which have government-run automobile insurance programs.

Mr. Clement said those programs are subsidized by the taxpayers and are experiencing difficulties meeting costs.

Wants Transit Checked

TORONTO (CP) — A legislature committee should look into the government has announced plans for the Ontario government's experimental magnetic levitation rapid transit system, Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, said Tuesday.

The NDP leader said a select committee of the legislature could assess the project and decide whether to proceed with it.

But John Rhodes, minister of transportation, rejected the idea. The project was proceeding "extremely well," he said.

Mr. Lewis's call for an investigation followed the disclosure Monday by Ken Foley, head of the Crown-owned Ontario Transportation Development Corp., that delays over wording of contracts will prevent the experimental system from operating as planned at next year's Canadian National Exhibition.

The government has announced it is awarding contracts for the project to a consortium headed by Canadian Pacific Ltd. and the Ontario government is to build a 2.5-mile experimental track to operate at speeds of 250 miles an hour.

The system, where trains will run on magnetic cushions, is to be built on Ontario property.

Lewis Visit Warm

MONTREAL (CP) — David Lewis, New Democratic Party leader, spent about 90 minutes in Montreal's Tuesday, as St. Lawrence Blvd., returning to the area where he lived for 11 years during his adolescence.

Trooping in and out of stores along the street, Mr. Lewis received a warm reception from scores of people in the highly ethnic neighborhood.

Mr. Lewis' tour began in a citizens' centre where he addressed about 80 people from the low-income riding, including a pair of persistent questioners who asked him why French-Canadians form the bulk of the poor in Montreal.

Mr. Lewis said it was because the majority of the people here are French-Canadians.

"It is a uniquely French-Canadian problem, it's a battle all Canadians must fight and it's not based just on race or language.

"I can't accept that it's a battle of the poor French against the English. It's the poor French-Canadians and the poor English-Canadians against the corporations."

Mr. Lewis was asked about the language situation and the possibility of Quebec's separation from Canada.

Quebec's independence, he said, would result in the mutual disappearance of the provinces and of Canada which would be divided into three sections.

Regional tensions will continue throughout the country, he said.

Organizer Switches

OTTAWA (CP) — Mel McIlmoil, Ontario campaign director for the Liberals in the last federal election, has joined the Progressive Conservative campaign for the July 8 election.

Centre of a controversy in the multiculturalism ministry last year, Mr. McIlmoil said in a statement Tuesday he will campaign actively for Conservative Stephen Roman in Toronto's York North riding.

Mr. McIlmoil has held several important posts with the Liberal party. He was executive assistant to Senator Keith Davey, one-time national organizer for the party and now co-chairman of the Liberal campaign.

He also served as ministerial aide to Allan MacEachen, the government House leader, and Multiculturalism Minister Stanley Haidasz.

Caouette Rejects Socred 'Strategy'

LANGLEY, B.C. (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette told his supporters Tuesday night to reject any electoral strategy that would involve voting for any but their Social Credit candidates.

"We had 166 candidates in the 1973 election (in English Canada) and you could have elected 100 of them," he told an enthusiastic audience of about 150 in the community hall of the small centre near Vancouver.

Mr. Caouette said that in 1970 some Social Creditors argued that the only way to defeat Prime Minister Trudeau was to throw their votes to Conservative candidates.

"But he said there is no significant difference between the Conservatives and the Liberals and Social Creditors would achieve nothing by voting for those candidates.

The Langley meeting ended a 13-hour day of campaigning as the national Social Credit leader opened his four-day Western campaign.

His audience was obviously with him every moment of the way, interrupting his speech with repeated shouts of applause and responding to all his jokes.

Afterwards, many of them sought his autograph on copies of campaign literature.

Mr. Caouette, introduced with a small speech in French by Ed Hibbs, the local Social Credit candidate in Fraser Valley West, said the economy in Canada's chief problem.

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian Union of Postal Workers urged its 23,000 members Tuesday to support the New Democratic Party in the July 8 federal election.

Gray Derides Oil Firms

CALGARY (CP) — Herb Gray, minister of consumer affairs, Tuesday called the major oil companies "despicable" and accused them of creating a "scare situation" in Alberta over federal budget tax proposals.

The minority Liberal government had worked out the liberty impact of its plan to cut corporate tax exemptions in the oil industry and believed the move would be fair, he told a Liberal campaign breakfast.

The Ottawa economists and politicians concluded "there could be some kind of adjustment without risk to the status of the industry," Mr. Gray said in an interview.

He said the major energy business corporations would still get as good a break from the Canadian government as they do in other countries if the budget proposal passed.

Hees Favors 'Equal Jobs'

LLOYDMINSTER, Sask. (CP) — The Progressive Conservative party favors establishment of a new provincial industry in Alberta, George Hees, former Conservative transport minister, said Tuesday.

The MP for Northumberland-Durham is touring industry to provide "as far as possible," equal job opportunities across Canada.

"As Ontario has 50 per cent of Canada's manufacturing and Alberta and Saskatchewan farther have less than eight per cent, there is no justification for establishing a new Petromont without risk to the status quo of the industry," Mr. Gray said in an interview.

He said the major energy business corporations would threaten to use export controls to ship chemicals from Alberta to ship chemicals to the Sarnia plant is typical of the government's arrogance toward Alberta's oil industry.

Mayors Seek Federal Stands

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities (CFMM) decided Tuesday to ask the leaders of the major political parties to state their position, before July 1, on increased financial assistance for municipalities.

Delegates to the federation's 33th annual conference sifted through a number of resolutions during the second day of the four-day meeting before deciding to ask the political leaders to "state or repeat clearly what if they are elected, their intentions of their government would be insofar as the financial authority or resources" to cities.

"If we're not going to put them on the skillet now, we're not going to be able to do it after July 8," said Paul Godfrey, chairman of Metro Toronto, in urging acceptance of the resolution.

He said the resolution asking the leaders to stand up and state their position was one of the most important the conference could pass. Municipalities need a commitment on massive spending from whoever becomes the country's next prime minister, he said.

Leaders of the four major parties were invited to the conference but only two are expected to attend, Prime Minister Trudeau and New Democratic Leader David Lewis are to be in Winnipeg Thursday and both are expected to make brief appearances at the conference.

The only objection to the resolution came from Lloyd Henderson, mayor of Portage la Prairie, Man., who said delegates should work within their own political parties for support of the municipal financing issue.

Before the delegates took time off for a boat cruise up the Red River, they passed a number of resolutions, including one calling for better air-sea rescue facilities on the West Coast.

Legion Encourages Support for Laws

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — A program to combat the "unrelenting deterioration of our way of life in Canada" was approved Tuesday by delegates attending the Royal Canadian Legion's 29th biennial convention.

The program, termed "action, not promises," to mount an offensive against drug addiction, improve the quality of justice and give Canada a truer hard-nosed image in international dealings.

Action proposed in the resolution of a report by a Legion committee under chairman Robert Kobaly of Ottawa, was approved by the convention's

Jailed Month For UIC Fraud

OTTAWA (CP) — A 35-year-old Yazier, Ont., man has been sentenced to 30 days in jail without option of fine for collecting a total of $1,118 in unemployment insurance while he was working.

Arthur Joseph Carroll received the sentence Tuesday from provincial court Judge Harry Williams after being convicted on 18 charges of making false statements under the Unemployment Insurance Act between November, 1972, and August, 1973.

He was employed at the time that he collected the money.

An unemployment insurance spokesman said the jail term was the first handed out in the Ottawa area. Usually, persons who have received benefits illegally are fined and asked to make restitution.

Air Canada Reverses Position on Pickering

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada reversed its position Tuesday on the proposed Pickering airport, contending that a second international airport in the Toronto area at this time is not needed.

Clayton Glenn, vice-president of the fleet planning for the airline, told a public inquiry into the environmental impact that here is no over-all need for a second airport before 1986.

He said any decision to build it should be held off as long as the minimum time needed for construction will permit.

Mr. Glenn said all efforts should be made to ensure that Toronto International Airport is developed to its maximum capacity within its present boundaries, even if that means new flying controls, expanding existing terminals or building new terminals and improving ground access.

The final decision on an opening date for a second airport, he added, should be deferred while such factors as forecast growth, the impact of anti-noise legislation and possible improvements in air traffic control systems are given further consideration.

Mr. Glenn said revenue from passenger and cargo services

Inspections Recommended

TORONTO (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the death of a Toronto woman in a rooming house fire last March recommended Tuesday that all known rooming houses be immediately inspected and further inspections be carried out every two years by a qualified inspector.

Watergate Focus Turns to Milk

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House of Representatives judiciary committee is turning to President Nixon's 1971 decision to raise milk prices to see whether it was linked to a $2-million campaign pledge from dairy co-op

The investigation, to start today, involves bribery, which the United States Constitution lists as an impeachable offence.

Melvin Laird said Tuesday that he has passed the tangled Watergate scandal, the committee completed Tuesday the presentation of evidence on the settlement of anti-trust litigation against International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

It also decided to have its staff question Charles Colson but postponed a decision on whether the former White House counsel will be called as a witness before the committee.

Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem., N.J.) said he will wait for the staff's report on what Colson says before deciding whether to have him as a witness.

Colson played a major role in the White House's dealings with the dairy industry, which are outlined in a summary prepared by the judiciary committee's staff of the case it will present.

The staff memorandum identifies Colson as the White House contact for the Associated Milk Producers Inc. (AMPI), and says in the spring or summer of 1970 AMPI promised him $2 million for Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign.

Tom Hoey, 72, MPP, former Clifford Hardin, then agriculture secretary but milk price supports lower than the dairy industry wanted. For the next two weeks industry representatives called on Colson and other administration officials to get Hardin's order adde and fix a higher support level, the memorandum says.

The crucial part of the staff's presentation centres on March 22, 1971, when Nixon met for previously undisclosed with the White House with industry representatives and thanked them for their support.

Later that afternoon, says the memorandum, Nixon met with key advisers and decided to increase milk-price supports. Nixon has said his decision was influenced by heavy pressure from Congress for an increase.

The increase added hundreds of millions of dollars to dairy-industry profits.

Appeals Son's Sentence

BRAMPTON (CP) — A man have been severe if Canadian whose son was sentenced to six months in an adult training centre after being convicted of manslaughter in the death of a fellow hockey player said Tuesday he will appeal the conviction.

Donald Smithers said the appeal was to be filed today in Toronto and "if necessary, we'll go to the supreme court of Canada."

His son, Paul Douglas Smithers, 18, also was placed on two years probation following his release from the adult training centre.

Barrie Ross Cobby, 17, of Mississauga, Ont., died following a gangtown fight with Smithers Feb. 18, 1973.

County court Judge R. B. Shapiro said the sentence would

Temperatures Lower

Temperatures are expected to be below normal in most of Canada and near normal in the northern provinces over the next 30 days, according to the United States Weather Bureau. Precipitation is expected to be above normal in most of Canada while northern Ontario, B.C. and the northern prairies expect below normal precipitation. This outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur. (CP Newsmap)

Radar Is Used By Weathermen

OTTAWA (CP) — Radar plays a big part in the decision by Montreal Expos to postpone a baseball game on a rainy day or merely to delay the starting time until the showers pass.

That is because weathermen are using radar to follow clouds and storm activity and to predict with high accuracy whether Jarry Park is likely to get rain or snow within any six-hour period.

Radar technicians provide a remarkably exact chart of precipitation conditions within a 130-mile radius of Ste. Anne de Bellevue, Que., where McGill University meteorologists and physicists have set up a short-range forecasting service and research centre.

So sophisticated is the service that an updated precipitation map can be wired to the Montreal weather office every five minutes.

The equipment can detect precipitation as light as .004 inches an hour in the Ottawa-Montreal-Quebec region, said Dr. John Marshall, head of a 30-year-old organization of weather scientists named the Stormy Weather Group.

Thunderstorms can be detected up to 200 miles in any direction from Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Radar gives the scientists an x-ray of clouds and information on their moisture content, said Dr. Marshall. It was usually impossible with the naked eye to determine whether a cloud is likely to cause precipitation.

The radar system, underwritten in part by the federal government's atmospheric environment service, has the practical value of forecasting local rainfall, possible flooding and storm areas.

The installation near Montreal, the best in the country, may solve some age-old mysteries of storms.

Dr. Marshall said his group wants to learn more about lightning, and has set up a recording station to spot the electrical phenomenon during storms.

Scientists know that lightning is an electrical discharge but they don't know what causes the discharge. Locating the exact position of the lightning in relation to the storm may provide answers.

In a preliminary finding, lightning flashes were found to be related to the intensity of precipitation at an altitude of 20,000 feet, said Dr. Marshall.

Basically, the Stormy Weather Group's radar technology means rain, snow and hail can be distinguished in approaching weather systems.

It was known 20 years ago that snow produces a grainy, dull echo on radar screens. Rain shows up about five times as bright as snow, while snow melting to rain is brighter still.

But radar weather scientists could not consistently distinguish hail from rain until 1966, when Glen McCormick of the National Research Council used polarized radar.

Traditional radar waves vibrate in many planes while polarized waves oscillate from side to side in one plane, producing much brighter echoes from hail than from rain.

Other refinements are needed to relate the intensity of precipitation echoes to the amount of rain, snow and hail that likely would strike the ground and to determine the exact altitude of the echoes.

Quadraplegic Invents Touch Control System

HALIFAX (CP) — Bud Cairns of Toronto is a quadraplegic, paralyzed in both arms and legs, but his handicap has spurred his talents as an inventor.

Mr. Cairns is the creator of TOSC, an electronic gadget which is bringing independence to paraplegics and quadraplegics in Canada and the world. The achievement earned Mr. Cairns the highest award offered by the Canadian Rehabilitation Council for the Disabled at its annual meeting here.

The TOSC—meaning Touch Operated Selector Control—allows paralytics to operate any number of appliances by using sensitive switches which can be activated by the touch of a cheek, nose, tongue or other part of the body.

It has nine channels, each of which operates a separate device. One is an intercom system which can be installed outside the patient's room. Others operate a telephone, a radio-television set, a dictating machine, light switches, a fan, an alarm and "a three other applications.

People who are using the system have a great feeling of independence," said Ed Sherwood of the Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation in British Columbia. "We can suddenly do things when they want to, not the way someone else comes home to turn something on or off."

"When someone who has lain flat on his back for about eight years can suddenly turn off a light it brings them an amazing sense of power and usefulness."

Thirty TOSC units are being developed in Canada, by the department of health and welfare in Toronto. They will be distributed throughout Canada immediately and will then be produced at the rate of about five a month.

Each unit costs about $1,000.

Mr. Sherwood said the demonstration of who will receive the TOSC units will be decided by occupational therapists who will assess the patient's needs, capability and motivation.

The effect on the family must be considered as well, for TOSC comes as a drastic change when a bed-ridden patient no longer needs 24-hour attention," he said. "We recognize that it can only be beneficial in those homes where the effect will be good and constructive."

Canada is behind Britain and Europe in developing such equipment, he said.

In some cases, disabled persons have learned of type up to 30 words a minute using a coded system, can do bookkeeping and writing and can be introduced into a controlled labor force using similar equip-

World Citizen Is in Trouble

PARIS (Reuter) — World citizen No. 1, American-born Garry Davis, who issues his own passport for a Utopian challenge to the nation state, is in trouble.

This would not be surprising except that he has been issuing passports for 20 years and has lived in France without much bother for it.

The problem is that he has been accepting up his activities and the French have let his residence permit lapse pending the outcome of a court case that might bring him up to five years in jail.

He is charged with issuing passports which are so much like official ones that they could cause confusion in the mind of the public.

The present cabin but convincing, model is bound in blue plastic and is stamped on the front with the words: World Service Authority Passport.

More than 5,800 passports have been issued in his name and holders have entered 40 countries with them by Davis's reckoning.

They are a way of aiding stateless persons," he said during a visit here to consult his lawyer.

Those aided include a former United States Army lieutenant named Will Reed who gave up his citizenship in protest against the Vietnam war and was held in a Thai jail until he got a world passport.

Davis renounced his own citizenship at the U.S. Embassy in Paris in 1948 after fighting in Europe during the Second World War.

"I was a bomber pilot, an official murderer. Dropping bombs on little villages in Belgium," he said. "Nothing to do with the war."

In 1954 he declared the formation of a world government at Ellsworth, Me., in the state of his birth, and drew up his first passport for himself.

He reasoned that nations are obsolete and dangerous to the individual, especially in terms of their powers to make war.

"The relation between the citizen and the nation state today is a 'suicide pact,'" he said.

In practice, Davis does not always rely on the passport he issued himself to get about. He uses it to make a point as often as he can.

$6 Million Man Is Television Hit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The $6 Million Man is not to be taken seriously, except as a television phenomenon.

In the hit mid-season show on ABC, Lee Majors plays a test pilot whose artificial, atomic-powered limbs give him superhuman powers—he was "rebuilt" after a plane crash by a blend of aerospace biology and cybernetics.

Despite the Superman element of the half-man, half-robot hero, Majors and executive producer Harve Bennett say it is just a "good old-fashioned adventure show." In other words, brain is sacrificed for brawn.

They try to give the hero, Steve Austin, a khaki-clad, "we-believe-in-him" dis-clothing. Bennett took that path when asked to develop the once-a-month, 90-minute show into a weekly series.

His wanted to get away from the James Bond-Watergate plumber overtones of the longer show, in which, Austin was a super-sleuth taking orders from a power-mad boss at the president's right hand.

Bennett, onetime co-producer of The Mod Squad, said the hero had to be made, credible within the incredibility of his physical attributes.

"I had a clear-cut image of Lee Majors in the year of Wa, heroics as a hook. I figured paper could be found with Universal Studios and Majors wrote the boy, screaming it was all make-believe.

Where The $6 Million Man was "a once-a-month show, Majors bicycled back and forth between it and his co-starring role in Owen Marshall, Majors, 35, previously seen in Big Valley and The Man From Uncle, was nothing for a stirring role in a series. He had learned the "ropes" in co-starring means you stay in the background.

In January, when the show became a series, he moved out of Owen Marshall.

Majors said he likes the new format because it gives him time to say and more to do.

"I want to stay away from anything deep," he said. "If it gets too talky you're going to lose the kids."

Said Bennett: "Lee's bright but shy. He's not inclined to say three words when one will do." He prefers instead of chumming. He's a physical man. So as Steve Austin he's capable of many things beside super-spying."

Bennett said he worries that the show is gimmicky, like Batman. Gimmick shows have a history of going up like a rocket and coming down like a bomb.

"How do we keep from burning out? I don't know, to tell the truth. The only thing I know is we have to keep surprising the audience."

Some of the camera tricks they tried came out looking like a Charlie Chaplin movie.

Once they put Majors on a treadmill on the back of a truck and drove at 50 miles an hour to make it appear that he was running that fast. It looked preposterous.

Prince Albert's Park Wds Home of Grey Owl

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Prince Albert National Park embraces a chain of lakes, streams and forests that were once fishing grounds for Cree and Chippewa Indians.

The park was opened in 1927 because of its unusual features. Its 1,869 square miles combine grass lands with spruce forests, muskeg, rivers, tamarack and white birch. The fourth-largest of Canada's national parks, it is full of rolling hills, ponds, lakes, streams, ridges and bogs.

But what makes Prince Albert different is that it was here that Grey Owl came as park naturalist in the early 1930s with his wife Anahrew.

Here they built their famous Beaver Lodge on Lake Ajawaan. It still stands and next it lie the buried.

The cabin had a plaque hung for their original colony of beaver. Tonight the hole the beaver would come into the lodge to beg for treats or throw up mud and sticks in the process of enlarging their home, are empty.

An Englishman whose real name was Archie Belaney, Grey Owl came into the Canadian woods as a trapper but became convinced of the importance of saving the beaver instead of killing them.

He championed the Indians and the beaver at a time when little was heard of conservation. He wrote for Canadian, American and British magazines and such books as The Men of the Last Frontier, Pilgrims of the Wild and Tales of an Empty Cabin. The books became best-sellers around the world.

Grey Owl was also in demand as a speaker. With his long hair, buckskin clothes and beaded buckskin clothes on a lean frame, he looked every inch an Indian.

As Ahabreo put it in her book, Devil in Buckskin: "The more Archie did, the more Indian he became in the eyes of the public and he went along with it and became more Indian than Indians himself."

He made two speaking tours of England, returning from the second exhausted and died in a Prince Albert hospital in April, 1938. His name disappeared from the public mind but today's conservation is discovering his books and the cabin and grave have become a pilgrimage point.

The park has a pleasant mixture of civilized comfort around the beach at Lake Waskesiu and wilderness for those who want to get away from it all. There are 130 miles of hiking trails.

Park naturalists conduct daily walking tours and offer leaflets for do-it-yourself hikes.

The Mud Creek nature trail is typical—aspen woods and flowers with identified tracks of elk, deer and moose. A number of piles of bare sticks rising in mounds above the water are proof that the beaver is alive and thriving in Grey Owl country.

Raleigh Honored

Bloody Tower His Memorial

LONDON (CP) — The Bloody Tower, the grisly section of the Tower of London that once housed prisoners awaiting execution, is being remodelled as a memorial to one of its most illustrious inhabitants.

When it reopens in about two years, the block and axe and instruments of torture will no longer be on view. In their place will be all the memorabilia historians can assemble of Sir Walter Raleigh, who spent 13 years there before being beheaded on charges of conspiring against King James I.

He was of a country gentleman who won Queen Elizabeth's favor by fighting for the Huguenots against their Roman Catholic enemies in France. Raleigh obtained royal patronage for his voyages of discovery to North America and became one of the queen's most influential advisers.

He named the colony of Virginia after his sovereign and brought back tobacco plants from the New World. In return, the queen granted him trading monopolies in tin, playing cards and wines and a 4,068-acre estate in Ireland.

Later, he earned the queen's displeasure by marrying a penniless wife and most of the privileges were withdrawn.

Like many prominent men of his time, he read widely and was interested in a wide variety of fields—theory, politics, poetry and the new science of the chemists.

After Elizabeth died in 1603, he followed many of her favorites in what was then known as the Garden Tower but James withheld the order for his execution because it was decided that his trial had been unfair.

He stayed there, sometimes with his wife and child, writing many poems and essays and the History of the World, an unfinished work that goes back to early Egyptians, Jewish, Greek and Roman times.

James eventually released Raleigh in 1616 for a voyage to take at least a portion of discovery to the Orinoco valley of South America in search of the fabled treasure of El Dorado. When the quest failed, new charges of treason were brought against Sir and he was executed on Oct. 29, 1618, aged approximately 66.

Many of Raleigh's papers and writings were lost to posterity and the tower stairs were not yet revealed, the full list of what will be on display when the tower reopens. It is known to include a portrait, an early edition of the History of the World and a number of pieces of furniture of the time.

Readying the Traps

Two lobster fishermen prepare traps in Rustico Harbor on the north shore of Prince Edward Island. The 60-day season in the district opened May 7 with each boat limited to 250 traps. On the south shore of the province, traps have been reduced to 200 from 400 a year ago because of declining catches. Many of the lobster boats are equipped with sonar to check water depths to find the best areas to heave the traps over the side. (CP Photo)

Removing 400 Families From Jasper Opposed

EDMONTON (CP) — The town of Jasper, Alta., nestled in a Rocky Mountain national park, is facing something of a disembowelling and Bob Dowling isn't happy about it.

Mr. Dowling, minister of consumer affairs, represents the town in the provincial legislature as part of his Edson constituency.

What he is unhappy about is a proposal from the federal government agency, Parks Canada that the Canadian National Railways terminal at the townsite be moved, and with it about 400 families.

For a town of 3,700, a population loss of 1,000 would be a severe economic blow.

"That industry (the railway) has always been the stability of Jasper," Mr. Dowling said in an interview.

"It has meant that Jasper is different from Banff. Jasper is a community where Banff is sometimes considered as a tourist centre and only that.

"To make Jasper strictly a tourist centre would mean an economic blow from which it would take some years to recover."

Mr. Dowling operated a pharmacy in the town before entering politics seven years ago when he was angry with a government decision on leasing in the national park.

The current debate revolves around Parks Canada's feeling that a railway terminal is not in keeping with the philosophy and aesthetics of a park, explains CNR spokesman Bill Dewan.

The terminal is the location for crew changes for trains moving east and west and represents the funneling point for two major British Columbia rail lines into Alberta and on to the east, Mr. Dewan said.

As well as houses for the crews, CN has a marshalling yard about two miles long with space for about 1,000 cars, a powerhouse, a diesel and car repair shop and the station area.

CN's position at this point, he said, is one of co-operation as it serves on a study group along with Parks Canada, the ministry of transport and CN employees affected by the proposal to relocate the terminal.

The study group is about to undertake a survey of the town's residents to see what they think and expects to report in the fall.

Mr. Dowling said he hopes the studies will be made public and that the townspeople will have a say about the future of their community.

The president of the Jasper Chamber of Commerce, Odie Ogilvy, said the townspeople may have a chance to do just that. The committee they elected early in May is successful in negotiating a role for residents to play in their own local government.

He questioned what Parks Canada would achieve if it removed the terminal since, he said, the number of employees has not grown significantly over the years due to automation and the yards have remained the same size.

To remove one-third of the population would make the town dependent on an uncertain tourist economy which is seasonal and which employs many part-time people as opposed to the more stable railway employment.

Housing is a problem too as the federal government restricts development of residential land.

"The federal government has not made the decision as to how many commercial developments there are going to be in that townsite," he said.

There are in excess of 130 applications for lots from people in Jasper who are living there because of their jobs and therefore are qualified to apply for a lot.

"The parks department is considering opening up 11 lots to satisfy that need.

"They are saying there are the many railroaders in Jasper and if we take railroaders out we can use these houses for other people in the service industry."

Mr. Dowling suggested that if the terminal is moved, it should be done over 10 years to give the town time to adjust.

The town should be taken out of the park system but its development should be restricted in order not to interfere with the national park, he said. It obviously have to expand to meet some of the demands of the tourist industry but I don't think it should meet them all."

TORONTO (CP) — A bank teller contronted by a robber surrendered her cash and managed to trip an alarm before fainting. The robber escaped and police resumed their investigation only after the robber called headquarters to inform officers of his deed. He complained his robberies were not getting any publicity.

SAFE LANDING

RICHMOND, B.C. (CP) — Pilot Murray Nelson and passenger-owner Eric Wisser, both of Vancouver, escaped injury when their small plane crash-landed. Mr. Nelson brought the plane down on a vacant lot near Vancouver International Airport after the engine on the craft failed.

York Community Centre Assists All Problems

TORONTO (CP) — Hopelessness. For 140,000 residents of the borough of York in York Community Services, a centre where they can find help for all their problems under one roof.

The centre's services include a doctor, public health nurse, well-baby clinic, legal aid, welfare workers and help for immigrants.

Opened in February, it is the first centre to combine medical, legal and social services in one building in Metropolitan Toronto and its existence means residents of the area don't have to travel all over the city to seek help for their problems.

"They can use several services for help. And here they won't have to speak to a whole series of workers or go through red tape in several agencies before getting help," said Arch Andrews, who drew up the plans for the centre.

It is a simple, logical concept to combine 30 services in one centre, he said, but it goes against years of centralization, the "bigger is better" concept and large, structured agencies which deal with only one problem.

Workers from three levels of government and 30 voluntary agencies staff the centre, which receives funds from the Ontario ministry of community and social services and ministry of health. The workers' salaries are paid by their agencies.

"With all the costs added up, it would probably cost roughly $400,000 to run an organization like this," said Mr. Andrew.

"If this is successful, we're going to have small centres with participation from the community instead of pyramids with lots of administration."

It took 2½ years to create the centre, from the original idea to the February opening, but already Mr. Andrew is getting letters from groups that want to know how to set up a "commu-nity mall-service unit."

He suggested that the director of such a centre should be responsible to a management board drawn from all the agencies and services involved. No one agency should have control of the centre's management.

Mr. Dowling operated a

QUESTION: We are going to be in Edmonton for a while this summer and thought while there, we might take a run up to Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories. Can you tell us how far this is and supply any information on the Territories?

ANSWER: Your "run" is going to cover 950 miles each way, via the MacKenzie Highway.

Thought by many to be a land of perpetual ice and snow, the Northwest Territories actually comprises an area of infinite variety. The Territories comprise all of Canada north of the Provinces, except the Yukon, and numerous islands of the Arctic Zone: from flat, forested valleys to, never-melting iced peaks; from bleak, steep cliffs; from warm sandy shores to frigid glacial banks: these constitute the diversity of the vast area of the Northwest Territories.

Explored by Frobisher in search of a water route to the Orient came early in the Northwest Territories. Martin Frobisher first sailed here in 1758. Thinking that gold ore was found in the new land, commercial interest rose, and in 1778, Frobisher attempted to found a settlement on Frobisher Bay.

Henry Hudson discovered and sailed the Hudson Bay in 1610. Later the Hudson's Bay Company sent trader explorers to those great northern lands. Alexander MacKenzie navigated the Great Slave Lake and sailed to the mouth of the MacKenzie River.

Finally in 1945 a Northwest Passage was discovered by Sir John Franklin.

Today life in some areas has changed little in the last 1,100 years. But to offset sectional developments of oil and gas fields, both deposits and lead-zinc concentrates has brought "normal" life to the natives.

Fur-trapping, especially muskrat, beaver, mink and lynx continues as the main occupation of the Indians, while many Eskimos rely on white fox and seal. Whitefish and trout are concurrently caught, frozen and trucked south over the MacKenzie Highway. Specialty foods, such as muktuk, caribou sausage and seal meatballs are also frozen and canned.

Agricultural experiments have been performed since 1947 at Fort Simpson. Although the growing season is short, growth is fast and uninterrupted during the nightless summer days. Wheat, coarse grains, potatoes, vegetables and fruits have been harvested. Soon, hopefully, the million acres of arable lands will be plotted and developed.

The recent enactment of the Non-Resident Big Game Licence has opened to the hunters the MacKenzie Mountains, habitat of moose, black and grizzly bear, Caribou and Dall Sheep. Fishermen in the Arctic bring home trophy-sized trout, char, inconnu, northern pike and grayling.

Security Can Be Problem When Politicians Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — Sometime chartered DC-9 jet, the occasionally party was offered no in the next few weeks, Prime Minister Trudeau or Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield or perhaps David Lewis, the New Democratic Party leader, is going to annoy the police.

It is almost certain at the three party leaves across the country will appear for the July 8 federal election. The politicians will be RCMP security officers assigned to protect the political leaders from harm.

When Mr. Trudeau plunges into a shopping-centre crowd to meet the people, as he did often in the 1972 election, annoyed RCMP officers usually can stay inwardly, will plunge after him.

Officers experienced in maintaining safety shudder at the job of protecting a politician's man in a crowd. But they are fully aware that it is impossible to restrain a politician from any activity that he thinks will help him vote.

There are said to be some RCMP officers who look uneasily south of the border to where the Secret Service appears to have the responsibility to prevent the president of the United States from venturing into certain dangerous areas.

HAS NO CHOICE

Mr. Stanfield does his meanderings, which he did extensively in 1972, the RCMP officer who follows unobtrusively is likely to have his worries too. The prime minister has not much choice about receiving some form of protection while he is travelling. The only question in this election was whether an RCMP man would travel with him on the Liberal's choice; that an RCMP man was there as necessary, and able at all times for a security risk said.

Because all three leaders will have their security contained, by usual jet-boarding inspection of people and baggage, will not be necessary, officials said.

Viennese Film Locale Becomes Giant Garden

VIENNA (AP) — Some 250 acres in the south of Vienna that flint pioneers once used for hunting grounds have been developed into a giant garden for the International Flower and Gardening Show which is running until Oct. 6.

Officials predict that about four million people will wander through the area of flower beds and small lakes during the six-month exhibition.

Other features are a hotel and a medical centre, next to the exhibition hall, a new area which replaced the wooden sheds, dairy factory buildings and ponds of a long-vanished brick industry. The ponds and one large shrubbery of the so-called Oberlaa area landscaped. Silo-cultura in the 1820s and 1830s.

Ten countries have their own exhibits and about 30 are exhibiting specialties of their regions in indoor shows.

It is the second flower and gardening show here, the first was in 1964, having been staged in the ninth of Vienna.

It turned an area of dry dunes and gravel-yards into such a landscaping jewel box that it was decided to build Vienna's United Nations City there as headquarters for such organizations as the International Atomic Energy Agency and the UN Industrial Development Organization.

Big things are also expected from the 1974 show on the opposite side of the city. The nearby floating project will eventually provide homes for 20,000 Viennese. Furthermore, a rich thermal sulphur spring is to be the centre of a new health resort.

The medical centre was opened earlier this year, and will eventually provide thermal and sulphur treatment for some 2,000 patients, mostly for rheumatism.

A 53-bed hotel nearby will cater to people seeking treatment at the centre as well as tourists who want to be away from the noises of the city.

Erich Hanke, a West German gardening expert, won the competition to provide the overall design for the landscaping. He did not send balloons to flatten the area, as some other architects had suggested, but left the natural soil slope intact. He put the rose garden, centre of the show, around one of the low hills.

Besides the open gardens there are the "gardens of the nations." The storch garden, water garden, perennial garden, concert garden and other attractions. Holland is the display of herbs. Belgium, West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Britain, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Spain and Hungary have their own gardens.

The Japanese dropped 10 tons of rocks to Cheka to make their garden as authentic as possible.

The planners did not forget the children. There are three playgrounds called Earth, Moon and Universe.

Earth is an everyday playground that offers children sand to play with, Moon has a crystal ground and bizarrely-shaped objects and Universe provides children's imagination with a series of modern play.

Adults can visit an industrial exhibit or build their own Erwachsenenspielplatz-playground for grownups.

There are about 15 miles of sidewalks, bathe trails and cross-crossing the area. Those who tire of walking can ride a carousel or a "panorama" train.

Two Portuguese Colonies In East Wonder About Fate

By PETER T. SUM
The Canadian Press

The new Portuguese government's willingness to hold talks with militant nationalists in its African territories raises the question of the future of Lisbon's two remaining possessions in the Far East.

They are Macao in southern China and a small enclave on the northwestern coast of Timor, the largest of the Nusa Tenggara Islands in the Indonesian archipelago separated from Australia to the south by the Timor Sea.

On record as the oldest European trading post in the Far East, Macao has been a Portuguese possession since 1557 when Lisbon sent out its first governor, Portuguese historians say Macao was founded by Portuguese traders probably as early as 1530.

Macao is west of the entrance to the Pearl River that cuts through the southern China metropolis of Kwangchow (formerly Canton). It is 37 miles west of Hong Kong.

Unlike Hong Kong, leased to Britain in 1842 following China's defeat in the opium wars, Macao was designated by the Chinese as a trading port for the Portuguese who first appeared in 1514.

Macao-wared that tinderbox for the hostilities of the Chinese victory for the two southern provinces of Kwangtung and Kwangsi, a civil war.

As the Portuguese community grew in size, there were constant disputes over the extent of Portuguese jurisdiction. Negotiations between Lisbon and Lisbon agreed to pay an annual rent for the use of the peninsula.

The Portuguese dutifully paid the rent until 1949 when they saw with alarm how quickly the British were developing Hong Kong, which in Lisbon's view, posed a threat to Macao.

The Portuguese arbitrarily abolished the Chinese customs house on the peninsula that year and declared the independent metropolis of Kwangchow (Formerly Canton). It also told Britain and the United States who were sending consular missions to Macao that they could not establish diplomatic relations with Macao.

In 1951 Lisbon's foreign minister, Dr. Paulo Cunha, announced that Macao would be designated by the Portuguese who first appeared in 1514.

Ontario Place On Fourth Season

TORONTO (CP) — With an expected deficit of $1.3 million this year, Ontario Place, the provincial eyeful on the Toronto lakefront, opens its fourth season of summer festivities May 18.

Since the provincial government opened the people's playground in 1970, it has annually attracted more than 2.5 million people. But it has lost about $2 million a year in operating.

To date, it has cost Ontario taxpayers $35 million, including construction, alterations and deficits.

Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, said "it's a funny fallout."

"Part of it is a fantastic success. The children's playground is more imaginative than anything you'll see anywhere."

"Yet the deficit keeps increasing. If you raise the prices to combat the deficit, fewer people will be able to afford it. If you lower the prices to attract more people, the deficit will grow larger. You're trapped."

Other legislature members are more optimistic.

James Bullbrook, Liberal member for Sarnia, said he can't get too worked up about the losses.

"With the context of an almost unbelievable budget of better than $9 billion at Queen's Park, what's a million or two here and there?," Mr. Bullbrook said.

Ontario Place was developed with views of getting the bid for the 1976 Olympic Games site. But when the bid failed and Montreal got the nod, the Ontario government went on with its spending spree.

Ian McLennan, the present general manager, said: "It urges me to hear the word loss.

"We'll attract three million people this year, and when you consider their sense of enjoyment, when you think of what they can get that they couldn't possibly get for the money in any other situation, it's truly upsetting to keep hearing that we operate on a deficit."

Mr. McLennan, a native of Edmonton, likes to think that all of Ontario Place's problems are behind it and he hopes from now on they will be submerged by a letter he received from an indignant visitor last season.

The letter said: "I know why nobody goes to Ontario Place any more, the food-tips are too long."

Intelligencer Sports

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1974

UIC's Ron Emry attempts to make it home from third base in Tuesday night's Industrial League game at Queen Elizabeth. Emry charged off third on an infield grounder only to be thrown out at the plate by Intelligencer first baseman, Terry Hiddleston, in the second half of an Intell double play. Catcher Glynn Reynolds puts the tag on Emry as Ron hits the dirt.

UIC Remains Just One Point Out

UIC stayed just one point back of the east division leaders in the Industrial Softball League, Tuesday night with a 6-4 victory over The Intelligencer. The Intell Quinte Leaders who are in first place also played Tuesday night and won their game by a decisive 9-1 score over Canadian Tire.

In a third contest Tuesday, PUC defeated CNR 9-8 for their second victory in a row.

Joe Scanlan got the win for UIC striking out 11 and walking seven. Scanlan gave up just four hits.

Reg Fulton and Dave Feeney absorbed the loss on The Intell mound facing four, issuing three free bases and giving up nine hits.

Intelligencer left seven men on base in the contest, including two in the seventh inning.

UIC had to come up with a good effort to squelch The Intell's rally in the final frame. The losers scored two runs in the seventh before they were stopped.

Joe Cleek knocked a pair of singles and two doubles for the winners and Ron Embury had two singles and a double. Those two were the only UIC batters to reach The Intell pitchers consistently. The only other UIC hits were to Bill Healy and Scanlan with a double each.

For The Intell, Maurice Switzer had 4 double and Mike Bradshaw, Tony Goncalves and Glynn Reynolds each had singles.

In the Leaders' 9-1 win Mark Sheridan went the distance giving up one run on six hits while walking two and fanning five.

John French was on the mound for the loss. He too gave up six hits, but walked seven while striking out six.

Bob Lloyd was the big man at the plate for the Leaders, hitting a triple and a single. Heron Vandaalen had a triple, Craig Webb a double and Cliff Hineman and Joh Maloney a single each.

For Canadian Tire, Andy Prudden and Eric Anastasiou had two singles each and Jack McHunter and Ken Wooten one each.

PUC came back with three runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to take a 9-8 victory from CNR.

Wilson Bulgil was the winner fanning six and walking one.

Brian Plumbe and Soales combined for the loss striking out two and walking one.

John Miller and Larry Mason had three singles each to lead the PUC 18-hit siege. Ron Wade added a double and two singles and Bulgil, Bogle and A. Cales had a pair of singles each.

Greg Nesbitt belted a home run and a single for CNR and Warren Hay had a pair of singles.

Reserve's Rally Sinks the Gems

Breaking loose for three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning, Reserve came from behind to edge Belleville Gems in a Prince Edward North Shore Softball League game Tuesday, at Ameliasburg.

Reserve's outburst gave pitcher Garth Kleinsteuber the nod over Gem's Rick Goulah. The two hooked up in a tight, duel and until the winning rally, Goulah has posted five innings of shutout ball.

Kleinsteuber spun a six-hitter over the seven innings. He struck out two and walked one.

Goulah allowed only five hits while fanning three and issuing one free ticket to first base.

A pair of safeties by Rick Selman of the Reserve team made him the top hitter in the game. Also checking in with base hits for the winners were Lyell Shavers, Pat Maracle Jr., and Pat Maracle, Sr.

Gems' hits were shared by Tom Beckley, Harold Babcock, Harvey Wilkes, Herb Scrimshaw, Bob Reid and Carl Yates.

In Tuesday's other league action, Bayview Orchards knocked off Wannamaker and Bolly Stables 7-3 behind the seven-hit pitching of Dwayne Dunstar. Showing excellent control, Dunstar walked none while recording three strikeouts.

Charged with the loss was Harold Werkhoven who allowed 10 hits. He walked three and struck out three.

Bayview's Doug Mason pounded three base hits for the winners with a pair each for Dunstar and Don Boster.

Doug Findlay was the loser, big threat with three safeties.

Auger's Has 7th Inning Blues

By ALAN TESWORTH

Late inning rallies is the Quinte Baseball League's game getting to be a regular feature of the loop's doubleheaders at the Ameliasburg park.

In Monday night action, the Elks Auxiliary scored eight runs in the top of the seventh inning to pull out a win from Auger's Men's Wear, which last night's contests, both were decided in the final two innings of play.

In the opener of the twinbill, Devalds Motors came up with two runs in the fifth and four in the bottom of the sixth to trounce Bardon Supplies by a 9-4 count, banging out 11 hits enroute to their fourth win against two defeats.

Bardon had opened with fireworks of their own in the first inning, blasting Devalds starter Ron Hill for two hits and four runs.

Mark Coates opened he game with a base hit to left, with Bill Dewey following with a walk. Gary Johnson drew the second walk on balls given by Hill, with a fielder's choice and a double by Bernie Doubble, adding up to three runs.

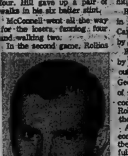
Coughlin went to third on the second ball, and scored on a wild pitch by Darrell Krampp, called in to quiet the Bardon bats.

Devalds scored three in the bottom of the second to pull to within one run. Base hits by Rick Rossbush and Ray Lumsden combined with a pair of infield errors accounted for the runs.

Two men were out when the Motormen added two more in the fifth off Bardon hurler Wayne McConnell. Jim Horwood led the batting open with a base hit, followed by Lumsden's doubles by Krampp and Eric Maher.

The winning rally in the sixth was started by catcher Lyle Thompson's double. Terry Meagher and Maher sandwiched Krump's second double of the night with safeties to bring the total across the plate to nine.

Devalds finished the game with 11 hits, including four for two. Maher and Krampp each with two doubles, with Maher contributing a two bagger and single.



Jim Horwood and Lumsden each had two singles for the Motormen, with Thompson doubling. Terry Meagher and Rossbush rounded out the hitting with singles.

Bardon could only come up with six hits off Hill and Krampp. Gary Johnson had two singles, with Coughlin connecting for a double. Coates, Wallwork and McConnell each had a base hit to round out the Bardon hitting.

Krampp got credit for the win, taking over from Hill. He struck out five and walked four. Hill gave up a pair of walks in his six batter stint.

McConnell was all-he-way for the losers, fanning four and walking two.

In the second game, Rollins

Construction walked until the top of the seventh to score three runs and take a 4-3 win over Auger's Men's Wear. It was the second night in a row the Trenton team has been rewarded from victory in the top of the last frame.

Auger's had taken a two run lead, that stood up until the sixth inning, in their half of the third stanza.

Jack Jury collected both RBI's with a two run homer, a towering shot over the fence in centre field, some 257 feet away. Jim Clement had been aboard at second with a pair of hits.

Rollins got their first run in the sixth after a walk to Carl Boonhower and a double by Ralph Plane.

Five hits, including a double by Wayne McFarquar, spelled out trouble for Auger pitcher George Ferguson in the top of the final inning. The hits combined for the three runs Rollins needed to give them the two run cushion.

Auger's had their chance to come back in the bottom of the inning, but left the bases full when Al Ferguson grounded out to Dale Duvall, at second base.

Plane and McFarquar each had a double and Maple to pace the winners' attack, with Glenn Carleton adding a brace of singles. Duvall, Doug Dafoe and Ted White each had a single to bring the total to 10.

Jury's homer was the big shot for Auger's, with Jim Whyte adding a seventh inning knock for double. Other Trenton hits went to Clement, Larry Mercer, Rob Doyle and George Ferguson.

White finished the game with 10 strikeouts, walking two in taking the victory.

Ferguson fanned five and walked two on the Trenton mound in absorbing the loss.

Expos' McAnally Stops Astros

Another Aaron Swing Sets One More Record

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Hank Aaron has hockey, pool and now all major league baseball's all-time leading home run hitter.

Aaron slugged the 18th grand slam home run of his career as the National League record—against Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday night, leading Atlanta Braves to a 7-3 triumph.

It was the 733rd home run of his career, counting regular season, post-season and all-star games, breaking a tie with Ruth for the all-time lead.

"Now, I dought I broke the record last month," said Aaron, with a smile.

Then he added, "Now, they can start interviewing the guy who is chasing me."

The Atlanta superstar said he hoped Dodger Willie Davis can slow a little now, and he could get back to thinking about baseball.

"My concentration hasn't been good," he said. "I've been thinking about celebrations and speeches and how to talk to the politicians."

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, Cincinnati Reds beat New York Mets 6-3 in 10 innings, Montreal Expos topped Houston Astros 5-4, San Francisco Giants defeated St. Louis Cardinals 5-3, Los Angeles Dodgers whipped Pittsburgh Pirates 5-0 and San Diego Padres nipped Chicago Cubs 6-5.

"It hit a slider, up and in," said Aaron of his grand slam off Eddie Watt, which highlighted a six-run seventh inning rally that broke the game open for Atlanta.

"I was looking for it," he added. "I had faced Watt in spring training and was a lot of breaking pitches then."

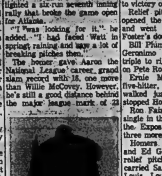
The homer gave Aaron the National League career grand slam record with 18, one more than Willie McCovey. However, he's still a good distance behind the major league mark of 23 held by Lou Gehrig.

Cesar Geronimo drilled a tie-breaking two-run triple in the 10th inning, sparking Cincinnati to victory over the Mets.

Relief pitcher Pedro Borbon opened the 10th with a single and went to third on George Foster's double.

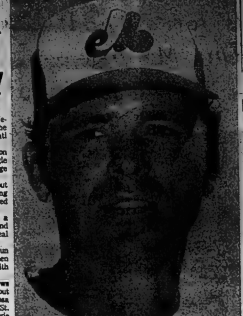
Bill Plummer struck out but Geronimo slammed a long triple to right field and scored on Pete Rose's sacrifice fly.

Ernie McAnally pitched a five-hitter, struck out six and walked just two as Montreal stopped Houston.



Ron Fairly looped a two-run single in the fourth inning, then the Expos put it away with three more runs in the fifth.

Homers by Gary Matthews and Ed Goodson and standout relief pitching by Dale Murray carried San Francisco past St. Louis. Lou Brock and Reggie Smith homered for the Cards.



Tom Paciorek slammed bases-loaded triple in the five-hit pitching of Tommy John and lead Los Angeles past Pittsburgh.

It was John's ninth victory in 10 decisions, and he became the first National League pitcher to win nine games this season.

Pinch-hitter Clarence Gaston's eighth inning homer lifted San Diego past Chicago, ending the Cubs' nine-game losing streak.

Knudson Shows Way

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Knudson of Toronto shot a 68 Tuesday to head a list of qualifiers at Wayne, Pa., for the United States open golf championship.

The 68 gave Knudson a 138 total and a four-stroke edge over his nearest rival in the sectional qualifying event. Bert Yancey of Tallahassee, Fla.

Former Professional Golfers' Association champion Jerry Barber also qualified for the Open, but he had to best his assistant to do it.

The 58-year-old Barber won the last spot in the San Francisco sectional qualifying as the final 13 spots in the Open were filled at seven sites across the country.

Barber was one of seven pros who qualified at San Francisco. He defeated Charles Montana, his assistant at Los Angeles' Griffith Park golf club.

The U.S. Open will be played June 13-16 in Maranoreck, N.Y.

Twenty players in the 150-man field, including defending Open champion Johnny Miller, were exempt from qualifying.

Sox, Brewers In a Tight Fit

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Some extra-inning heroics by Danny Cater Tuesday night weren't enough to give Boston Red Sox any breathing room in their fight to hold the lead in baseball's American League East.

Cater singled in the 11th-inning run that gave the Red Sox a 4-3 win over Minnesota Twins but Milwaukee Brewers won by the same score against California Angels and stayed a game behind Boston.

In Tuesday's other games, Texas Rangers were awarded a 9-8 win over Cleveland Indians by forfeit when an umpire crowd stopped their game at Cleveland. Kansas City Royals thanked Baltimore Orioles 8-0, Chicago White Sox humbled New York Yankees 8-3 and Oakland A's won the first game of a twi-night doubleheader from Detroit Tigers 4-0, then lost the second 4-1.

Dick McAuliffe started the Boston 11th inning with a single. When Marlo Guerrero fined McAuliffe at second, Denny Harper was sent in to run for Guerrero.

Juan Beniquez was safe on a throwing error by Minnesota pitcher Bill Campbell before Cater came through with his decisive hit, scoring Harper.

Boston's Dwight Evans and Minnesota's Larry Hisle hit solo homers earlier in the game. A pinch single by the Twins' Joe Lis in the ninth forced the game into extra innings.

The Brewers staged a three-run rally in the seventh inning to beat Bill Singer, who had been working on a three-hitter. Dave May, singled home the decisive run.

Cleveland had just tied its game 8-8 in the ninth when fans came on the field and scuffled with the players. Plate umpire Nestor Chylak, who was hit in the head by a chair, declared the game forfeit.

Al Fitzmorris checked the Orioles on three hits. He had the backing of Amos Otis, who hit a solo homer, and John Mayberry, who delivered a three-run homer during a five-run rally in the third inning.

Chicago's Dick Allen hit his first grand-slam homer in the American League, and Bucky Dent added a two-run blast in support of Wilbur Wood's seven-hit pitching.

Joe Rudi's homer and the three-hit pitching of Ken Holtzman helped the As win their opener, but the Tigers took charge of their nightcap with a four-run first inning, climaxed by a two-run double by Aurelio Rodriguez.

Today's schedule has the Royals at Baltimore, the Rangers at Cleveland, the As at Detroit, the Yankees at Chicago, the Red Sox at Minnesota and the Angels at Milwaukee.

Skating Champions Leave Amateur Ranks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Barry and Louise Soper, Canadian senior figure-skating dance champions for the last four years, announced Tuesday their retirement from amateur competition.

The Sopers, who have been skating together for eight years, plan to perform in amateur shows as professionals.

The couple, married about three years, have been ranked fifth in the world for the last three years. They placed 11th in their first world competition four years ago.

Decision Withheld On Jockey's Appeal

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York State Racing Commission withheld decision Tuesday on an appeal to overturn the seven-day suspension of Angel Cordero Jr., all but wiping out the jockey's chances of riding Cannonade in Saturday's Belmont Stakes.

Commission chairman Joseph Gimma said a transcript of the two-hour meeting would have to be studied before any decision would be made, and it was unlikely that the transcript would be ready before Thursday or Friday.

Cordero, who rode Cannonade to victory in the Kentucky Derby and to a third-place finish in the Preakness, the first two legs of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, was suspended last Friday, effective Monday, for interference in the second race at Belmont Park last Thursday.

Trainer Woody Stephens said Jorge Velasquez would be aboard the John Olin colt if the suspension was not lifted by post time.

London Sweeps Two From Niagara Falls

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

London swept a doubleheader from Woodstock and a park curfew saved Niagara Falls from further embarrassment in the Ontario Baseball League Tuesday night.

In London, the home team was outhit 11-7 but took the opener 7-3 and won the nightcap 1-0 on rookie Bill Fairbairn's run-scoring single.

In Oshawa, the hometown team broke a scoreless deadlock in the fifth inning with four runs and were leading 11-3 when the curfew came into effect.

Right-hander Dick Hamer went the distance for London in the first game, picking up his first victory in four decisions. Gord Pullen was the loser.

Ed Gelinas and Joe Adam combined for a two-hitter—Terry Lamb got them both—in the second London victory.

In Oshawa, the visitors committed four errors as Oshawa added six runs in the seventh inning.

Winning pitcher Barry Timbers scattered seven hits and struck out 13. George Redshaw, with two singles and a triple, and Phil Solomon, with three singles, paced the Oshawa attack.

Finley Pays

LAPORTE, Ind. (AP) — Charles Finley has been ordered to continue paying his estranged wife $1,500 monthly support payments for their seven children until their divorce becomes final.

The court also granted Mrs. Finley use of the family's eight-acre farm home in LaPorte, with maintenance expenses to be paid from the weekly support sum.

Finley, owner of Oakland Athletics baseball team of the American League and former owner of professional hockey and basketball franchises, had sought to pay $100 in weekly support and pay the bills himself.

Violence in Hockey

Hull Calls for an End To 'All This Malarky'

TORONTO (CP) — An aggressor in a hockey fight should be thrown out of the game, says coach Billy Harris of Toronto Toros of the World Hockey Association.

"Don't sit him in the penalty box for five or 10 minutes, throw him out of the game," said Harris in a taped conversation played Tuesday during a provincial inquiry investigating violence in amateur hockey.

Involved in the taped discussion were Harris, Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets and William McMurtry, who heads the inquiry.

"I think we've got to look for the aggressor," said Harris. "The referee is going to have to make a decision.

"Who instigated the fight? He gets an additional penalty. Now it's five for you, five for the opposition."

Hull said some professional teams have what is called a designated hitter.

"You know, you have a guy that . . ."

"What Billy called a goon," McMurtry interjected.

"Look, coaches, managers, you're going to have to put an end to all this malarky after the whistles, and some ever before," did Gen. agreed them, said Hull.

The inquiry was ordered after Brampton Excos refused to play the second game of an Ontario Hockey Association Junior B-Final series against Hamilton Red Wings.

The first game of the series was marred by brawling on the ice and in the stands.

At Tuesday's hearing a Toronto player and a York University sociology professor said there is peer pressure on players to stay in a fight.

"It's not practical to turn your back," said Toro left-winger Jack Gibson. "You have to have enough guts to face who comes after you."

Gibson has written a thesis for his Master of Arts degree on changes and proposed changes in minor hockey. He agreed with McMurtry that emphasis on winning at all costs should be reduced in minor hockey.

CFLs Side of Story Offered by Hodgson

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Football League's side of its handling of a franchise application from London, Ont., was never properly established, owner Bill Hodgson of Toronto Argonauts said Tuesday.

Hodgson said the franchise fee of $25 million, not the $2.5 million reported $2.7 million. He said the other $400,000 was to have been paid as an indemnity to Hamilton Tiger-Cats for territorial rights.

The London group rejected the franchise fee at a CFL meeting last week in Edmonton, saying it was too high.

Hodgson said the league would have had to set up a player draft to stock the new team.

"Nowadays you're talking about $30,000 a player when you include benefits and expenses, etc.," Hodgson said. "So multiply 36 players times $30,000 and you begin to see the expense of it all."

Hodgson criticized the league for not having worked out long ago a formula for dealing with franchise applications and said CFL commissioner Jack Gladstone has been "sick over the whole London thing."

8-6 Win For No. 3

Team Number three took an 8-6 decision from Dairy Queen in the only Belleville Minor Lacrosse Association game scheduled last night at the Dick Ellis Rink. The game was part of the powwow house league action.

Jamie Forester and Paul Hounslow each had a hat trick for the winners, with Danny Hounslow adding the other two goals.

Barry Bettie scored twice for the Dairy Queen, with Joe LaBarge, Jamie Robertson, Bryan Lambie, and Danny Prowse each scoring one.

10c Beer Night Fans Take Over, Indians Forfeit

CLEVELAND (AP) — "It's the closest I've ever seen anybody come to getting killed in my more than 25 years in baseball," Texas Rangers manager Billy Martin said.

Cleveland Indians said the Rangers pulled to play baseball Tuesday night, but the fans rap on the field threw beer, soda, firecrackers, chairs, welded knives, and started an incendiary fire in the pitcher's dugout.

The Indians forfeited the game to the Rangers. The second game of the three-game series is scheduled for tonight.

It was Ten-cent beer night at Municipal Stadium. The Rangers came to town with the memories of a player brawl that took place in Texas last Wednesday where 25,134 fans turned out on a warm lakefront night.

Early in the game young fans started running on the field in between innings and were cheered by the crowd. Occasionally a firecracker went off. In the sixth inning, a streaker was applauded.

The number of people running on the field increased each inning, and Indian batter Leron Lee was doing the Rangers' 5-1 lead.

In the sixth inning the Indians made it 5-3, and Martin removed his bullpen crew from the right-field area because of the number of missiles being thrown.

Firecrackers were thrown into the Rangers' dugout and Martin paced back and forth with rags on his face.

In the ninth inning the Indians tied the score at 5-5 and had the bases loaded. Fans again poured out of the right-field stands and started harassing Ranger outfielder Jeff Burroughs.

"They grabbed at my glove, took my hat," Burroughs said. "I tried to call time, but nobody heard me.

"I was getting scared because I felt the pot-throwing."

The Rangers came off the bench brandishing baseball bats and headed for right field, led by Martin.

"I knew it was silly for us to do that," Martin said. "But that was out there all by myself.

"I saw knives and chairs and other things. We just couldn't let our team-mate get beat up."

After the Rangers left the bench, the Indians came out of the dugout to help their baseball opponents.

"You have to realize that the only thing I had to defend myself with was my fist," Burroughs said. "I was happy to get some help.

"And I thank the Indians for coming out to help me."

There were skirmishes all over the field between ballplayers and fans.

"It may one thing," Martin added. "That fan we got a hold of out there got the hell kicked out of him."

Player Chyiak, the chief umpire on the field, was hit on the head with a chair and had his hand cut.

"We were so scared out there we had made plans for our escape," Chyiak said.

"It was 100-to-one odds, and we could have gotten killed out there very easily," Chyiak continued. "I saw weapons out there, and I'm sure the only other place you would see something like this happen would be in a riot."

Chyiak said he waited until all the ball players were off the field before calling it a forfeit so none of them would be jeopardized. The forfeit gave the Rangers a 9-0 victory, but all the records count.

Chyiak was ruling in the umpires' dressing room.

"I can't judge whether it was over night or the fight in Texas that started the whole thing," Chyiak said. "We didn't even know about the fight in Texas.

"We were in California at the time. All I know is that everything that happened here tonight will be told in full to the commissioner."

American League president Joseph MacPhail said there will be no more beer nights in Cleveland in the foreseeable future.

The Indians had three more planned for the season. A meeting of Indian executives was scheduled early today to discuss the situation.

Police said five persons were arrested.

BILLY MARTIN

Hospitals reported seven fans were treated for minor injuries.

No players were injured seriously. Indians' pitcher Tom Hilgendorf, was hit on the head with a chair, but Indian trainer Paul Warfield said it did not appear serious.

The last forfeited major league game was the final game of the 1971 season in Washington, D.C., when the Senators were about to move to Texas.

Martin called Tribe manager Ken Aspromonte five minutes after he refereed to the dressing room to thank Aspromonte for the help the Indians gave the Rangers.

Amateurs Lead Way

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Michael Daly, an amateur from Rawdon, Que., jumped into the lead Tuesday after ... of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association tournament at host school competition.

Daly, 22, fired his second 72 and was alone in first spot with 144, one stroke ahead of Fred Cotton, 22, an amateur from Vancouver, who also had a 72.

Mark Ludeman, a 20-year-old pro from Burnaby, B.C., had a 74 Tuesday to go with his opening-round 70 and was alone in third place with a 146.

Dave Barr, 22, of Kelowna, B.C., and Greg Pickell, 22, of Spoffville, Ont., had second-round 75s to go with Monday's 73s and are tied for fourth at 147.

Big Pickerel Catches In Northern Areas

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pickerel seem to be the big great catch in Northern areas of the province, while good perch catches have been cut off, the ministry of natural resources reported today.

Reports from Lake Nipissing show excellent pickerel catches and ministry officials from Lake of the Woods district report the same conditions for yellow pickerel in lower regions.

In the Geraldton area, pickerel and northern pike are good to excellent. At Twin Lake one angler took an 18-pound northern pike. Speckled trout catches are reported slow.

At Lake of Two Mile Lacs, and in the Moss Lake region, pickerel catches are reported fair but small in size.

The Atikwer area, which had good catches of perch last week, reports slow catches of trout and perch.

In the Simcoe region, one angler reported catching a pike with a wooden spurge cap, while fishing at a marsh near Ryerton Island.

French Nobility Making Comeback

PARIS (AP) — In a country that was asking aristocratic heads into baskets in 1789, the French nobility has made a strong comeback.

It is no longer a disadvantage in a country whose motto is Liberty-Equality-Fraternity, to have a name such as Baron Gourgaud, Sinicaldi de Gramont de la Nipperie.

Despite history books that describe the French aristocracy as slaughtered and disbanded, their descendants have reorganized in strength.

The nobility has made a comeback, says Baron Hubert de Turckheim, secretary-general of the Association de la Noblesse de la Finance.

"We have returned to the life of the country after a period of self-effacement. Our young people are going into finance, business, banking and concentrating on the present. They have greater ease, greater ability to make contacts than other people. I think the nobility has real superiority in this area."

The keenness and aggressive tone are new.

Baron Rodolphe de Hottinguer is president of the French banking association. Count Emmanuel de Mitry sits at the head of Wendel Sidel and Duke Pierre de Brissac is on the boards of a half-dozen key industries. Duke Antoine de Levis-Mirepoix, Count Gaal de Rohan-Chabot and Count Arnaud de Vogue all do capitalist things in the insurance business.

The French diplomatic service still has names like de Margerie and de Saint Legier de la Sausaye. The French counter-espionage agency is run by Alexandre de Marenches and French television sometimes sounds like roll call at a good boarding school.

"This is Emmanuel de la Taille turning you back to the studio and Thierry de Scillyaux."

Products are, increasingly marketed around aristocratic brand names. Jacques de Troy cider, Apne de Salene tablecloths, or Polignac cognac, which belongs to Prince Guy de Polignac, president of the Association de la Noblesse.

In major companies and in the financial world there is vigorous recruiting of young men with titles for what writer Jean de Negroni calls building "a firm's image for quality."

He said many companies believe a touch of aristocracy can be a real advantage in competitive situations where status is a factor.

"French like tradition and people like self-assurance," de Turckheim said.

Dr. Michel Dupuat-Roullié, who is on his third volume charting noble origins, said there are about 15,000 families calling themselves nobles who are not.

"In the 19th century," he said, "it cost 20,000 francs in gold to be a count and 100,000 to become a duke."

Dupuat-Roullie puts the number of authentic noble families at 300, while the Association de la Noblesse has 1,500 families as members and estimates another 1,200 others are sitting in crumbling chateaux.

The association's offensive seems to relate in some ways to bringing order to the noble name business.

The idea appears to be that if anyone is going to profit from the aristocrat market it should be the people who survived investigation by the association's authenticating committee and have paid the yearly $10 in dues.

To educate the masses, the association stresses that the particule—the "de" at the start of a name—should not be mistaken as an obligatory sign of nobility. Charles de Gaulle was just folks.

Japanese Gamblers Hate Loss

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — North Americans can lose their shirts gambling without flinching, but the supposedly unemotional Japanese often break up if they lose in the casinos, says the manager of a Seoul gambling house.

There are four casinos in South Korean tourist centres. The largest is at Walker Hill overlooking the Han River on the west edge of Seoul.

Koreans are not permitted to gamble there, but about 250,000 tourists visited the casino last year, its operators say. That is nearly half of the country's 670,000 foreign tourists, most of whom are Japanese.

Japanese culture has made them outwardly unemotional compared to many Asians. But many of them tend to drop their cool facade quickly if they are losing, says Im Kyung-Bo, one of the managers. They at the craps table but are often cautious, which are modelled on "Americans always is ready for a little personal attention. At the craps table, they're the ones to Las Vegas.

"Most Americans know how a unusual players

Newfies Getting Larger Breweries

ST. JOHNS, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundlanders are to be drinking more beer. It comes to a big total. They're fifth in terms of the 10 provinces, figures released by the Brewers' Association of Canada show.

But they are catching up. And local breweries are making plans to ensure that all beer-drinking Newfies will be able to quench their thirst.

Carling O'Keefe Brewery is expanding its St. John's brewery to 40 percent capacity at a cost of almost $12-million. A new bottling line will produce 600 bottles in minute capacity with present capacity of 300.

The new facilities are expected to be installed and operative by early summer.

Labatt's brewery recently purchased a plant in Stephenville, on the west coast of the insular part of the province, and is investing about $350,000 to improve its facilities.

The plant was owned by a Newfoundland-owned company but the product failed to take enough of the market from three established breweries and closed within 3 years of its 1968 opening.

In 1970, Bison Brewing, a subsidiary of Canadian Javelin Ltd., was set up in the plant but closed last August. After floods washed out the brewery and destroyed all the beer and packaging material in stock.

At the time, the operation was valued at around $4 million, produced 50,000 barrels a day and employed up to 40 persons.

Labatt's has a 150,000-barrel-a-day brewery in St. John's and a spokesman there said the operation no longer is capable of supplying the growing demand. The company hopes to have its Stephenville brewery producing facility by early summer.

"Most Newfoundlanders are paying more and more for a bottle of beer. Last January the government increased the price of a dozen 340-bottles by 12 cents to $4.25. While this is believed to be the highest price in the country, local consumers continue to tend an elbow at the bar or at home.

With that in mind, the April budget of Finance Minister John Crosbie applied an increase in sales tax to eight from seven per cent to beer. That added four more cents to the cost of a dozen pints.

In addition, taverns and lounge operators are faced with increased licensing fees and they are predicting higher prices for all beverages.

The price of bottled beer in clubs and taverns now ranges between 60 and 90 cents but the customers continue to swallow their ale and indigestion.

While there is a slim chance that fewer people will drink beer there may be more home brew on the island this year than ever before. It is no secret that the still and the beer-brewing barrel flourish, especially in isolated outports.

MEMO FROM HELEN GAGEN, CONSUMER ADVISOR MIRACLE FOOD MART

HOW TO SAVE ON DAIRY FOODS

June, long promised as dairy growth is finally here, is a good time to remember that no matter what the food budget, you can't afford to exclude dairy foods from family meals. Keeping in mind that it's extremely difficult to get enough calcium in the diet without dairy foods, remember that 2 oz. of what we call cottage cheese provides as much protein as 2 eggs, 1 oz. of cheese, or 1 cup of milk. So buying dairy products ...

*The more solvent is a dairy product, the higher its price. Shopping around is indicated for food stores, whole milk is more economical than skim.

*Powdered skim milk (which is the whole fatal brand) is a good buy for cooking. Dry milk, two-eight ounces, after reconstituting improves its flavor, if the family will insists on fluid milk, mix reconstituted powdered milk half and half with fluid milk to make it taste more familiar, you save money.

*Store-brand cheddar cheese is lower priced than nationally branded cheese, and the older the cheddar the better the flavor. Cheddar cheese is a good source of many vitamins that are found in the yellow pigment.

*Cottage cheese is an especially good buy in cheese, most of which is creamed cottage cheese or cream cheese may be bought by the pound, or in three pounds. Some tasters change may result just because of the additional calories.

*Added ingredients such as herbs or fruit increase price of cottage cheese. Your own additions are likely to be more economical.

*Frozen yogurt and ice-milk ice cream are less expensive than ice cream. Ice cream, however, has more calcium and more calories.

*Most Canadian-made cheese are less expensive than imported equivalent types.

Fit for a Prince

Chewning House, an elegant 17th century mansion in southeast England, has been chosen by Prince Charles as his first permanent home. The mansion, which stands on an estate of 2,500 acres, was bequeathed to the nation by Lord Sinclhope. The main part of the house was built in 1630 and the two pavilions on the east and west sides of the house were built in the 18th century. The 26-year-old prince is expected to take up residence in 1976. (CP Photo)

Third Play At Stratford

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A drama of somewhat doubtful authorship, the Stratford Festival moves into its third production of the new season, Love's Labor's Lost, a play of pure Shakespearean invention.

It is the only really new work on the Stratford program so far this season. The Pericles that re-opened Tuesday night was a revival from last season, and Moliere's The Imaginary Invalid—which opened the festival Monday—was first played by the company earlier this year on an Australian tour.

Nicholas Pennell again starred in the leading role in Pericles, adding new lustre to his career by his decidedly more mature performances. Now 33, he has become one of Stratford's busiest actors, playing a pasty-faced, pimpled and near-dighted medical student in The Imaginary Invalid.

As the shipwreck young prince of Tyre, Pennell plays the role of a man aging and bowed down by his troubles (as was of his own production, at any rate) and his loss of his beautiful young daughter.

It is a story of high Greek drama, with he expected denouement.

The wife, Thaisa, played lovingly by Dawn Greenhalgh, did not really die but was saved from the sea to become a noble priestess of Diana, the goddess of love.

And the daughter, Marina, played with becoming purity by Pamela Brook, did not die or be murdered, but was carried off to a lovely home which she reformed with her sheer goodness.

Amelia Hall—who was the first actress to speak a line on the festival stage 23 years ago—again played the frizzy, red-haired, over-chested but nameless bawd. Some nice people criticize the bawdy scene for being too much so, but that is what Shakespeare's audiences wanted in the 1600s.

Some scholars doubt that Shakespeare himself wrote the early scenes in Pericles. And it is obvious he took the story from a poem by John Gower written about 1390, because he uses Gower as a narrator between scenes of the play.

No one, on the other hand, seems to have found a source for Shakespeare's Love's Labor's Lost. It apparently is a story wholly invented by himself. A yarn about noblemen who eschew women in their devotion to philosophic studies, only to be scrapped by the arrival of a pretty young princess on the scene.

Kennedys Hide Fear About Son's Condition

BOSTON (Reuter) — About seven times weeks, unaider on a Friday afternoon, a slim, mop-haired boy of 12 arrives at the main building of the Children's Medical Centre.

He smiles, waves at doctors and nurses and walks bravely but still a little uncertainly, with the aid of a cane, on his new artificial right leg.

Usually his father and mother accompany him. They are Senator Edward M. Kennedy and his wife Joan. Their son is Edward M. Kennedy Jr.

All three are poised and seem to be carefree. There is no hint of the seriousness of the boy's condition—the fear that cancer, discovered in his leg last autumn and checked by amputating the leg above the knee, might recur.

But beneath the surface there is another side, revealed by the senator in a recent interview.

"Ted often sits at the window and watches the other children running around and he can't because he is too excited.

"We have to pretend that we don't. Inside, his sadness, but it tears my heart out."

The latest tragedy in the Kennedy family—which has seen two members assassinated—struck without warning.

Last autumn young Teddy developed a painful swelling in his right leg. Doctors diagnosed it as osteosarcoma, a rare form of cancer that usually attacks the cartilage around the leg bones.

Cancer specialists say that while chondrosarcoma has a better prognosis than bone cancer in children, which often has spread fatally to the lungs before detection or the primary growth, the malignant cells may be of mixed variety and unpredictable in their reaction to treatment.

Early detection and treatment are vital because chondrosarcoma can become full-blown before showing serious symptoms. Moreover, cancer in or near the bone can invade the marrow, with resulting lethal metastasis. To prevent this, the boy's leg was amputated.

Like most members of the Kennedy family, young Teddy was active in football, basketball and winter sports. Last winter he went skiing on one leg in the Colorado Rockies.

His ski instructor, Blair Saunders, never told his agonizing.

"He's holding up fantastically. His stamina is increasing, and he's doing fine. I would say he's doing as well in three days as a lot of people do in two weeks. He likes to ski fast and he likes to ski in the fall line—straight downhill.

"I think he's a 12-year-old boy who is very aggressive and enjoys skiing. It's very strenuous to ski on just one leg. You are supporting 100 per cent of your weight, 100 per cent of the body, with one leg."

Ammons, a real estate salesman, learned to ski after he lost both legs nine years ago. In the winter he teaches amputees to ski.

Senator Kennedy had his choice of any facility in the world and chose this (Jimmy Fund research facilities) as "the best," said William Starr, executive director of the fund.

The fund was established by business, sports, theatrical and medical people for research and treatment of cancer in children. It has pioneered in chemotherapy.

Among the donors to the fund 24 years ago was Senator Kennedy, who gave $50,000.

A hospital spokesman said Teddy has shown no evidence of recurrence of the tumor but caused amputation of his leg. He will continue to undergo preventive therapy for about two years.

Dr. S. Philip Caper, chief physician in the surgical team which amputated his leg last November, recently disclosed that after a meeting of half a dozen leading specialists at the Kennedy home in McLean, Va., it was decided Teddy should be given massive doses of the anti-cancer drug methotrexate.

The drug indiscriminately attacks normal as well as cancerous tissue, so doctors give "rescue" doses of the citrovorum, vitamin factor within two hours of the toxic methotrexate.

Canada's Vast Geography Poses Election Nightmare

OTTAWA (CP) — With seven time zones, 10 provinces, two northern territories, 264 federal constituencies and 2.56 million square miles to worry about, Canada is a logistical nightmare at federal election time.

"I feel boar's head" Jack Forrester, returning officer for Chief Electoral Officer Jean-Marc Hamel, has to have 45,000 polling stations open for business on E day.

"You wouldn't believe the trouble that we have here getting these stations set up.

"Most voters can be persuaded to get out and vote on election day if they show up election day. But in the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, where 24-hour daylight time, Quebec, Ontario, Saskatchewan and the Northwest Territories have opted for the policy of having all polls in any province or territory open and close simultaneously regardless of time zone.

Newfoundland has a special time zone of its own—Newfoundland time (NDT)—which is 3½ minutes ahead of the rest of Atlantic Canada. Part of Labrador, part of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

So, to ensure that polls in both parts of Newfoundland open and close at the same time, the voting polls will open at 8:30 a.m. ADT and at 9:30 a.m. NDT in the island part of the province. They will open at 9 a.m. ADT in Quebec.

Problem ridings that include islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The riding of Mackenzie is largely on the north shore of the gulf, but it includes Anticosti Island, which has about 220 voters. The 60th longitudinal meridian, which separates Atlantic time from Eastern time (EDT), bisects Anticosti. Polls on the eastern half will open a 10 a.m. ADT, while those on the western half will open at 8 a.m. EDT, with the result that they actually open and close at the same time.

Then there's the riding at Bonaventure — Iles - de - la - Madeleine. The island part of the riding, on the Gaspe Peninsula, will start at 8 a.m. EDT with the same result as Mackenzie voters.

Most of Ontario operates on eastern time with polls open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. EDT. One section near the Manitoba boundary is on central time and polls there will be open from 8 to 7 p.m. CDT.

This includes all of Kenora-Rainy River and western part of Port William, Fort Arthur and Thunder Bay constituencies.

Eastern Saskatchewan is on central standard time, the western part on mountain daylight time. There, too, polls are the same as for the 9 p.m. polls in Saskatchewan will open at 8 a.m. CST or MDT, the electoral office says.

The Northwest Territories, which have about 16,000 voters scattered across 1.02 million square miles, are in a special class with four time zones.

Only about 15 voters—all at the military base at Alert Bay, on the northern end of Ellesmere Island—are in the Atlantic zone. They will vote between 11 a.m. and 10 p.m.

Joyriders Biggest Car Thieves

TORONTO (CP) — About 80 per cent of the 7,070 cars stolen in this city last year had the keys left in the ignition, says Ray Barber, a staff-sergeant in the 3-man police auto recovery squad.

Some of the thefts were by professionals, some for specific criminal purposes such as bank robberies, but most, 80 per cent, were by teen-agers.

The professionals changed the serial numbers and licence plates and sold the vehicles in Vancouver, Montreal or to the United States.

Cars stolen by teen-agers are seldom damaged, although sometimes items such as tape decks are stolen, and are usually abandoned a block or two from where they were taken, said Sgt. Barber.

Inspector Jack Webster, head of the police auto squad, said police recovered 96 per cent of cars stolen last year.

Ninety per cent of the cars stolen in 1975 were taken by teen-agers out for a joyride, he said.

Usually, the pros concentrated on luxury cars, while the joyriders sought sports cars.

PoW Exchange Over

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel and Syria exchanged their last prisoners from the October war today, and Red Cross planes flew them home from Tel Aviv and Damascus.

Israel's soldiers released 367 Syrians, 10 Iraqis and five Moroccans captured in the Golan Heights from their prison camp before dawn and loaded them on a Swissair jumbo jetliner and a United Nations Fokker Friendship for the hour-long flight to Syria.

As the planes left Israel, a third Red Cross flight departed from Damascus with 56 Israeli PoWs aboard.

The Israelis entered the plane under the silent gaze of hundreds of Syrian men, women and children gathered to welcome their soldiers.

The PoW exchange promised in the disengagement pact negotiated by U.S. Secretary Henry Kissinger began Saturday when Syria exchanged 13 wounded Israelis for 25 wounded Syrians and one Moroccan.

As the prisoners left for home, United Nations peacekeeping troops began patrolling the ceasefire line on the Golan Heights.

Wildly jubilant crowds of Israelis and Syrians poured outside the airfields at Damascus and outside Tel Aviv to welcome the PoWs home.

Welcoming ceremonies collapsed in chaos as the crowds fought past police barriers.

The first 180 men of the UN Disengagement Observers Force (UNDOF) moved into the buffer zone between Syria and Israeli armies Wednesday after military negotiators for the two governments signed the plans for withdrawal of their forces that they had worked out in Geneva.

One hundred and fifty Canadian soldiers set up camp in the destroyed Syrian village of Quneitra, one of the two pieces of territory captured in the 1967 war that Israel is relinquishing along with its October gains.

The first troops came from the UN force manning the Israeli-Egyptian ceasefire lines in the Sinai desert. The Golan Heights buffer force is to total 1,250 men.

Hopes Are Made of Paper

Ald. Jean Smith has been suggesting industries and institutions in city could be sources of much recyclable waste-paper. Wednesday she decided to prove the point and filled a pickup truck with wastepaper from two city high schools — helped by students Brian Duffy, 18 (left) and Robert Miller, 16.

Second Inquest Opens

DUBLIN (AP) — A second inquest into the death of Michael Gaughan, claimed by the Irish Republican Army as a martyr, opened on the lake of Wight today at the request of his family. The new post-mortem may delay his last journey home in a coffin escorted by the IRA.

Gaughan died Monday night after a 4-day hunger strike aimed at winning a transfer to an Irish prison. Authorities at Parkhurst prison on the Isle of Wight said Gaughan died of pneumonia.

But a representative of Sinn Fein, political arm of the IRA, said he believes the second post-mortem will show that pneumonia was caused when a tube, used to feed Gaughan artificially, pierced his stomach.

The IRA planned to parade Gaughan's coffin across Ireland to Ballina, his home town in County Mayo. Irish government has indicated it will not tolerate any display of military strength by the outlawed organization.

Six red banners fluttered outside Dublin's General Post Office today as the body of the IRA hunger striker in a British jail. Gaughan's was borne in black crepe.

The others honor the Price sisters, Marion and Dolours, Hugh Feeney, Frank Stagg and Gerald Kelly.

Gaughan was serving a seven-year sentence for bank robbery; the others are in for life for car bombings in London last year. Like Gaughan, the other five are demanding to be classified as political prisoners and to be transferred to prisons in Northern Ireland.

Gaughan was the first Irish hunger striker to die in a British prison since Terence Macswiney, lord mayor of Cork, in 1920. The same green, white and gold Irish tricolor that covered MacSwiney's coffin was to cover Gaughan's.

Irish authorities fear that by the time Gaughan is buried, anguish and anger in public opinion will swing behind the IRA and the guerrillas will win recruits after a spell of relative calm.

There still was no word from the three armed men—believed to be IRA members—who kidnapped the 71-year-old Earl of Donoughmore and his wife early Wednesday at their country mansion in County Tipperary, 120 miles southwest of Dublin.

Legion Bans 'Enemy'

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Royal Canadian Legion has gone on record as being opposed to any participation by former enemies in Remembrance Day events.

The more than 2,000 delegates attending the Legion's 25th biennial convention here voted Wednesday to adopt a resolution saying the Legion is "totally opposed to the participation in Remembrance Day services of any veteran of a foreign power which was engaged in hostile action against our forces."

R. G. Scmille of Winnipeg, the Legion's outgoing president, asked delegates not to pass the resolution.

Mr. Smellie said veterans cannot continue to "nurture hatreds which were very natural at the time of war."

But the resolution was passed on a voice vote.

Salute D-day

BENY-SUR-MER, France (CP) — On a treelined lawn filled with the graves of more than 2,000 Canadians killed in the battle of Normandy, greying survivors of D-day assembled a stirring rollcall Wednesday as they paid tribute to their fallen comrades.

It was the emotional highlight of Canada's part in the 30th anniversary of the Normandy landings as 80 bemedalled veterans stepped up to the cross of sacrifice and saluted the dead.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A Canadian scientist says he has laboratory evidence that supports theories linking heavy marijuana use with liver damage and reduced resistance to infection.

Killed In Train Crash

BALGONIE, Sask. (CP) — The operator of a Euclid earthmover died Wednesday while trapped for about 10 hours after his machine collided with a CP Rail freight train. Jerry Heidinger, 32, of the Balgonie district, was the only victim of a crash near here that derailed 41 cars in the 93-car train.

Pickets Get Help

HAMILTON (CP) — Pickets began gathering early today at the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. following an appeal Wednesday for steelworkers support of striking Firestone workers. Roy Ames, a Firestone security guard, said he and a fellow guard were unable to leave the plant today because of the pickets, which he estimated at about 100 in number by 7 a.m.

GANDER, Nfld. (CP) — Robert Stanfield said Wednesday night that the full benefits of off-shore mineral resources should go to the coastal provinces.

"I have taken the same position as national leader of the Conservative party as I had as premier of Nova Scotia—that the benefits of those resources should go to the coastal provinces," he told a party rally in this central Newfoundland community.

"I will take the same position if the people of Canada make me prime minister," he told an audience of fewer than 200.

The turnout in the Gander-Twillingate riding held in the last Parliament by Progressive Conservative John Lundrigan was a disappointment to Conservatives, especially since it followed on the heels of a warm reception for Mr. Stanfield in the twin cities of Grand Falls and Windsor only 60 miles away.

He rode a bright yellow dune buggy in a motorcade through the twin cities.

Later he joined a group of youngsters in dancing a jig prior to a rally in Grand Falls.

Making his first appearance in Newfoundland since the July, federal election was called, he dwelt heavily on local issues.

He promised a Conservative government would make fish-eries a single federal department, saying the Liberal government had reduced the industry by lumping it with the environment department.

He told a news conference that he looked favorably on proposed Newfoundland projects such as harnessing of power of the lower Churchill River and building a trans-Labrador highway.

But he cautiously insisted he was not staging a campaign of promises adding he said Prime Minister Trudeau did in 1972.

But as he did earlier in the northern New Brunswick communities of Newcastle and Chatham, Mr. Stanfield returned to such familiar topics as his proposed prices and incomes freeze and the alleged mistreatment of old age pensioners by the Trudeau government.

He said claims by the prime minister that the Liberals had legislation "ready to help the pensioners could not be upheld.

Lewis Wants Gas Inquiry

TORONTO (CP) — Stephen Lewis, Ontario New Democratic Party leader, called Wednesday for a public inquiry into the May 15 increase in gasoline and heating oil prices to determine whether oil companies "deliberately provided misinformation to governments about supplies on hand.

He repeated in a statement that Ontario consumers will pay an extra $53 million for oil products because the companies were permitted to raise their prices prematurely.

The inquiry should investigate the amount of crude oil the industry had on hand when the new price schedule came into effect, said Mr. Lewis.

Trudeau Booed in Oil Country

CALGARY (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was booed and jeered over federal oil policy when he arrived here Wednesday but he said minutes later that Ottawa is ---- to the development and growth of resource industries --- gions of the country.

"No oil executive is entitled to claim that our government has any adverse intents for any industry, certainly not the petroleum industry," he told a meeting of Liberal workers and candidates after encountering one of the angriest anti-government demonstrations of the election campaign.

It occurred outside the meeting at the downtown Palliser Hotel where he was met by several hundred shouting, placard-waving oil company employees, executives and opposition party supporters opposed to federal energy and corporate tax policies.

After making his way inside, where the cheers of supporters contrasted sharply with the jeers outside, he offered to meet Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed anytime to discuss equitable sharing of "windfall oil profits" between oil companies and the federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Trudeau was interrupted frequently by hecklers in the crowd of about 2,000, one of whom he told to shut up, then apologized.

"Go on talking. I have to be good tempered in this campaign."

He was received warmly and applauded often when he reviewed oil policy developments and federal objectives.

Cabinet Minister Accused Of Contemplating Mutiny

SHOAL LAKE, Man. (CP) — Eldon Woolliams, Progressive Conservative Member of Parliament for Calgary-North, said Wednesday night that Defense Minister James Richardson approached a number of western MPs in a recently as a month ago with the prospect of forming a Western Canada Pary.

"I'm willing to risk a lawsuit and a shorter lease on life because I asked Jim Richardson myself and he admitted it," Mr. Woolliams said in an interview after addressing the Marquette nomination meeting.

Mr. Woolliams did not identify any of the members he claims Mr. Richardson approached.

During his address to the nominating meeting, he said Prime Minister Trudeau is trying to make leadership a major issue for the July 8 election and has chided Conservative leader Robert Sanfield "for not keeping a shorter leash on his caucus" as Jack Horner and Stan Schumacher, both Trudeau MPs, having his own leadership problems.

He also answered two questions from a front-page editorial in Calgary Herald Wednesday: Do the premiers own resources within their jurisdiction? Will the Liberals, if re-elected, bring down the federal budget, defeated May 9 in the Commons?

The answer to both is "yes," said the prime minister.

The budget, which would raise corporation taxes by $200 million, would be implemented as it stands unless economic circumstances change and alterations become necessary.

He said some sections, including those that upset the oil industry, might be reconsidered if a revenue-sharing agreement can be worked out with the oil-producing provinces.

He said the people of Alberta should not have to suffer because of a "cold war" between Ottawa and the provincial Progressive Conservative government.

"Certainly will take my responsibilities and try to find an end to this disagreement."

Third Olympic Lottery Feeds Insatiable Ticket Demand

MONTREAL (CP) — Reporting an "insatiable" demand for lottery tickets, Olympic Lottery Canada announced Wednesday the third draw will be held Nov. 18, featuring two $1-million jackpot prizes.

Roger Rousseau and Julien Cote, president and general manager, respectively, of the lottery said a potential total of $17,280,000 will be distributed to 60,000 possible winners in the draw, which represents the second overhaul of the prize structure since the lottery program began.

The officials also reported that the second draw—the 2.5-million ticket issue is already regarded as "fully subscribed"—could be held in Edmonton July 16 to underline the nationwide nature of the Olympic effort.

The electronic televised draw will be staged in the Albertan capital on the eve of Klondike Days celebrations and the third, providing two million-dollar prizes compared with the single $1-million jackpots in the first two lotteries, will be held somewhere in the Maritimes, Mr. Cote said. There will be five million tickets in the third issue.

"The success of the first two lotteries show Canadians are really behind the Olympics and they are participating," Mr. Rousseau told a news conference.

Tickets for the third draw go on sale Friday.

A financial statement showed that the lottery corporation, created under federal law, remitted $11,300,000 to the organizing committee of the 1976 Montreal Olympics from the first lottery. The draw was held in Ottawa April 15.

The statement put proceeds from the sale of tickets at $22,-282,200 and showed that prizes to winning ticket-holders and to sellers of winning tickets totaled $8,186,750. Prizes expected because of cancelled tickets out of a total issue of 2.5 million had a value of $1,500.

Mr. Rousseau, commissioner-general of the Games, and Mr. Cote said the lottery sales have been more successful than expected.

"However, you must keep in mind that the cost of operating the Games is going to be very much higher than expected due to inflation and I think that the money will come in very handy to the organizing committee," Mr. Cote declared.

He noted that original plans called for six lotteries. The bid has been revised upward to eight. The organizers would try to remain within that number but demand was a factor that could not be ignored in any efficient enterprise.

Quinte Forest Fire Fighters Stand on Guard

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TWEED — The men who stand guard over Quinte forests brushed up their techniques Wednesday near here.

As the weather warms, the fire hazard in the bushland outdoors heightens. So does the wary watchfulness of the forest fire protection service of the natural resources ministry here.

In total, there are two five-man teams of firefighters on duty for dispatch throughout the Tweed forestry district or wherever they're needed. Backing them up are other ministry personnel and civilian wardens assigned in their resident townships.

Most fires come in all sizes. Some may be big — and inaccessible by ground vehicles.

That's where bomber aspect of the service comes into play — airdrops.

Firefighting practice yesterday for the professional firemen and backup personnel also showed how quickly supplies can be moved to men battling remote outbreaks.

Much of the exercise was given over to airdrops from the ministry's Beaver turboprop fireplane stationed here throughout the summer.

Supplies — including food, water, blankets, hoses — were loaded aboard the plane at Stoco Lake which made repeated runs to parachute the items on a remote hilltop west of here.

Such exercises are serious scenarios. At least four times last year, says fire control officer Doug Mumford, airdrops had to be made o assist teams battling big fires in the district for several days.

Cars Collide

TWEED — A Belleville woman, Carol Anne Merrill, 18, was involved in an accident Tuesday on Highway 37, five miles south of Tweed.

Miss Merrill was making a left turn into a private driveway when she came into collision with a car driven by Minnie Hastings of Thomasburg. Damage to the Merrill car was $600 and to the Hastings car was $300.

Delegation Protests Marmora Tax Increase

MARMORA — A delegation of eight village residents concerned with the large increase in property taxes this year sought an explanation from Village council recently.

Edward Tristin asked about the $50,000 for salaries and wages. Reeve Jack Reynolds explained that this was the amount spent last year and included wages for a caretaker at the waste disposal site. He went on to explain council intends to keep casual labor at a minimum this year.

Grant Airhart, finance chairman, explained a number of items in the budget. Some $18,000 for recreation was set to offset the deficit in arena operating cost last year. Council is confident after a consultant survey future costs would be shared on a more equitable basis by Marmora and Lake Township and Deloro Village.

Insurance coverage and Workmans' Compensation had also gone up, Mr. Airhart said, adding that $1,500 had been budgeted for a badly needed new roof on the Memorial Building.

"The main reason for a deficit in operations last year was that the Village did not receive the amount of government grants which had been anticipated" Reeve Jack Reynolds explained.

Body in Trent

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Town police are withholding the identification of a man whose body was found in the Trent River at 7.50 a.m. Thursday.

Police Chief David Saunders said there were "no visible signs of violence but this is up to the coroner to release this information."

Identification of the man will be released once next-of-kin have been notified, said the chief.

A postmortem is being conducted at Trenton Memorial Hospital, Trenton's Dr. John Byrne is coroner.

Police were alerted when a Kenelco man raised an object partially submerged near the stern of his boat moored at the Trenton dock. Skater Ronald Fenn then called the police, the chief said.

Save Water

MARMORA — Indiscriminate use of water during dry village residents has led Council to restrict lawn-and-garden watering at night.

Clerk-treasurer Willi i a m Shannon was asked to prepare a bylaw prohibiting use of water from June 15 to October 15 between of 9:30 p.m. and 6 a.m.. The bylaw will provide a fine of $25.

Lions Hold Charter Night

TRENTON — The Lions Club of Trenton will hold its 35th charter and Ladies Night at Batawa Recreation Centre June 15

Guest speaker for the evening will be Lions International director George Kenlen from Babylin, New York.

In commemoration of the meeting, town council earlier this week declared the week June 9 to 15 as Lions International Week.

Algonquin Park Expansion Planned

TWEED (Special) — The Ontario Government will announce plans to extend the boundaries of Algonquin Park.

David Hoskivell, information officer for the parks division of the Natural Resources Ministry, says that "significant" additions will be made to the park at the southwest corner and some additions on the north side.

He would not give any details because he said a master plan for the 2,900 square mile park, under preparation for some time, is not completed.

Park expansion will be good news for campers, canoeists and other outdoor buffs, but bad news for cottage owners who might be hit in the expansion areas.

Hoskivell said the government owns "vast properties" in some areas adjacent to the park but some others may have to be purchased or expropriated.

How fast cottage owners in the areas affected will be forced to move out "depends on what speed we need the property" Hoskivell said.

The normal process followed by the province is to offer cottage owners the going market rate for their property and failing that, it could resort to expropriation.

Reeve Wants Clear Goals

PICTON — A Dominion Day holiday fishing derby sponsored by the Wellington and District Lions Club will be assisted by the Prince Edward Chamber of Commerce.

Chamber directors voted to donate $120 towards prize money for the July 1 event. It was also agreed to donate $200 to a show sponsored by the water ski club July 6.

"We seem to be in need of clarification of our goals," deputy-reeve Larry Richardson remarked as town council's representative to the chamber.

He said that he is uncertain about such grants and added that he experiences the same misgivings at council when public monies are donated for special events.

Donald Sutton, manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce observed that he considers it the chamber's role to initiate requests instead of giving it away.

Chamber director Gordon Lloyd, also questioned the grants.

"We should contribute more to the encouragement of commerce," he noted.

Another Week

TRENTON — Town council this week has declared June 16 to 22 as Nursing Home Week.

E.E. Gauthier, administrator of Trent Valley Lodge, made the request to council and further invited the mayor and council to tour the facility.

Woman Finds $3,400 at Auction

BRIGHTON — It's just amazing what some people will bids — and where they will bids it. Ask Gladys Beckstead of the Campbellford area — a regular face at auction.

Auctioneer Ted Hennessey tells it this way:

Mrs. Beckstead, of Trent River, south of Campbellford is an avid auction-goer.

She was attending an estate auction here recently when she found a back folder with $3,400.

"I was looking through the cubbyholes of a desk," recalled Mrs. Beckstead, "when I noticed a shadow". Reaching in she pulled out a cheque folder with 34 $100 bills inside.

She immediately reported the find to auctioneer Hennessey who, in turn, telephoned Brighton village Reeve Dorothy Brickell, daughter of the estate's deceased owner.

The money was turned over to Reeve Brickell who rewarded Mrs. Beckstead with $100.

Only negative side to the incident was other reactions to her handing over the money, Mrs. Beckstead said.

"I was stunned at the people who said 'I would have kept it. What's the generation, eleven ton, my generation, coming to?"

Vandals Strike

An intelligencer newsman summed up the mind of the vandal aptly the other day when he wrote: "Destruction fascinates as much as construction."

The report had to do with the latest game of the disoriented and dispossessed — in mind, that is.

Otherwise why the sudden interest in Point Anne's relative remoteness and in the planned two-year demolition program at the old Canada Cement Co. complex there? In the ordinary way a spot like that would fade into obscurity. However, because of the lure of the demolition process — and nobody denies it can excite a certain raw interest — the site seems to be attracting those who find in it, not a legitimate piece of outdoor spectacle, but rather an excuse for some damaging capers of their own.

Thus there has been not only trespassing but deliberate acts of vandalism such as the smashing of the cab window of a crane. Officials of the demolition firm say if the "No Trespassing" orders are not obeyed the cement company building, as it comes down piece by piece, could be the cause of injury or worse to unauthorized people in the vicinity.

Point Anne once was a place where sport flourished. There were athletics and tennis. It is a pity its present fame should be reduced to this kind of negative activity.

City Grants

Belleville City Council's grant to the Central Volunteer Bureau this year is $2,000, an increase of $500 over last year. In our editorial, "City Grants," on June 3, the grant was shown incorrectly as being $1,200. The latter figure was the amount of the grant extended to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

The grant to the Hastings Museum was shown in the 1974 budget report as up from $8,750 last year to $12,000. The reason for this is that the Museum opened on July 1, 1973 and $8,750 represented the grant for the six-month period only.

Moonlighters

Somehow the idea of farmers moonlighting, even from necessity, seems an improbable idea. Yet many do, and for that reason they must be among the hardiest of folk. A University of Guelph survey which is in the offing is aimed at determining just how many there are in this category in the townships of Rawdon, Huntingdon and Madoc. The results should be interesting.

Crime Figures

The head of the FBI is blaming publicity for exacerbating the crime situation in the United States. He was referring in particular to further kidnappings that took place after Patricia Hearst was taken from her apartment last February.

But what about the constant barrage of violence that emanates from the television screen? This probably reaches a larger audience than ever bothers to read the newspapers. And why is it that the most affected seems to be the United States — a country with "too many guns . . . too many books . . . too many books with guns," as Toronto columnist Richard Needham has put it.

Incidentally, at last count the annual death rate from homicides in the U.S. had risen to more than 19,000.

Retiring CMA Chief Speaks Out

Curbs On Government Spending Would Cool Inflation

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Ask a businessman to name the major cause of inflation.

His probable answer: Government spending.

Stepping down after a one-year term as president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, John A. Keith H. Raspey fired off this salvo:

"Much of the heat can be taken out of inflation if only (the politicians) will seriously attack government spending, rather than permit it to continue relentlessly advancing year by year, more rapidly, than our gross national product."

The national accounts for 1973 show that government expenditure reached a record $ 17,440.9 million—more than triple the figure of $5,467-million a decade earlier.

But the main transfers of money between different levels of government are eliminated, there was actually a modest decline in government expenditures as a percentage of gross national product last year—37.5 per cent from 1973's post-war high of 38.3 per cent.

(At the federal level, the change was to 14.5 per cent of GNP from 15 per cent; at the provincial level, to 10.7 per cent from 11 per cent; and at the municipal level, to 8.1 per cent from 8.4 per cent. Hospital and pension-plan spending makes up the difference.)

These figures were cited the other day by economist Robert Maclintosh, executive vice-president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who commented:

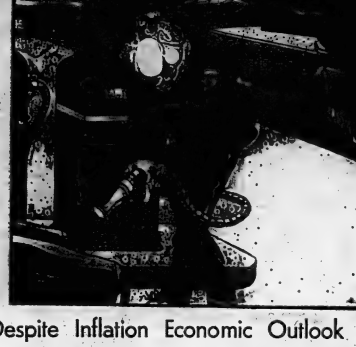
"In searching for new things to do and spend money on, the federal government has necessarily focussed its attention on income-transfer policies—that is to say, on policies that postpone the raising of large federal revenues," and the paying-out of these revenues to the provinces of governments or to different groups of people."

"The growth of a well paid class of provincial civil servants has, of course, given rise to pressure that feeds on itself."

In his blunt speech, Keith Raspey rapped all politicians—federal and provincial, of whatever party, for superimposing huge increases in government spending on the competitive sector.

"It is they who have run heavy budgetary deficits, choosing this to be the more politically acceptable way of financing bigger and bigger government, rather than pushing taxes still higher."

Hitting against government spending is probably a basic activity, both for businessmen and for the politicians at the receiving end of the criticism.



But whether the criticism has any significant effect's highly doubtful.

Any politician would rather give himself away than restrict spending. And the typical recipient of public money is unlikely to complain that the government is spending too much on him.

Both may realize dimly that the government's money must come from tax collections or from the printing press, but it is much easier to forget that and to enjoy the giving and taking.

As a result, people demand more and more services and governments treasonise—ironically, often on the ground that the government must even them that protection against inflation.

In a sense, Kenta Clem will be a candidate to every riding July 8. He's a proven vote-getter.

Despite Inflation Economic Outlook Is Fair

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst
Thomson News Service

Despite high inflation and low stock prices, the outlook for the 1974 Canadian economy is fairly good.

That's the view—stripped of qualifiers—of the top economists of a number of Canadian chartered banks. They offered their forecasts at the recent Vancouver meeting of the Conference Board in Canada.

If they are right, you can look for continued inflation at an annual rate of nearly 10 per cent, moderately higher unemployment (5.3 per cent of the labor force at last count), and overall economic growth of five per cent or more (vs. 7.1 per cent in 1973).

That's not the kind of economic performance to cheer about, and it appears to be well below Canada's true economic potential.

But it will probably exceed the achievement of other industrialized economies—even that of the United States, for example, and growth could fall far short of its four-per-cent potential—quite possibly to zero.

The reasons (according to D. B. Peters, vice-president and chief economist of the Toronto Dominion Bank): Canada's economic policies have been less restrictive than those of other countries, and our energy position is relatively secure.

"The combination of these two factors could well prove decisive with the basis for the most favorable economic growth expectations this year among the world's leading economies," he believes.

A specific source of strength in Canada, cited by Dr. Peters, is consumer spending, which he thinks will increase by more than 12 per cent during 1973.

Spending on so-called consumer durables, especially cars, will tend to support the consumer sector.

(How much real growth will come from consumer spending is another question. Some of the increase will be due to unusual factors, such as food, and some to the growing belief that it's better to buy something—anything—than to save depreciating dollars.)

One negative factor cited by Dr. Peters is the danger that the current U.S. economic downturn will hurt our merchandise exports.

An important source of strength in Canada's economy this year, next, and beyond, Royal Bank of Canada chief economist Ralph Sutton, will be capital spending—on non-residential construction, machinery and equipment.

Home-building will recover again in 1974, he expects, after a year of negative growth" in 1973.

The problem, as Dr. Sultan sees it will be to find the necessary capital.

Improving the corporate savings rate, now 10 per cent of Gross National Product, will be difficult because of public hostility to increased corporate retained earnings.

Personal savings are unlikely to fill the gap unless people are willing greater incentives to save.

And the United States will be less reliable sources of capital because of its domestic needs.

In the current environment of uncertainty about taxes, grow ing provincial claims on federal jurisdiction and public disenchantment with the stock market, Canada could soon run into a major shortage of the capital it needs to keep the economy growing.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By The Canadian Press

Alexandro Gavazzi, a former Italian priest, made his first speech on a tour of Canada 121 years ago today — in 1853 — and a riot by Quebec citizens was avoided only by the appearance of British troops. He was speaking in favor of Italian Independence and argued that the Roman Catholic church was working against it. He spoke again June 9 in Montreal and troops were called out. They fired into the crowd, killing 11 persons and wounding others. The incident increased Catholic-Protestant hatred in early Canada.

1881 — Sir John A. Macdonald died.

1896 — George Herbo and Frank Slocombe left New York for Europe in a rowboat. They arrived in England July 3.

1924 — Canada and the United States signed a treaty to curb liquor smuggling.

The Fine Art of Walking The Political Tightrope

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau
Thomson News Service

TORONTO — Being a provincial Tory politician in these federal election times can have its tricky moments.

On the one hand there is the need to be the prophet of confidence, in view of the fact that the Tories are running the province.

But then one must also mix in as the prophet of gloom insomuch as the Liberals are running the country.

It calls for some unique tightrope walking.

Ministry of Industry and Tourism Claude Bennett gave an example of this last week when he spoke to some bankers in Alexandria Bay, N.Y.

Mr. Bennett first got in his plug.

"In Canada," he said, "the economic outlook is good.

"The most recent prognostications seem to indicate that Canada in General—Ontario in particular—will have an economy operating at close to full capacity this year."

He had got in his plug. Then in the dagger.

"This is not to say that we are without economic problems in Canada. We have supply problems, too. Some of our labor markets are tight and they may get tighter . . . .

"This was just something, leading up to the stab:

"As in the United States, we in Canada have a problem of continuing inflation.

"Now that subject is sort of sub judice at the moment. It is the main issue in the federal election campaign. Without debating both domestic Canadian and international properties on this subject, I can report to you—quite objectively—that the Liberal federal government has been defeated on the floor of the Commons over its inability to deal with the problem."

To clinch his case with his American, and undoubtedly intensely interested audience, the minister had one further observation:

"One of the minor problems we have right now is a certain lack of leadership and stability at the federal level."

And with this Mr. Bennett apparently considered his political duty well done, for there were no more federal salvos.

Woman of 94 Pursues Thief

Kingston Whig-Standard

Her downright gumption and proud self-reliance, those who have been through the mill of life on this earth can often show us all an example. Take the recent incident involving Miss Stella Wingart of Toronto. Miss Wingart is 94 and she was off on her daily constitutional to attend mass at the church of Our Lady of Peace when she was a thief snatched her purse. Did she faint? Did she call for help? Or just keep quiet? Not on your life. She lit out after the thief and chased him for three blocks before Miss Wingart's brother-in-law could overtake her. The indictions of some law-breaker who would prey on the helpless of outraged public opinion.

apologized for losing the quarry: "I must be getting old and feeble, I don't run like a boy any more." It turned out that she has a competence about crime prevention. She has read detective stories for nearly half her life. That, she said, "has taught me that getting a good description is very important."

We hope the Toronto Police Department was properly appreciative of the efforts of a citizen of that stout fibre as Miss Wingart. And the majority of the population had better give a thought to Miss Wingart, especially the next time they send their own flesh and blood indictions of some law-breaker who would prey on the helpless of outraged public opinion.

The Practice of Subversion

Editor:
The Intelligencer.
Mr: D. Grant addressed himself to the question of subversion with skill and dedication. In taking over 1000 words his presentation, "Subversion and you?" was disappointing in that, having opened the door, he chose not to go in and look at the other side.

Subversion is not the sole property of the Communists. The USA, UK, Germany, France to name a few, have their share at it. But as they are on our side that's different. Is it anything like "counter subversion".

Mr. Grant is a former newspaper man with a penchant for detail and research. I am sure his research would show him more than a hint we "peaceful media", with our propaganda in exactly the same way the Communists do. So what's the difference?

In the old days when we were exploiting the natives of more backward countries we called it "colonizing". It was then respectable to be very "teaching" them to be good Christians while robbing them blind. As a result, the British Empire was born — on the backs of the dispossessed. We spread pillaged in the name of King and country and we got rich out of those who murdered the natives who ventured out of their rank.

Long before the Communists arrived on the scene we had set the stage for the "colored revolt". Today by first developing the native people from their homes and selling them into slavery.

Along the way we did allege a handful of us some sort of education and this is where we fell down. They went back to their homes, dressed themselves in uniform together with a high-schooling rank. Then they put their new-found knowledge to use, (in the main, for their own benefit) forming armies to chuck out the thieves who had been living off their land and by their labors for so long.

With the exception of South Africa and Rhodesia most countries have got the message.

Regardless of how we feel about the Third World it is here to stay. It is the Rhodesians and South Africans may well find out as they do not recognize that their policies in relation to the native people are not in accordance with the times.

I don't know whether or not the Canadian church leaders attending symposia by the native people was, but the UK made it quite plain recently that it was not prepared to underwrite South Africa needs.

One thing I am pleased to see is that the media are forsaking the respectability of the past and getting into the arena of politics. After all it is here where decisions that affect us all are made, legislatory, political and economic.

Perhaps Mr. Grant will give us the benefit sometime of his impressions in regard to Chile, Portugal, India and Pakistan.

If we are so upset about the Russians helping these people maybe we had better do it ourselves. Alot of talk, little doing and pinching everything they have, in the name of free enterprise.

Looking Backward

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 6, 1954

An appeal for every bit of available help to assist in canning operations in the Bay of Quinte district during the coming summer was made from the office of the National Selective Service here this week. Approximately 1,650 workers will be the initial number required by canning factories will the beginning of the pea harvest.

40 YEARS AGO

June 6, 1934

Two new officers assumed their duties with the Belleville Police Department yesterday, inspector J. C. Hayes, former chief at Tweed and Constable Ray Doherty, who came to Belleville. After two years on the Cobourg Force Previously Wilbur Johnson joined the Force bringing the department's strength equal to that prior to the recent resignations of three constables.

50 YEARS AGO

June 6, 1924

Harvest by be rapid growing weather throughout the week of May, will strawberries are already beginning to ripen with the first berries of the season being picked 28th week. According to reports of district farmers the berry crop in the Belleville district this year will by a light one as vines were heavily winter-killed.

Territorial exchanges will be minimal in a part of the Middle East which is rocky barren and not worth the blood and human life it has cost so far. And the border zones on either side will be operated by UN personnel in a standard procedure used in Cyprus and by the old Gaza strip.

On both of Israel's warring fronts Dr. Kissinger has now formed a diplomatic miracle, namely cooperation with the possibility that once-warring countries can now look to the peaceful and constructive task of working together.

However, Israel and Egypt this will be easier than between Israel and Syria. Already the bare canal is being dredged, deepened and cleared of wrecks with a $250 million loan and a top naval diving team from the United States. Israeli ships will use it again some day soon.

With Syria, Lebanon and Jordan, the diplomatic and other ties are seriously muddled by the demands and needs of the various Palestinian refugee groups determined to return to lands seized by Israel during and after the 1948 war, and abandoned by Arab families in flight during that event.

The future home of the Palestinian refugees who have existed up a post-1948 generation of young adults from whom almost all the terrorists and gunmen are now come, includes present Israeli and Jordanian territories.

The plan most talked about is one that would partition state between the present Israel and Jordan, made up largely of lands captured by Israel from Jordan in the 1967 Six-Day War.

If this were ever accomplished and Israel returned the Negeb to Egypt, the map of this part of the Middle East would look very much like the one for the 1947 United Nations partition plan which was not accepted.

It is not clearly understood that Israel herself is a country with an Arab population of some consequence. About one in four Israelis is now Arab.

Therefore Israel would, not negotiate as a purely Jewish state with little knowledge of Arab demands and attitudes.

What will lead to any meaningful discussions now is the continuance of the brutal Palestinian terrorist raids into Israel and the equally cruel Israeli reprisals.

It is thus the tragic and unforgivable murder of Israeli school children at Ma'alote did not terminate the vital Kissinger talks with Syria. That failure to do so remains at this point of looking for yet more diplomatic departures, at most hopeful sign.

Flu No Damper On Roy's Party

LONDON (CP) — Lord Thomson of Fleet celebrated his 80th birthday in style Wednesday—despite the remnants of an illness which has troubled him during the last several weeks.

"I'll be all right," the Canadian-born publisher said in an interview.

He added that "there's absolutely nothing wrong" with his health how but conceded that he does need a rest.

Thomson said his trouble began with a bout of influenza which left him suffering from laryngitis.

Against a doctor's advice, he went on a trip to the Far East and returned to Britain May 28 "quite ill," Thomson said.

But he spoke of feeling better Wednesday and was at his London office as usual.

His birthday featured a special lunch attended by Thomson executives from Canada as well as Britain. Later, about 100 executives attended a birthday dinner for Lord Thomson at the Savoy Hotel.

Among participants was Kenneth Thomson, son of the publisher and co-chairman of Thomson Organization Ltd.

Thomson said he has delegated a lot of responsibility to his son and to other company executives, but "I'm still in touch with the business."

His company, which controls many publishing and other enterprises, proposed to raise 8.9 million ($22.77 million) of new capital through a rights issue to shareholders.

Regional Systems Debated

WINNIPEG (CP) — Delegates to the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities waded through piles of resolutions Wednesday and were told their work can lead the way in making Canada the kind of country its citizens want.

"We can literally raise this country by its bootstraps to profoundly new and better standards of life for all Canadians," said Mayor J. W. Birds of Fredericton in his final address as president of the federation before the opposition when he said regional forms may be a power for urban areas in need of local government reorganization.

Mr. Bird told the nearly 800 delegates that membership in the federation will continue to be "one of the best values and investments in our respective budgets."

Delegates attending the various workshops often were at odds with each other.

Lou Parsons, chairman of the Peel Regional Council, ran into the

Reg Dawson, mayor of he town of Mount Royal in suburban Montreal, said the experience with regional government in his area has been that "greatly escalating costs have not attended greater efficiencies."

He said the integration of police services in Montreal for example, has resulted in creating public services at all levels of Canada.

Mr. Schreyer told delegates there is a need for fundamental changes in the system of financing public services at all levels in Canada.

Nine of the 11 resolutions passed sought more federal financial aid for local governments.

Similar ideas received general approval from the entire convention and Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer.

Crisis Blamed On Oil Firms

DETROIT (Reuter) — The energy crisis committee of the National Association of District Attorneys charged in a report Wednesday that the major oil companies are guilty of violating various state anti-trust and monopoly laws.

Firms reviewed by the committee were Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Mobil, Standard of California, Shell, Standard of Indiana, Atlantic Richfield and Union.

The committee report said the major oil firms created the energy crisis to help the oil and auto industries combat environmental restrictions.

The seven major areas in which the oil companies were accused of illegal operations were:

Interlocking directorships with banks, insurance companies and other sources of financing; joint bidding for land and offshore leases; joint ownership of pipelines; concentration of refining capacity among the major companies; exchange agreements between the oil firms; additive packages and exchange agreements in using these products, and destruction of independent competition through mergers and ending of certain operations.

The report suggested establishment of a national petroleum regulatory agency, a petroleum industry disclosure law, a federal oil industry franchise law and prohibition of interlocking directors and executives between domestic and foreign oil companies.

Indians Seeking Liquor Ban

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Northwest Territories councillors at Rae-Edzo have agreed Wednesday to abide "reluctantly" by the wishes of Indian bands who have asked that liquor sales to Dogrib treaty Indians in seven centres be discontinued.

"I'm going to be up my neck in trouble over this," said the commissioner, who long ago declared war against alcohol abuse in the North.

The federally-appointed head of the territorial government said he expects an outcry from civil libertarians and a possible lawsuit, based on the Canadian Bill of Rights, challenging his decision, which affects about 1,000 Indians.

Mr. Hodgson was described as a dictator by a territorial councillor last winter when he arbitrarily cut off liquor to the Eskimo settlement of Fond Inlet. Later, after consultation with settlement residents, he reversed his stand.

Chief Alexis Arrowmaker of Rae-Edzo and his councillors urged the decision. They told Mr. Hodgson they also spoke for the citizens of Rae Lakes, Lac La Marte, Detah, the Yellowknife Indian village and the treaty Dogribs of Yellowknife.

Whites, Metis and non-status Indians in the communities are not affected.

Mr. Hodgson has asked privately-owned liquor outlets and bars in Yellowknife not to serve the natives involved.

The commissioner, aware that bootlegging will increase as a result of his ruling, said he has asked the RCMP to pay special attention to the illegal sale of liquor. He also asked the band council at Rae-Edzo to help police enforce the law.

The commissioner said he cannot legally force privately-owned liquor stores and bars not to serve Dogribs.

"All I can do is respect the chief's wishes."

Dead Animals Prompt Charge

SUNDERLAND, Ont. (CP) — Antonio Monte of Toronto has been charged by provincial police under the Dead Animal Disposal Act following a raid by provincial police and Ontario Humane Society (OHS) officials on a farm here Saturday, which resulted in the seizure of 90 animals.

Monte has been charged with failing to bury dead animals within the 48-hour legal time limit.

OHS officials from Whitby and Grills seized 75 pigs, three dogs and a horse Saturday, while other animals were found dead. Tuesday, two of the confiscated pigs died.

Police said all the animals appeared emaciated from lack of feed and water. He said the only feed found on the farm was "inaccessible to the pigs."

His Beer Still Free

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man who has been serving free beer in his restaurant without a liquor licence received another visit from the police Wednesday.

Steve Hechelf, owner of Uncle Steve's Village restaurant, said the police took half a case of beer and some scotch bottles and "even cleaned off the table."

The officers charged Mr. Hechelf with another violation of the Liquor Licence Act of Ontario.

He was charged with three violations of the act following a visit from police May 16.

Mr. Hechelf said his fight against the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario (LLBO) has brought him sympathetic customers.

"Everybody's on my side," he said.

Mr. Hechelf said he applied for a liquor licence a year ago February and was turned down to serve beer until he gets the by the LLBO last Wednesday morning, "so they'll have to close me up and I'll go on welfare."

Teachers Reach Impasse

KINGSTON (CP) — Negotiations between the province and representatives of teachers at 23 Ontario community colleges are still at an impasse, a spokesman for the teachers said Wednesday.

Negotiations broke off at midnight Monday night with the teachers rejecting arbitration.

"We won't go to a stacked arbitration and they (the Ontario Council of Regents) won't give us a proper one," said Bruce McColl, president of the academic branch of the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

Mr. McColl said negotiations broke down on the question of teaching workloads and job security. The teachers offered to reduce the colleges' final wage offer by $1 million in return for concessions on workloads and job security.

The offer tabled Monday by the government would have increased the top salary scale for the teachers to $19,620 from $16,900 effective Sept. 1. The council also offered to increase merit pay scales.

The total offer would increase the average salary by more than $3,100. An additional lump sum of $275 was offered to full-time teachers. Similar adjustments were offered college councillors and librarians as well as fringe benefit improvements insurance plans.

The total offer by the colleges would have cost an additional $15 million, Mr. McColl said. The teachers' offer would have reduced that cost to $14 million.

Presbyterians Decline

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Membership in the Presbyterian Church in Canada declined by 2,900 in 1973 to a total of 176,367, the church's general assembly meeting here this week, was told Wednesday.

Statistics also showed the number of congregations dropped by 14 to 1,057 but the number of Presbyterian ministers increased by 13 last year to 933.

Rev. J. C. Cooper of Toronto was appointed by the meeting as general secretary of the church's new board of ministry, effective Jan. 1.

The board was established to co-ordinate personnel services, counsel students and ministers and plan for continuing education of all church workers.

For the last three years Mr. Cooper has been director of personnel at church headquarters in Toronto.

Dairymen Demand More

TORONTO (CP) — The National Farmers Union sent a telegram Wednesday to Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan and Prime Minister Trudeau demanding an immediate $3-a-hundredweight increase in the price paid to industrial milk producers.

Producers receive varying amounts across the country; but the Ontario average, including a federal subsidy, is about $7.56 a hundredweight.

The telegram, sent by NFU vice-president Walter Miller, said the price must be raised to reverse the trend away from milk production.

Mr. Miller said rising farming costs make the increase vital.

Summer Jobs Lack Students

HAMILTON (CP) — Summer jobs for students are going begging here because there are not enough people to fill them, Grant Corbett, Canada manpower student officer, said Wednesday.

"We don't want people coming to us at the end of the summer saying 'I tried but couldn't get a job' because that's just not true," he said in an interview.

He said there are vacancies in industry, construction, sales and clerical work and that few students have registered for them.

Helpful Hints Make Shopping 'Fun'

Dear Ann Landers: I've been interested in the letters describing rudeness to sales clerks and the virus. Having been a clerk in a supermarket for 10 years, I have drawn up a list of "helpful hints" to make shopping more palatable for everyone.

(1) Don't use a basket. Push to the checkout line with your arms loaded with groceries and ask if you can go ahead of the others because you are dropping things. They will feel sorry for you and say yes.

(2) When there's a big order and ahead of you, put your few items on the belt and get them inched in with the other order. The checker won't mind relling after she's rung them up together. It heats up the monotony of her day.

(3) After your bag is packed full with all the items on the bottom, ask the bagger if he'd mind fishing out that can of coffee at the bottom and putting it in a separate bag because it's for your sister.

(4) Wait until the checker has 37 cents worth of change and a few bills in her hand and then tell her you just happen to have a load of pennies you want to get rid of.

(5) Wait until all the groceries are rung up and then start digging in your purse for your checkbook and pen. When you can't find your pen, ask if anyone in the line can lend you theirs. People love to do these small favors. It makes them feel useful.

(6) Wait until the busiest hours of the day (11:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.) and telephone the store department and ask if they have pickled herring. It will give the butcher an opportunity to walk the length of the store and back. He'll love it! Everyone needs exercise.

(7) When you are stocked senseless by the high prices of some of the items, complain loud and clear to the checker. After all, you can't get to the people who set the prices, but the checker is right there. A perfect target—so let her have it, with both barrels.—Veteran of Supermarket Tangles

Dear Vet: While you letter might be amusing to many, I can see why checkout people grow old before their time. I marvel at their saintly patience. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: When I read the letter from the teenage girl with epilepsy, I knew I had to speak my piece. I've had it

Step Up Talks With Captors

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is stepping up efforts to secure the release of two Canadians still held captive by Ethiopian guerrillas, an external affairs department spokesman said Wednesday.

"It is really stepping up the pressure at the present time," the spokesman said. But negotiations were too delicate to be commented on publicly.

Grant Wyatt, a 26-year-old pilot with Canwest Aviation Ltd. of Calgary, was released Tuesday after about one week as a prisoner of the Eritrean Liberation Front. He was flying a chartered the two helicopters.

The external affairs spokesman said a Canadian embassy official in Addis Ababa is on his way to Asmara to meet Mr. Wyatt, who was released nearby.

He said information gained mainly from American embassy sources suggests Mr. Wyatt and the nurse were seized to provide medical help to the guerrillas.

The Calgary pilot was apparently on his way to pick up the five prisoners taken in March when he was captured. They had been taken between Tenoe, and the guerrillas before Mr Wyatt's flight.

While he was on his way to the rendezvous, the guerrilla attacked a United States missionary hospital, shooting on nurse and capturing another, a external affairs spokesman said last week. Mr. Wyatt had been forced to fly to an unknown location with the nurse and the guerrillas.

Berton Proposes Public Inquiry

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — A public meeting called to protest the May 11 police drug raid on the Landmark Motor Inn in nearby Fort Erie approved a resolution Wednesday requesting a public investigation of the incident.

Writer Pierre Berton, who presented the resolution, said the inquiry should be conducted by an independent public body and not by the police commission.

He told about 1,000 persons at "the police acted with inefficiency and callousness."

Judy LaMarsh, former federal Liberal cabinet minister, said "the uniform is to protect all of us, but the police should not consider themselves to have carte blanche."

In the raid by 53 Niagara regional police and RCMP, 115 hippies were detained and seven men and 36 women were stripped and searched.

"How did the police think that each woman was carrying drugs in her natural orifices?" asked Miss LaMarsh in her speech, read to the meeting by Pamela Walker, a Niagara Falls lawyer.

Al Sweeny, lawyer for the Canadian Civil Liberties Association and chairman of the meeting, said:

"What might have been an search for unlawful drugs became an exercise in gratuitous voyeurism."

In the raid police seized six ounces of marijuana, charged four persons with illegal possession of narcotics and laid four charges against three others.

Miss LaMarsh said she hated to see the officers involved disciplined fully and fully that public disciplining of their officers or the police commission itself.

"If it is the fault of the law, let us clamor for its change," said Miss LaMarsh's statement.

The raid was carried out under a section of the federal Narcotics Control Act that permits police to enter without a warrant a public place they reasonably suspect to contain illegal drugs and search any occupants.

Earlier, the meeting approved, with some dissenters who felt it did not go far enough, a resolution presented by Shirley Gibson, a Port Colborne, Ont., teacher.

Hunt on for Tourists

LONDON (CP) — A group of Ontario tour operators, fearful that rising British and West European fares this week, seeking ideas on how best to attract more tourists to the province.

Ontario tourism minister Claude Bennett, who heads the group, says the cost of transatlantic air travel is the main problem facing Canadian tour operators seeking to compete with Spain, Portugal, Greece and other popular European tourist spots.

"But we are working on the idea that British and German tourists, for instance, don't want to keep going back and forth to the same old European places," he added in an interview Wednesday. "That's why we think we can make Canada a general and Ontario in particular, a popular alternative for people who can afford to fly here."

Bennett said others in the group, who left today for Frankfurt to meet German tour operators, emphasized that it wasn't to come at each aspect in aiming the campaign at well-to-do Europeans.

Woodcock Re-elected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Leonard Woodcock was re-elected president of the 1.5-million-member United Auto, Workers by acclamation at the union's international convention Wednesday.

He was named to a three-year term instead of the traditional two years. A resolution passed Tuesday extended the term, enabling Woodcock to head the UAW bargaining team in 1976 when Ford and Chrysler, Woodcock, 63, will be eligible to seek re-election at the next UAW convention in 1977, under UAW regulations which bar members from seeking office after the age of 65.

Wanted: Opposition For PM

MONTREAL (CP) — The Mount Royal Progressive Conservative Association admitted Wednesday it is having a tough time finding a candidate to oppose Prime Minister Trudeau in his home riding of Montreal Mount Royal in the July 8 federal election.

"We've had several prospects, but they have all dropped out one by one," a spokesman said. "Time is running out and we hope to have a definite contender shortly."

Reginald Dawson, mayor of the Town of Mount Royal, a Montreal suburb, became the newest non-contender Wednesday when he declined an invitation to run.

"I'm just too busy being mayor and dealing with other related duties to seek the seat," he said in an interview from Winnipeg, where he is attending a meeting of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.

Nominations in the riding close June 17.

Socreds Being Seduced?

EDMONTON (CP) — Social Credit Leader Real Caouette brought his campaign for the July 8 election to Alberta Wednesday, urging supporters in this once-powerful Social Credit bastion not to be seduced by the lure of voting Progressive Conservative to defeat Liberals.

He told an airport news conference that one of the problems he faces is the strategy opposed by some Social Credit-Social Creditor than be elected with any other party."

THE INTELLIGENCER, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1974

"Don't play politics with the other parties," he advised Social Creditors as he faced television cameras here.

"The Conservatives have nothing to offer us.

"I would rather be treated as a R...was the same message he spoke Tuesday night in Fort Langley, B.C., when he spoke to about 150 supporters in Fraser Valley West riding, held by Social Credit from 1953 until 1968. He accept during the 1968 Conservative sweep of John Diefenbaker.

PM Proposes Mortgage Plan

By STEPHEN SCOTT
The CANADIAN PRESS

A Liberal policy designed to get mortgages into the hands of the lower and middle-income families was granted Wednesday with a highly-critical "big deal" from Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

The new policy was announced in Vancouver by Prime Minister Trudeau and Mr. Stanfield digressed from a prepared federal election speech in Newfoundland to criticize it.

Mr. Trudeau's program basically calls for regional and local ceilings on mortgages that would have an effect on the size of a down payment.

The idea is to make lower-cost housing available at a low down payment while expensive housing would require a high payment.

Regional ceilings would range up to $44,900 in Toronto and Vancouver to $31,500 in smaller centres.

Houses that cost more than such ceilings will require a 25-per-cent down payment under the Liberal proposal. Those under the ceilings would get mortgages covering 95 per cent of the cost up to $31,500 and 75 per cent of the cost above that up to the ceiling.

In Ottawa, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) sources said Mr. Trudeau could enforce this policy over about 10 per cent of the housing markets, that covered by mortgages guaranteed under the National Housing Act.

Mr. Trudeau talked of regulations covering NHA mortgages in Vancouver but sources in Ottawa said up to 5 p.m. EDT Wednesday no regulations had been issued.

Mr. Trudeau also said the government asked chartered banks, trust companies, insurance agencies and loan companies to channel all money for low-down payment mortgages into moderately-priced housing.

Mr. Stanfield departed from a prepared speech in Gander, Nfld., to say that people buying these relatively low-priced homes still are going to be hit with interest rates that at present are about 11 or 11¼ per cent.

"Big deal!" he said.

He said the fact that the government had to act to get more money into the mortgage market is proof there has been a tight money policy in Canada, despite denials of this from Finance Minister John Turner.

Third Parties Called 'Nuisance'

QUEBEC (CP) — Postmaster-General André Ouellet said Wednesday that third parties on the federal political scene are "unique things and rules" for federal election campaigns, of all things.

Speaking at the opening of the Liberal Quebec East, Mr. Ouellet said third parties have had nothing tangible to the governing of the in 12 years.

"How can one administrate effectively when there are also your own two pearls?" he asked.

Daisy Dave Wants More Tax Credits

TORONTO (CP) — A trail of fallen daisy petals leading to his hotel room from the elevator provided a fittingly symbolic end to David Lewis's fifth campaign day here Wednesday.

The daisy has become the New Democratic Party leader's personal symbol ever since Prime Minister Trudeau labelled him Daisy Dave before Parliament was dissolved last month. The nickname has stuck and his supporters have made the most of it.

Mr. Lewis and his wife Sophie, who joined him Wednesday for the rest of the campaign leading to the July 8 vote, were given lots of large daisies at a party workers' rally in Lakeshore, the west Toronto seat held in the last House by NDP member Terry Grier.

The volunteer workers also welcomed the Lewises with a parody of "Daisy, Daisy, Give Me Your Answer Do," which began:

"David, David, give us your answers, do, to make ends meet, we don't know what to do."

Mr. Lewis had at least one answer earlier in the day—a system of tax credits designed to help low-and middle-income groups cope with the cost of living.

As outlined, the tax credits would be in the form of reduced payroll deductions and would have their greatest effect at the low end of the pay scale.

The estimated cost of such a program in 1974 would be about $1.5 billion, he said.

Artist's Conception of Proposed Industrial-commercial complex Near Wallbridge Road - Highway 401 Cloverleaf

Manor Settlement Likely

About 100 public workers at Hastings Manor Home for the Aged are expected to support tonight the offer made by the County regarding wage increases, improved vacation and vacation pay.

Rod Fisher, president of Local 1133, Canadian Union of Public Workers, said this morning he expects that the offer made during a meeting yesterday between five union officials, five county representatives and a negotiator from Toronto will be accepted.

He said it was too early to outline exact terms made by the county.

On Tuesday of this week the 97 members of the union, consisting of nursing assistants, housekeeping aids, engineers, orderlies and cleaner turned down a county offer of 18c an hour increase for each year of a two year contract.

CUPE is seeking $1.50 an hour increase over a two-year contract, as well as an improved vacation setup and vacation pay.

Highest wage at the home is $2.35 for a graduate nurse, said Douglas Lindsay, national representative for CUPE.

Sunday Climaxes Year for Albert

This Sunday will be the big day of the year for Albert College students.

Their annual graduation ceremonies will take place at 2 p.m. at the college, preceded at 11 a.m. by the baccalaureate service at Bridge Street United Church. Rev. George Ward, minister of the church, will preach the sermon.

The graduates' banquet will be held in Ackerman Hall Saturday evening at 6 p.m., followed by a dance. Mayor Ronald Jeffery and Hastings PC candidate, Jack Ellis, will be in attendance.

The college has completed a successful year, says its headmaster, Lorne Sherrick.

Enrolment was 126 and the staff comprises 13 teachers.

Next year the college will make a drive to enrol more pupils in the junior grades, 7 through 9, it is also looking for an increase in its day pupil enrolment.

The college placed first in the Belleville area in the University of Waterloo mathematics contest, winning the Descartes Mathematical award with almost double the marks of the runner-up school.

The college chaplain, Rev. Ronald Schisdel has accepted a call to First Dale Baptist Church in the city and will be leaving the college. He will be succeeded by United Church minister Rev. David T. Lyon, now serving a charge in Waterloo.

Industrial-commercial Complex for Northwest

The Intelligencer

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JUNE 6, 1974

An industrial-commercial complex involving more than 200,000 square feet of area is being planned for the Wallbridge Rd.-Highway 401 cloverleaf area just outside the city.

The plan, which consists of a four-stage development program is being handled by Albion Holdings (Belleville) Ltd.

In the plans will be: a 12-module industrial building consisting of 2,500 square feet per module, a 15-module industrial building consisting of 2,500 square feet per module, a 125,00-square-foot warehousing facility of 5,000-square-foot modules and a two-storey commercial office building with banking and restaurant facilities.

The industrial modules can be rented by tenants in multiples of 2,500 square feet to suit their particular needs, while the warehouse can be rented in 5,000-square-foot modules. Basis of rental is a gross lease arrangement with only a fixed rent, light and heat to be paid.

Geoffrey Watson, Albion Holdings developer, said no definite date has been set for the "putting the shovel to ground. We've expecting to start work sometime early this summer for rental in the fall.

Said Mr. Watson: "What we are looking for is smaller businesses doing such work as assembly, manufacturing and warehousing. Any kind of tenant interested in maintaining a high standard of maintenance. This could be anyone from a sheetmetal business to a printing shop."

The first stage to be built will be the proposed 12-unit complex overlooking Highway 401. This will be followed by the 15-unit complex, the warehouse and then the office building.

An interesting facet of the complex is the naming of the various sections which reflects Mr. Watson's background in British Guiana (Guyana).

The Kanaku first stage, consisting of a total of 30,000 square feet of industrial space facing on Highway 401, is a Guyanese namesake range.

The second stage, the 15-module building, taking up 37500 square feet of industrial space facing on Wallbridge Road, is called the Alliki, which is a British Guyanese timber plantation at one time owned by Mr. Watson.

The 125,000 - square - foot warehouse, made up of 5,000-square-foot-modules officering both heated and refrigerated units, is called the Rupununi, which is the name given to the northern savannah grassland which sweeps through the country.

The two-storey commercial office building facing northwest overlooking the Highway 401-Wallbridge Rd. cloverleaf is called the Demerara, a name given to a county in Guyana famous for its rum.

This building will include banking and restaurant facilities on access the entire plaza. Also included in the basement of this building will be a swimming pool, steam rooms for use by the tenants of Albion Plaza and their employees.

There will also be a fully furnished foyer with a reception and information desk staffed by Albion Plaza to serve the entire complex.

The city's Industrial Commissioner, Fred Bemis, said: "The complex is a good one. It helps to provide needed space for businesses that want to go there.

"This is the type of facility required in this area. Businesses coming to see me the working space, office space and warehousing. The location is good, being close to Highway 401," said Mr. Bemis.

Roblin Joins PC Inflation Chorus

Once upon a time there was an English king called Canute who hopelessly ordered the sea to roll back.

These times, Prime Minister Trudeau's stances on inflation remind him of Canute of the ancient monarch, Duff Roblin told Hastings riding Conservatives here last night.

The prime minister once claimed inflation was licked. More recently he's been saying his Liberal government could do absolutely zero to given time, said Mr. Roblin.

"Every time that Mr. Trudeau tells us that inflation is going down it comes a little further up the beach. I think he ought to take a lesson from King Canute," he said.

The one-time Manitoba premier (1958-67) — the Conservative candidate in Peterborough against State Secretary Hugh Faulkner — was in Belleville to help prime the kitchen of the party's election campaign in the constituency.

He came as keynote speaker at a rally for Jack Ellis — MP in the last parliament — which enlivened Centennial Secondary School with band music, balloons and the presence of prominent area and provincial Conservatives.

The current federal government including Mr. Ellis now is taking totally to the contrary to the actual recommendation came several months ago to Ottawa, and the recent weeks he has been organizing his bid to retain the seat.

Mr. Roblin's visit also was used as an opportunity to officially open the Ellis Belleville committee headquarters in the city's Front St., opposite Bridge St. Before officiating the occasion, Mr. Roblin cut a red ribbon at the office entrance before going on to CBS to do a live bit speech, the bulk of which dealt with what he called the "scourge" of inflation.

Unchecked inflation is the "biggest menace to the well-being of the average citizen" he said.

The government, while claiming it can solve the problem also blames rising costs on international prices.

"On the one hand they say we've solved it or we could have solved it. On the other, they say we can't solve it because it's international prices and there's nothing we can do about them."

But government spending and taxing policies are the "most inflationary force," said Mr. Roblin.

"Federal spending is rising faster than the wages of two-thirds of Canadians, or their country's ability to produce wealth.

"What is in effect, inflation feeding in great measure on the spending of the federal government itself."

Federal spending during 1974 could total more than $38 billion— more than doubled in six years when the Trudeau government came to power.

Even allowing for oil subsidies and other aids "the explosive nature of federal spending must give us to pause," said Mr. Roblin.

Controlling such spending to "reasonable proportions" would strike a blow against inflation that would reflect throughout the whole economy. A priority would be to control government spending.

The 90-day freeze proposed to the Conservative prices and incomes controls program would be a curtain-raising "electric shock that would serve as notice we mean business," said Mr. Roblin.

A freeze would be a steadying influence, particularly for workers not organized in unions, he believed.

No one has been hit harder by inflation that farmers, said Mr. Roblin. But agriculture, once taken for granted, now is being appreciated in a different light under the pressure of population and needed supplies.

It is in the national interest to change attitudes to farming and encourage agricultural production. Farmers must be helped and encouraged to keep the family farm vigorous and alive."

Among those on the platform were Conservative Senator Richard Potter and Charles Rollins, MPP Hastings.

The Big Sendoff

Campaign of Conservative Jack Ellis in Hastings riding got official sendoff with music and applause at Centennial Secondary School Wednesday night. Big figure at kickoff was Duff Roblin, (right) former Manitoba premier now running as Conservative candidate in Peterborough.

Trudeau Called 'Divider'

Prime Minister Trudeau has tried to divide Canada and this could be the most important election ever faced, Jack Ellis told fellow Hastings riding Conservatives Wednesday night.

The Liberals were promoting leadership as a commodity, said Mr. Ellis as he officially launched his bid for re-election at Centennial Secondary School.

"The prime minister himself tried to divide this country on language alone. He tried and was unable to do it," said Mr. Ellis.

The government also had endeavored to stop people producing — at a time of world shortages.

"The final insult" to the people's integrity" has been failure to act on changes in the Unemployment Insurance Commission a frequent target of Mr. Ellis in the past year.

This week Bryce Mackasey, the minister responsible for UIC legislation, was later left the Cabinet, was reinstated by Mr. Trudeau.

The Cabinet was reinstated

"Does that sound like change?" asked Mr. Ellis.

Air Cadet CO Retires

After eight years as commanding officer of 608 Duke of Edinburgh Squadron Royal Canadian Air Cadets, Captain Lorne Foley last night announced he was retiring as of June 30.

New commanding officer of the squadron will be Lt. (Lt. (Tom) Riley who assumes the post July 1. He becomes captain when he takes over as commanding officer.

The announcement was made by Brig.-Gen. Robert Hirsch, base commander of CFB Trenton. This followed his inspection at the 12th annual inspection of the squadron last night at the Armory. The cadets are sponsored by Duke of Edinburgh Unit 210, ANAF.

Capt. Foley, who has been with the squadron for a total of 18 years, spent his first two years as commanding officer.

He will continue to have sponsorship with the squadron and will be on a supplementary list with CFB Trenton.

But, in the main, he said he hopes to take it easy and as his wife, Iris, puts it, will have more time to spend with his daughter, Meredith 7. Capt. Foley expressed his appreciation to the officers, the cadets and to his wife for their help. He was presented with many gifts of appreciation.

During the ceremonies last night, trophies and awards were presented in the steamy Flight Sergeant Terry Wheelock received the Bill Brown Memorial Trophy and the ANAF Citizenship and Youth Award as well as an award for six years of perfect attendance.

Fl. Sgt. Bill Johnston received an award for seven years of perfect attendance as well as the A. Rasmussen Memorial Trophy.

Other awards were: For six years perfect attendance, Fl Sgt. Dan Glover; for four years perfect attendance, WO 2 Bill Kirkman, Sgt. Jim McArdle, Sgt. Jim Carley and WO2 Bill Misner.

For three years perfect attendance, Sgt. T. Calbary, Cpl. Rene Gibson, Cpl Rod Murphy, Cpl Ted Arbacle and Cpl. Eric Miller.

For two year perfect attendance Cpl Robin Drummond, LAC Don Fish, LAC Karl Clement Cpl Wayne Nault, Cpl. Allan Stewart, Mark Charlton and David Buckles.

For one year perfect attendance, Jim Agapas, Peter Edwards, Allan Irish, Brian Irish, Steve Kaye, Dave Mayo, Jeff Morrow, Dave Semenuk, Kevin Smith Mike Webster and LAC Bill Elliot.

Awarded the adjutant's trophy was F/Sgt. Jim McArdle while Cpl. M. Charlton was presented the Drill Instructor's Trophy.

Chosen Instructor of the year was Donald Irish while Capt. Foley was chosen officer of the year.

The Best First Year Cadet Trophy was given to AC Steve Kaye and LAC L. Fleming was awarded the Range Officer's Trophy.

F/Sgt. Dan Gove was awarded the Commanding Officers Eagle Award for Excellence by Capt. Foley assisted by Brig.Gen. Hirsch.

Bidding Farewell

The 12th annual inspection of 608 Duke of Edinburgh Squadron Royal Canadian Air Cadets was held last night. But a surprise was in store for those attending following the inspection and awards presentations. This was the announcement of Capt. Lorne Foley's retirement as commanding officer of the squadron, effective June 30th. While Air Cadet Steve Kay presents flowers to Mrs. Foley, Capt. Foley (middle) watches with daughter, Meredith and Lieut. Tom Riley. Lt. Riley becomes the new commanding officer of the squadron.

Potter Says Ottawa Not Helpful

Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter Wednesday night charged the federal government with financially giving Ontario "the short end of the stick."

When he was provincial health minister— until earlier this year — he said he was "frustrated" by lack of cooperation from Ottawa which refused funds when his ministry was under financial constraints.

He was speaking at the Conservative campaign Kickoff for Jack Ellis in Centennial Secondary School.

Ontario was deprived of about $250 million "because they didn't agree with some of the programs we were instituting. At the same time the federal government was recommending the plans be adopted in other provinces and was prepared to pay for them, said the Quinte MPP.

Now, in a different portfolio he finds Ottawa is "playing the same tune..." said Dr. Potter.

Ottawa is depriving Ontario of $11 million for juvenile training schools' programs.

He said he was "delighted to participate in the present federal election.

Parking Costs More

It is going to cost more for downtown street parking.

New parking meter heads, ordered several months ago by the city parking authority, will bring parking rates in the downtown area and the new rates, effective immediately are double the previous rate.

The new rate is 10 cents per half hour for the first or a full hour. The meter heads will accept all silver coins up to a quarter.

The downtown area in which the new meter heads are being installed include Front Street, and the sections of Bridge Street, Campbell Street and Victoria Avenue, between Front and Pinnacle Streets.

Stereo Stolen

Thieves stole an eight-track stereo and two speakers from a car that was parked on Front Street near the Park Theatre some time early last evening.

Holoway, Goyer Power the Gems

Sonny Holoway and Neil Goyer teamed up to push Belleville Gems past Consecon, 14-5, in Prince Edward North Shore Softball League play at Ameliasburg, Wednesday.

Holoway blanked Consecon on a three-hit, 13-strikeout performance. He didn't walk a man.

Goyer provided all the support his hurler needed, pounding a sixth-inning solo home run to spoil an excellent effort by the losers' Art Keller.

There was little to choose between Holoway and Keller over the first five innings. They were waging a tight duel until Goyer delivered in the sixth.

Keller finished up with a neat four-hitter. He relired 18 on third strikes and walked three.

Bernie Sagriff, Harold Babcock and Harvey Wilcox were the only other Gems to reach Keller for safeties.

The Gems' hitting was taken care of by Wayne Clarke, Bob McLeod and Larry Herrington with one each.

In the other league game Wednesday, Pelmyer's Pasta took a 9-0 win by default over Bay Boy Service.

Trailing 12-3 in the fifth inning, O'Brien's had its lineup trimmed to just eight players when Sam Morgan injured an ankle while sliding into second base.

Parker's became the first team to log five wins and in so doing, took over at the top of the standings with 10 points, two more than Consecon and Bayview Orchards.

Ellis Juniors, CFB In Exhibition Series

Cpl. Joe Yeomans didn't say so but it's obvious from his observations. Tuesday, that the Canadian Forces Base Trenton softball club coach feels his team's strength lies in over all balance.

"Outstanding players," he responded to a query, "they're all outstanding."

Yeomans and team manager Col. N.S. Freeman will lead the CFB team into a weekend exhibition series with Belleville Ellis Juniors of the Quinte Softball League.

The teams are scheduled to hook up at Alemite Park, Saturday, at 2 p.m. with two games set for the CFB, Trenton diamond, Sunday afternoon. The games at the air station will be played on No. 1 diamond which is part of the sports facilities located South of Highway 2, through the main gate.

Sunday's first game is called for a 1 p.m. start with Game 2 to follow.

At least two of the CFB players are well known in Belleville.

Part of the three-man pitching staff, Jim Nicholls is one of the city's top five-pin bowlers. He won the coveted Mr. Bowling title, in April, at the Bowl-O-Drome.

Shortstop Frank Tanner was with the Trenton Auger Men's Wear entry in the Commercial League, in 1973.

"We'll be getting all three of our pitchers into the action in these games," offered Yeomans.

Other members of the all-right-handre pitching corps are Ted Baker and Larry Sutcliffe.

Ellis Junior coaches Russ Soule and Don Wood will use the games to get a good look at rookies Kelvin Pope and Bob Campbell, outfielders; infielder - outfielder Grant McKenna and third sacker Ken Vos.

Pitchers Gery McMurray and John Sprackett didn't see much action for us last season, and they'll also get plenty of work on the weekend," said Wood.

Wood is looking forward to the exhibition series because "it will be good for our first year players."

The Ellis coaches will use the three-game set to give their 16-year men some added experience.

JIM NICHOLLS

Lockhart at it Again

Norm Lockhart has done it again. The stocky right-hander picked up another win for Post Office last night in Industrial Softball League action.

His victims this time, were the Independents, who fell 6-1 to the West division leaders.

Lockhart fired four-hit ball, giving up two walks. Nine batters looked at third strikes. The ailing arm hung up a total of 69 in 47 innings this season.

Jim Northey was the opposing hurler, giving up 10 hits to the Postie attack. He issued seven free passes while failing to strike out a batter.

Gord "Soup" Campbell led the attack with a double and single, with Ron Marriot contributing a pair of base hits. Randy Burke, Gord St. Louis, Barry Reid, Steve Tribewell, Bill Leitch, and Lockhart each had one single to round out the hitting.

Ken Bertrand managed a double and single off Lockhart, with Doug Boomhower and Paul Thompson bagging a single each.

In a game played at Sir MacKenzie Bowell School, The Intelligencer picked up its first win of the season, topping Constellation, 16-7.

John Edwards started for The Intell and got credit for the win in going four innings. He allowed three runs and four hits in his first pitching stint of the year, fanning four and walking one.

Reg Pelkron fired the final three frames, giving up four hits, and four runs. He walked a pair and fanned three.

John Cole, Tom Bridle, and John Holloway each worked on the Constellation rubber, with the trip allowing 13 retail hits. They walked nine and whiffed five.

Terry Hiddleston led the Printers with a grand slam home run and single, with Tony Goncalves and Fred Sickle each contributing three base hits.

Edwards had a double and two singles in three trips to the plate, with Glynn Reynolds hitting for one on each.

John Thompson had a four-bagger and single for the losers, with Mike Callaghan striking a double and single.

Ron Mitchell, Steve Gilchrist, Bellis and Ed Cain each had a single to round out the hitting.

In another game, Brooks Bond rolled to a 14-1 win over Mead Johnson.

Sanity Returns to Cleveland

Players Supply the Fireworks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The fans left the fireworks to the baseball team in Cleveland Wednesday night.

Home runs rerounded at Municipal Stadium and the result was a 9-3 Cleveland Indians victory over Texas Rangers in relative peace and quiet.

"I really liked it when the fans stood up and cheered our boys when they hit their homers," said Cleveland manager Ken Aspromonte. "That's the kind of fans we want to come out and see us. They can enjoy our success with us. Those others, I don't ever want to see around."

It was a far more civilized scene than Tuesday night when their game was torn apart by a riot. Hundreds of fans, apparently tipped up by "10-cent beer night," threw debris and flooded the field, chasing the players to shelter. The Indians held to forfeit the game.

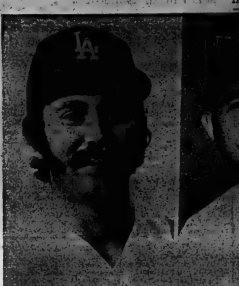
On Wednesday night, only about 8,000 people showed up—about 7,000 less than Tuesday night's audience. They were told by the public address announcer that fines would be levied if anyone ran on the playing field. And they cheered the announcement.

There were mostly cheers from then on, as Oscar Gamble and Dave Duncan hit three-run homers for the Indians in a seven-run sixth inning.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles edged Kansas City Royals 5-4, Oakland As blasted Detroit Tigers 9-1, California Angels turned back Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, Chicago White Sox stopped New York Yankees 7-6 in 15 innings, and Boston Red Sox defeated Minnesota Twins 5-1.

The Indians collected all their runs in the first seven innings with the help of homers. Charlie Spikes and George Hendrick hit solo blasts in the second inning and Duffy Dyer hit a basses-empty homer in the seventh along with the shots of Gamble and Duncan to give Cleveland its final margin.

The Rangers scored on Jim Spencer's solo homer in the second, Jeff Burroughs singled home Cesar Tovar in the third and Jim Fregosi cored on a fielder's choice in the seventh.



Mark Belanger's bloop double with two out in the ninth inning scored Frank Baker from first base, capping a three-run rally that lifted Baltimore over Kansas City.

Gene Tenace blasted a 451-foot grand-slam home run in the fifth inning, leading Oakland over Detroit. His seventh homer of the season came off rookie Dave Lemanczyk.

Joe Lahoud blasted a two-run homer with two out in the ninth inning, giving California the victory over Milwaukee.

Jorge Orta's one-out double in the 15th inning scored Dick Allen from second base and gave Chicago its win over New York.

Luis Tiant (7-4) scattered 10 hits and Rick Burleson knocked in the winning run with a single in the sixth inning, pacing Boston past Minnesota.

Mike Marshall — Doug Rau

Dodgers Shade Bucs

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It didn't bother Doug Rau to see Richie Hebner heading for first base with Pittsburgh's first hit after 7 1-3 no-hit innings Wednesday night as much as it did to see Richie Zisk crossing the plate with the Pirates' first run.

"I wasn't really concerned about the hit, although I thought about a no-hitter in the fifth inning," the Los Angeles Dodgers left-hander said. "The hit didn't get me down as much as the run since it made it a one-run game again."

Rau allowed two more singles before giving way to relief ace Mike Marshall in the ninth with the Dodgers on top 2-1. And after coming within five outs of a no-hitter, the second-year harder didn't even figure in the decision. Marshall yielded a game-tying single to Zisk and then became the winning pitcher when Steve Garvey homered leading off the bottom of the ninth, giving the Dodgers a 3-2 victory.

Elsewhere in the National League, Philadelphia Phillies rocked off Atlanta Braves 4-2, St. Louis Cardinals downed San Francisco Giants 4-1, Montreal Expos trounced Houston Astros 8-3 and San Diego Padres edged Chicago Cubs 4-3.

Rau had allowed only three baserunners—two on walks and one on an error—before Hebner lined a clean single to right field with one out in the eighth. Zisk had drawn a leadoff walk and moved to second on a grounder.

Garvey bit his 12th home run of the season on the first pitch from Jim Rooker in the bottom of the ninth. Ron Cey homered for Los Angeles in the seventh.

Mike Schmidt's three-run homer, his 12th, and Bob Boone's solo shot produced a four-run third inning that gave Jim Lonborg all the support he needed to keep the Phillies onehalf game ahead of runner-up St. Louis in the National League East.

Schmidt's throwing error helped Atlanta to an unearned run in the second inning and Dave Johnson homered in the fourth.

Lou Brock and Tom Heintzelman cracked three hits apiece for the Cardinals and Brock stole his 33rd and 34th bases of the season while Sonny Siebert gained his sixth victory with last-out relief help from Orlando Pena.

Siebert lost his bid for a third consecutive shutout when the Giants scored an unearned run on right fielder Reggie Smith's sixth-inning throwing error. Smith, however, drove home two runs with a sacrifice fly and a double.

Willie Davis, Bob Bailey and Hal Breeden drove in first-inning runs for Montreal against Claude Osteen and Mike Jorgensen and Jim Gosger drove in two runs apiece in the last two innings. Osteen was chased in the second while Mike Torrez pitched eight innings for the Expos before letting Chuck Taylor finish up.

Fred Kendall doubled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth for the Padres.

Indians Protest Decision

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians have filed a formal protest against their forfeiture of the night's American League baseball game to Texas Rangers.

With the score tied 5-5, the Rangers were awarded the game by umpire Nestor Chylak in the 9th inning because fans poured on to the field and engaged in battle with the ballplayers.

"While we deplore the incidents which led to the forfeiture, we also feel that there was no warning given to the fans during the course of the game by the umpires that any continuation of interruptions of play would lead to a declaration of a forfeiture of the game," said Indians' general manager Phil Seghi in a telegram to league president Lee MacPhail.

The telegram also stated that the umpires should have made "a more concerted effort to have our policemen clear the field so that our game could be resumed."

MacPhail said he would not comment on the protest until all the facts are in writing and he has studied the matter.

"That's fantastic," Rangers' manager Billy Martin said, when told of the protest. "They can protest all they want. They wouldn't win it. They wouldn't win it in a court of law."

Ted Bonda, the Indians' executive vice-president said he had no plans to discontinue the night promotions scheduled. Many persons blamed drunken youngsters for starting the melee.

MacPhail issued a statement Wednesday that all clubs would have to notify the league offices in advance of all such promotions.

Hudson County A Starter

NEW YORK (AP) — Hudson County might not be the winner of Saturday's Belmont Stakes, but he will be the pacesetter, says trainer Skip Sheoff.

"Hudson County will be on the lead," Sheoff said Wednesday of the speedy colt. "His style dictates it."

The Robert Cohen-owned colt was expected to be entered today for the $125,000-added Belmont Stakes along with eight other three-year-olds including John Olin's Canonnade, winner of the Kentucky Derby, and John Galbreath's Linda Current, winner of the Preakness. Canonnade was third in the Preakness and Little Current was fifth in the Derby.

Post time for the 10th running of the 1½-mile final race of the Triple Crown is 3:30 p.m. EDT with television coverage set for 5 p.m.

"I'm happy about his chances," said Shapoff of Hudson County, the Derby runner-up, who usually is on or near the lead but finished eighth in the Preakness.

Dryden States His View

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Ken Dryden, who recently signed a new contract to play for Montreal Canadiens, has opposed president Clarence Campbell's views on the question of violence in the National Hockey League.

In a keynote address to the annual conference of the Ontario Educational Co-Ordinators' Association, Dryden said Wednesday:

"I would initially disagree with Clarence Campbell and his suggestion, at an inquiry into violence in hockey, that the NHL does not condone fighting.

"By its lack of action in the matter, the NHL certainly does condone violence."

Dryden also said the NHL Players' Association is dominated by Toronto lawyer Alan Eagleson and described it as "incapable" of doing anything to rid hockey of the violence tag that has been attached to it.

"Sport is not necessarily" character-building," Dryden said.

Why, then, did he decide to return to the NHL?

"Because I like hockey and it doesn't preclude me from doing a lot of other things I like very much," Dryden said.

2 in 10th Turn Back Hamilton

HAMILTON (CP) — Khichcer scored two unearned runs in the 10th to beat Hamilton 3-1 in the only Ontario Football League game scheduled Wednesday.

Kiech Wagler earned the win, going all the way and allowing two hits and striking out five.

Reg Martin started for Hamilton but he was relieved in the first inning by Wally Dick who went on to strike out 12.

Kitchener put together its two winning runs on Jim Wilkinson's two errors and two Hamilton errors.

Canadian Owns Derby Winner

EPSOM, England (CP) — A Canadian-owned colt, Snow Knight, surprised his owners, paid his backers handsomely and pleased bookies Wednesday when he won the Epsom Derby.

Snow Knight, a 50-to-1 shot, led all the way in winning the first jewel of $214,189 in British's most famous turf event.

The Queen and about 500,000 others saw Snow Knight, three jockey Brian Taylor before the race started, but saw even more of him as the three-year-old led for the entire 1½ miles.

"Of course I'm surprised," said Neil Phillips, 50, a federal corporation lawyer who bought the horse as a yearling for slightly more than $13,000. "It would be ridiculous to say I wasn't.

"I'm just overwhelmed. I don't know what to say."

Phillips bought the horse and gave it to his wife, Sharon, who now is listed as the owner.

"Wasn't it wonderful," said Mrs. Phillips. "And I bet one pound on him, too."

The bookies were happy and one said it was the best Derby ever.

The books made money when 20-to-1 shot Imperial Prince finished second and Giacomotti, a 9-to-2 choice, was third. Nonnalco, the favorite at 2 to 1, was well back in the field as was Canadian-bred Northern Taste, third favorite.

Habs Sign Riseborough

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday the signing of their second amateur draft choice, Doug Risebrough, to a multi-year contract.

Risebrough, 20-year-old native of Guelph, played last year with Kitchener Rangers of the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League. He stands six feet tall and weighs 185 pounds.

Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

CFL Player Contracts Negotiations Come to Halt

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Football League Players' Association halted contract negotiations with league representatives Wednesday night and association president George Reed said no player will report to camp until the proposed two-year agreement is signed by both sides.

In a statement, Reed said negotiations have been continued until the accounting firm of Touche Ross and Co. has an opportunity to review financial information provided to the players by the nine CFL clubs.

Both sides agreed on an independent audit of the books and Touche Ross, a Vancouver-based firm, was appointed.

Negotiations ended after a three hour meeting. No date was set to resume talks.

Reed said he does no believe the players' association is to be blamed for the delay in negotiations, although two clubs are prepared to open preliminary camps this weekend.

"We started Jan. 18 and didn't receive a counter-proposal until May 22," said Reed, who insisted after a meeting in Toronto that the players would not accept the league's position.

Several clubs have said the players' demands, which include a guaranteed minimum salary, more meal money, higher training-camp payments and more money for pre-and post-season games, cannot be met by the league.

Reed's statement was much stronger than comments from the Edmonton Eskimos' general manager, Norm Kimball, based in Calgary.

Kimball said he was not aware negotiations had broken off. He said he had been led to believe negotiating committees would meet within a couple of days.

Reed said here was "no progress" in Wednesday's meeting.

"If there was, I'd probably still be meeting," he said.

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — Greg Pidalski of Stouffville, Ont., shot rounds of 72 and 72 Wednesday to lead the field after four rounds of the 1974 Canadian Professional Golfers' Association tournament players' school competition.

Pidalski took the lead from Michael Daly of Rawdon, Que., who shared top spot after Monday's opening round and was in front after Tuesday's second round.

Scores of 73 and 72 Wednesday dumped Daly into a sixth-place tie with Bob Panasik of Toronto and Ron Kline of Ottawa.

Guidolin Denies Reports

BOSTON (AP) — Harry Sinden, managing director of Boston Bruins, says he will ask the National Hockey League next week to investigate the possibility that other NHL teams talked with former Bruins coach Bep Guidolin about hiring him while he was still with Boston.

Published reports have said Guidolin may be signed in the near future to coach the NHL's new entry, Kansas City.

"No one in the league had the right, or asked permission to talk with Bep while he was under contract with the Bruins," Sinden said. "If they did talk with him before May 1, that was tampering. And I have a feeling he was approached by someone else."

Guidolin, who left the Bruins at the end of this past season because he couldn't get the five-year contract he wanted, has denied that he talked prematurely with other teams.

"Let me tell you this," he said. "No one from Kansas City, or any other club, approached me while I was still with the Bruins."

PELE

Soccer To Honor A Star

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — Pele, the Brazilian soccer ace, will be honored June 13 during opening ceremonies for the 1974 World Cup tournament, organizers announced Wednesday.

The ceremony is the first sanctioned by the International Soccer Federation in honor of a player's achievements in the quadrennial competition. Pele has three World Cup medals.

Pele signed on Brazil's world championship teams in 1958, 1962 and 1970. But he retired from international play this year and will not be competing for Brazil.

Wings Close Gap

Philadelphia Wings moved to within one point of the first-place Rochester Griffins in the National Lacrosse League Wednesday by topping Montreal Quebecois 18-17 in a game marred by a third-period brawl.

In the only other game, the Griffins were held to a 15-15 overtime tie by last-place Syracuse Stingers, before 1,500 fans at Syracuse. The Stingers earned their first point of the season after eight consecutive defeats.

"Sort Yourself Out," Says Referee

By DOUG WALSH
Sports Editor

TRENTON — Before the Bay of Quinte Soccer Association season opened, league officials expressed alarm over the fact the qualified referees were few and far between.

Wednesday evening at Bain Memorial Park here, there were referees by the number.

So many of the players were offering advice to referee Dave Handley, that gentleman left proceedings with Golden Mile Olympics of Belleville and the Trenton Panelas teams in a scoreless deadlock.

About 30 minutes had been played when Handley, harassed by players from both sides on all but a few of the calls he made, finally decided enough was enough.

"That's it," he announced, "sort yourselves out."

Obviously upset over the turn of events, Handley later explained he had "taken enough abuse."

Moments before packing it in, the referee had called the captains aside to caution them about rough play being indulged in by both sides.

It was evident both teams were guilty of having more on their minds than playing soccer.

Zoltan Csaszar, former Bata Braves' star, was a spectator at the match. He offered to take over as referee for the remainder of the contest. His offer was refused.

The final outcome hinges on a decision by the BQSA executive, observed league official Ron Cannoca.

A decision was handed down quickly, BQSA president Peter Crowle said this morning the match will be replayed Monday, June 10 at OSD.

At Warkworth Institution, Parson's Cleaners of Belleville took over at the top of the standings with a 6-0 defeat of the home side.

It was Parson's third win in five starts. The club also has a tie and a point total of seven, one more than Golden Mile, Cobourg Tooy's and Cooney Haulage.

Goalie Rick Hurst recorded his fourth shutout in five games and he had to work for this one. Hurst has allowed only one goal.

Warkworth fell behind from the opening kickoff. Ten seconds into the match, Tom Britton connected for Parsons and before the interval, Ralph Kollars made it 2-0.

Spirited by Hurst's alert play, Warkworth forwards also had the misfortune to find the crossbar and goal posts on three excellent chances.

Kollars, a right winger, crossed the ball to Mark Melus for the third goal and then teamed up with Britton before pulling the trigger for his second counter of the match.

Melus made it 5-0, connecting with a header off a corner kick and Steve Graham rounded out the scoring on a fine individual effort.

Sound games by halfbacks Ron Ludolph and Brian Preston helped stoke the winners' attack and gave support to the defence.

Take That!

Trenton Panelas goalie Angelo Hagiliristou has more than the ball to contend with during goalmouth action following corner kick by Golden Mile Restaurant Olympics' Nick DelGrosso makes life miserable for the leaping goalie. The abbreviated Bay of Quinte Soccer Association match was halted after about 30 minutes of play when referee Dave Handley, tired of harassment from the players, refused to continue. The game will be replayed Monday, June 10, at the Ontario School for the Deaf pitch.

Thurlow Yardmen Lose 5-2

TRENTON — Limited to two runs, with both scores coming in the fourth inning, Thurlow Yardmen dropped a 5-2 Eastern Ontario Baseball Association bantam contest to Trenton State Farm Insurance, Wednesday, at Centennial Park here.

Rick Woodward reached first on a Trenton miscue to lead off the fourth and crossed the plate on Barry Beer's one-out double. Beer scored later while the State Farm squad threw the ball away.

That uprising trimmed the home side's lead to 3-2 but it was all the visitors could muster. Trenton added single runs in each of the fifth and seventh frames to wrap it up.

Left-hander Chris Walsh went the seven-inning distance on a two-hitter to get the win. He struck out 15 and walked one.

Randy Adams started for Thurlow with Gary Badgley finishing up. Between them, they surrendered only five hits but three of them were for extra bases. They fanned 10 and walked three.

First baseman Dennis Baril found his batting eye, hammering a triple and a double for the winners. Marc Charbonneau belted a triple with a single each for Danny Hamilton and Walsh.

For Thurlow, Beer had his double while Bill Sullivan banged a single.

Tuesday night at home, Thurlow dropped a 5-1 decision to Kingston.

Adams, Badgley and Rick Woodward shared the Yardmen pitching, striking out 11 and walking seven.

Dave Chisholm and Ron Landry had the only Thurlow hits off Kingston's Mike Meka who struck out 12 and walked four on the way to the win.

MIAMI (AP) — Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield were named as defendants Wednesday in a $4-million suit filed earlier by Miami Dolphins against the World League players represented by Toronto-Memphis franchise and the dollar contract with Toronto Football League. Its Toronto-Memphis franchise and the dollar contract with Toronto players' agent, Ed Keating.

BYBF, Purinaettes Share the Top Rung

The Purinaettes kept their record in the Belleville and District Ladies Softball League intact, Wednesday, 19-3 downing Quinte Antenna for their fifth consecutive win, good enough for a share of first place in the six-team loop.

In the other contest last night at the Kiwanis, BYBF kept pace by taking their fifth win against one defeat, thumping Robert Lambert Construction by a 14-1 margin.

The Madoc team pounded out 25 hits in their shelling of Quinte Antenna, backing up the nine-hitter by Sandra Fleming and Marg Bateman on their mound.

Jane Bailey led the winners with a double and three singles, with Sue Wright banging a triple and two singles. Rowena Chapman contributed a double and two singles.

Cheryl Kelly had a double and single for the Antenna team, with Miss Flieger adding two singles.

Fleming and Bateman combined for the win, with Fleming firing five of the six innings.She gave up all nine hits and struck out a walking two and striking out the same total. Bateman finished the last frame, giving up no hits, walking none and fanning none.

Nora Flieger started for Quinte, going two innings before bowing nine hits and seven runs. She walked one and fanned none. Aileen Barr went the rest of the way, giving up 13 runs and 14 hits, walking three and whiffing none.

The Yardmen stayed tied for first with the league leaders with a 14-1 win over Lambert, while the Purinaettes gave a game in hand. Sue Mercer led the win, Arbuckle for only four hits. She whiffed eight and walked three.

Sandra Claus absorbed the loss, giving up 19 hits. She walked four and left Barr standing at the plate on third striking.

Donna Preston led the way with three hits for the Yardmen, with Sharon Abrazinsky stroking a home run and single. Judy Haspel connected for a double and single, with Joyce McFarlane and Judy Woodley adding a pair of singles each.

Judy Scanlan had two hits for the losers, with Margie Scanlan doubling and Nancy Birch and Carol Merrill each hitting for one single.

The win was a blessing for the Yardmen, who travel this weekend to Port Colborne for an International Tournament.

Eighteen teams are entered in the tourney, including five from the United States. The Belleville team plays its first game Saturday morning at 9 a.m. against a team from Scarborough.

A bus will leave the Quinte Mall, Friday night at 11, for spectators wishing to go with the team. Price of the bustrip is $5, not including any accommodation.

Stratford Start Good

STRATFORD (CP) — The Stratford Festival's 22nd season, which runs to the end of October, has been launched with more than 40 per cent of its tickets sold.

Bruce Swerdfager, general manager, said this advance ticket sale is about equal to that of last year's festival at this time or year. And despite poor reviews for one of last year's plays — Othello—the festival broke previous box office records.

This year, audiences are being offered a choice of rollicking farce, high Elizabethan romantic love, and—later in the season—history.

On the main festival stage, the program includes:

—The Imaginary Invalid—Moliere's 17th-century farce and satire on hypochondria, directed by Jean Gascon and starring William Hutt as the invalid, and Pat Galloway as the nagging housemaid, Toinette.

—Pericles—Shakespeare's tale of the prince of ancient Tyre who loses his wife and daughter only to recover them years later, then borne down by grief and troubles. Nicholas Pennell stars as Pericles, and Mr. Gascon again directs.

—Love's Labor's Lost—Shakespeare's fairy-tale romance, directed by Michael Bawtree starring Mr. Hutt, Mr. Pennell and Miss Galloway again. It is cast in the popinjay dress style of the 1920s.

—King John—Opening July 23, with Edward Atienza, Douglas Rain, Martha Henry and Powys Thomas, all of whom have important supporting roles in the other plays. This is the story of King John of Magna Carta fame, though it deals with another part of his life.

The production of Love's Labor's Lost, which opens Wednesday night, won praise from most of the theatre critics.

Urjo Kareda of the Toronto Star called it "the best show by him so far this summer." Myron Galloway of the Montreal Star wrote that it is normally a tedious play, but "what has not just seemed tiresome has miraculously disappeared."

Herbert Whittaker of the Toronto Globe and Mail said the play is a sad comedy but the production "teaches us to love Shakespeare's strange wedding of romance and comedy." "Cost leaves Michael Bawtree's production determined to return."

But Dave Billington of the Montreal Gazette, found the production labored and nearly lost, with stilted acting and heavy emphasis on the stylistic mannerisms.

William Glover, Associated Press drama critic, said that of three rueful boo-boos that century aggravated its incongruity, he called the production "one of those rueful boo-boos the critic-historian must report on the best-intentioned artistic efforts."

"Love's Labor's Lost is one of Shakespeare's wordiest plays. Just as Pericles is one of his least ones.

It's a story about a young king of Navarre who swears with three of his courtiers to devote themselves to philosophical studies and avoid women.

A princess of France with three young damsels-in-waiting appear almost immediately on the scene, and the next two hours is given over to their wooing and final separation for a year. . .

The combination of the three players opening this season shows how the Stratford company employs its talent in many roles.

Mr. Hutt, an associate director of the festival, plays the lead in Moliere's farcical and an important supporting role in "Love's Labor's. Mr. Pennell is a Rohki Phillips, the new artistic director who will take over from Jean Gascon Later this season, was reported to have given Mr. Bawtree a hand in the last-minute rehearsals.

Lanky Eccentric Launched Careers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

In 1955, a new gallery opened in Lawder Lake, Ont., climbed two flights of stairs in a dingy midtown Toronto building with a portfolio of paintings under his arm.

Douglas Duncan, proprietor of the Picture Loan Society, looked them over and pronounced them terrible. He advised the artist to keep at it and bring in more of his work.

Eight years later, Duncan told him he was ready for a one-man show and gave him one. Half the paintings sold on the first day and Jack Troy was on his way to becoming an established artist.

The anecdote is one of many in Douglas Duncan, A Memorial Portrait, a collection of 16 essays recalling the tall, lanky eccentric whose money-raising enterprise benefitted scores of Canadian artists for 32 years until his death in 1968.

Edited by the late Alan Jarvis, former director of the National Gallery of Canada, the book includes tributes by artists, associates and collectors including the late Prime Minister L. B. Pearson and comedian Johnny Wayne.

The society offered 12 annual memberships to artists and borrowers. Pictures were loaned by the society for 10 per cent of their assigned value with the borrower having the option of buying a painting outright or for monthly installments of 10 per cent of the price.

Artists received the proceeds of sales, less 10 per cent commission.

The son of the president of a paper company, Duncan lived frugally, devoting his income to the society, his personal collection and various forms of assistance to struggling artists in an era when their opportunities for recognition were severely limited.

Among those he sponsored were David Milne, Kurt Schaefer, Harold Town, Emily Carr and Henri Masson. He also offered guidance to many private collectors.

Douglas Duncan, A Memorial Portrait, edited by Alan Jarvis; University of Toronto Press, 74 pages, 19 illustrations, $7.50.

Only six per cent of those polled said they have great faith in politicians, 43 per cent said they have a fairly high level of confidence in them, 41 per cent had a fairly low level of confidence and 15 per cent had little faith in the authorities.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A July 15 pretrial hearing is scheduled in the suit of a Salt Lake City insurance man who contends that singer Frank Sinatra's friends beat him up.

Frank Weinstock has sued Sinatra and others for $2.5 million in damages over an incident he says took place May 8, 1972, at a hotel in Palm Springs.

Weinstock, a member of the singer's party, made advances to his wife, Connie, on behalf of the singer, Weinstock claims that when he objected an argument ensued.

Weinstock says Sinatra then snapped his fingers, and said, "OK, boys," after which about 10 persons administered a beating to the insurance man.

Judge Manuel Real has denied motions of Sinatra's lawyers to dismiss the suit and recently set the pretrial date.

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Comedian Ken Dodd claimed a world record Tuesday for performing non-stop for three hours, seven minutes and 20 seconds at the Royal Court Theatre.

Dodd told 2,000 jokes during the performance.

The current edition of the Guiness Book of Records, an authoritative compilation of the best human achievements, has no category for performances.

COULDN'T GIVE IT AWAY

CHICAGO (AP) — Gasoline, now at a premium, once had a second fiddle to hero sense as major product of oil refineries, says the World Book Encyclopedia. Because kerosene burns slowly, it was used in lamps, heat boxes and cook food. Gasoline was a refinery product but, because it explodes when ignited, it was often dumped into rivers and creeks for disposal.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) You'd better able to cope with groups today than you have yesterday because of your more sympathetic outlook.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) It won't be difficult for you to have a fewer granted, particularly if what you're asking for wanted for unselfish reasons.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You will think things over more thoroughly today and look at both sides of the coin. It would be wise to stick with conclusions you now draw.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Be more secretive about a project you're involved with. There's a special benefit to you that others aren't aware of.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're at your best today in a light, fun-type atmosphere, mingling with others socially. Hope there's a luncheon or dinner party on your calendar.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Down deep you're a very nice person. You're going to make an impression with others by putting their interests before yours.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 - Nov. 22) Large issues that stymie associates can be handled by you with ease and assurance. Take over rather than let another fumble around.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be busy with material things today if you deal in areas where your basic needs are concerned. You could even pick up a special bargain.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) When you see others smiling back at you and treating you with special consideration, it's due to the warmth you project today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You won't have to be overly aggressive to get what you're interests. In fact, it would be move you to step back a little.

Pisces (Feb. 20 - March 20) Without your being aware of it, your actions are exerting a positive influence over several friends. Keep giving them something to admire.

IN MEMORIAM

WALKER — In loving memory of our father, Percy who passed away June 6th, 1970.

O better Father we can not find,
Than mother's memory still,
But death has a loneliness,
The world can never fill.

Sadly missed and fondly loved by daughter, Muriel and son-in-law Gary Hislop.

WALKER — In loving memory of a dear father, Percy Walker, who passed away June 6th, 1970.

What we would give if we could Relive
Some day in the same old way,
To take your voice, see your smile,
To hear your laughter once more,
To walk with you,
Oh what we would give if we could
But
Sweet is her repose his grave,
Kind the friends that lay him there,
Kind the love for him who lies beneath.
Will never fade away,
He will be remembered by Mother.

WALKER — In loving memory of our dear father, Percy, who passed away June 6th, 1970.

Today recalls memories,
Of a loved one gone to rest,
And those who loved him best,
Are those who loved him most.
Dear father you left us a gem,
Memories dear and true,
And the love for him who has left us,
Will never fade away,
He will be remembered by daughter, Ruth and husband Ken.

CARDS OF THANKS

SWEET — The family of the late Percy Thomas Sweet wish to take this opportunity to thank Dr. Hogarth and the nursing staff of Belleville General Hospital for their comforting words at the time of passing of our father, and also the staff of the nursing home for their kindness and loving attention for the past year. Also to Rev. Mr. Hall while he was a patient there. And to Rev. Mr. Hall for his comforting words at the funeral home, and for the use of the church. Special thanks to Mr. Ross Bowen for his kindness and comforting words at the funeral home, and to Mr. Bowen and Mr. Bob Brewster for their beautiful singing. Also to Mr. Bowen for the use of the funeral home, and to Mr. Bob Brewster, who by coincidence, was also a former patient of the nursing home. Also

India's People's Courts Organized by Idealists

BOMBAY (CP) — On a recent morning government officials in several Indian towns received orders to appear in person before "people's courts."

The orders were issued by "judges" between the ages of 14 and 25. The officials ignored the orders and as one of them in the town of Badnavar in Madhya Pradesh province said later: "I had indeed a hearty laugh."

But the student committees which issued the orders got tough. Bands of youths raided government offices in Madhya Pradesh, Bihar, Gujarat and two other provinces, rounded up dozens of officials and marched them to the nearest playground.

There, charges were read out to the "culprits" by the student judges. These were generally under three heads: inefficiency, corruption and deliberate neglect of the interests of the common people.

No sentence was passed by the courts but the accused were asked to sign a pledge of "dedicated service to the nation."

OPPOSE 'CORRUPTION'

An article in the Nagpur daily Hitavada describes how government officials were forced to do physical exercises in public as punishment for their alleged misdeeds.

The journal reports that student-organized people's courts are functioning in three Madhya Pradesh towns.

In the province of Gujarat, several legislators were tried in absentia and "dismissed." Cases of legislators being forced to sign letters of resignation have also been reported.

Youth organizations in the province of Bihar have threatened to set up people's courts to punish "corrupt" ministers.

Educationists say this development as an outcome of what one Bombay college president called "frustrated youthful idealism."

Ram Naresh Varma, a student leader of Madhya Pradesh, is quoted as saying: "The people's courts are not meant to terrorize government officials but only to make them conscious of their duties to the public."

But government officials "tried" by the self-appointed courts have protested the humiliating treatment they have received. At least in two towns they took out silent processions to show their displeasure.

The Bihar administration has charged that some leaders of the pacifist movement known as Sarvodaya (universal uplift) may be instigating the student action.

Sarvodaya spokesmen have denied the charge. They say that "Indian youth is in the grip of a reformist upsurge."

So far, police have not interfered in the working of the people's courts.

"But we are watching the situation," said a senior Madhya Pradesh police official. "The present policy is to tolerate student gimmicks up to a point and not beyond."

He Makes House Calls

TORONTO (C) — John McErlain is a former amateur boxer but says strong arm stuff is the last thing he would use as the city tax collector in the Metropolitan Toronto borough making personal calls on delinquents.

"I just use friendly persuasion," said Mr. McErlain, who started making the rounds for York borough a year ago and since then has collected more than $114,000 in overdue business taxes.

The tough part of his job is tracing the owners of small businesses that disappear almost overnight leaving behind, sometimes garbage cans, tax bills sent out by the borough.

"If you are friendly and ask the right questions, you will always get information," he said.

Mr. McErlain, 53 and the father of five, became a collector by chance. After 18 years as a tavern waiter, he had quit and taken on a temporary job, microfilming borough records at a period when treasury officials were concerned about collections.

It had reached the point where 10 to 15 per cent of all business tax revenue was at the uncollectable stage while another 20 per cent was in arrears.

York first used a bailiff to try to collect.

We got complaints of harassment and mistreatment," said deputy treasurer Lorne Simpson. "The bailiff came on rather strong and a bad atmosphere was created."

Accounts not collected by the bailiff after 60 days were sent to a collection agency, but this organization charged between one-quarter and one-third of amounts brought in.

Then Mr. McErlain was turned loose and he has collected amounts ranging between $1.25 and $7,000.

He makes 18 to 20 personal visits daily and always is careful not to embarrass the taggard businessman.

"I always wait until other persons have left the room before I approach the owner," he said.

But he admits no one really likes a tax collector. He has been threatened over the telephone, though he said he has had no face-to-face trouble.

She Teaches Alcoholics To Cope with Problem

TORONTO (CP) — A Metical psychologist now working in Toronto believes that alcoholics should not be treated as if they are sick, but rather should be taught to cope with their problem.

And Dr. Martha Sanches Craig, who founded the Madison Project half-way house in Toronto, is trying to prove that she's right.

"An alcoholic is like you and me," says Dr. Sanches Craig. "We all have problems and we all have ways of coping, some more neurotic than others. The alcoholic chooses alcohol as his way of handling problems. We have to help him or her find a more socially acceptable, less harmful way of coping."

The Madison Project, unlike many half-way houses, runs an intensive and mandatory therapy program for its residents. The project is a three-year treatment and research program and is funded by Ontario's Addiction Research Foundation.

"Traditionally, half-way houses for alcoholics have stressed programs, other than encouraging residents to go to AA, because they're supposed to be 'homes', not treatment centres," says Dr. Sanches Craig.

"But it's ridiculous to call a house with 20 people living in it a normal home. It is simply a place where people can stay for a time and be helped to make some desirable changes in their lives."

Before she took over direction of the project last summer, Dr. Sanches Craig talked to 100 former residents of the male half-way house, which has been in operation for about eight years.

She discovered they could have used help in dealing with job interviews, family situations, making new friends and developing new interests. They also were interested in finding out the facts about what alcohol did to their bodies.

From these conversations, Dr. Sanches Craig created a new program for both male and female residents. She helps residents learn to relate more effectively to other people; to deal with anxiety, rejection, loneliness, and frustration; and to set and achieve realistic goals for themselves.

When the project moves this summer, it will accommodate men and women in the same house, as Dr. Sanches Craig thinks this will create a more normal atmosphere than that of a segregated house.

The project has room for 15 women and 30 men and they stay for up to four months. The few strict rules are proposed and enforced by the residents.

Alcohol and drugs on the premises mean automatic expulsion. When residents found that most relapses into drinking "suicide" occurred in the early morning hours, they imposed a curfew.

A third lapse into drinking and a resident must leave. "People come here to try either to stop drinking altogether or to learn to control it," says Dr. Sanches Craig. "I don't say that those who've alcohol isn't an illness are wrong, but I don't feel comfortable with labeling the alcoholic as a helpless, sick person who's not responsible for his actions. I'd rather stress health than sickness."

Lockout Poses Meat Shortage

Ed Kehoe

EDMONTON (CP) — Snags have developed in completing the vote of locked-out employees of three major packing companies, a union official said Thursday, and restaurant owners in Alberta began preparing for hardships if the three-day-old impasse continues.

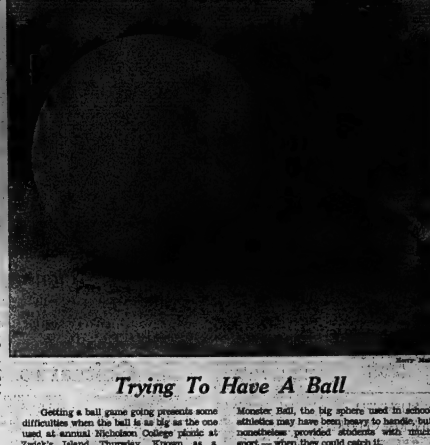
"Maybe we'll all have to eat vegetarian meals soon," said Saul Reichert, owner of an Edmonton restaurant.

He said all available storage space has been filled but if the lockout extends more than two or three weeks, "we will have to go in for soups and salads."

Restaurant owners in Alberta have been stocking up for two or three weeks in anticipation of the closure of Canada Packers Ltd., Burns Foods Ltd. and Swift Canadian Co.

The lockout affects eight plants in the province.

Company officials have said they will not reopen the plants until they are assured of a steady labor supply. The union members, represented by the Canadian Food and Allied Workers (CFAW), are considering a wage increase of $1.20 an hour over two years as well as two cost-of-living reviews and other fringe benefits.



The workers, now earning a base rate of $4.67 to $5.46 an hour, are expected to learn by Monday whether they will be returning to work quickly.

The CFAW policy committee has recommended acceptance mediator William Dickie, Ontario deputy minister of labor, but Jim Wells, a British Columbia representative of the CFAW, said he would recommend rejection by B.C.'s 700 locked-out employees.

The three packing companies, which have about 2,200 employees locked-out in Alberta, have threatened to lock out 10,000 across the country if the dispute remains unresolved by June 15.

Spokesmen at supermarkets said there is no sign of beef or pork shortages so far, but major problems might develop early next week.

Some independent meat packers said Thursday they are trying hard to increase production and fill the gap left by the labor dispute, but others said they will not increase production.

Trying To Have A Ball

Getting a ball game going presents some difficulties when the ball is as big as the one used at annual Michinoo College picnic at Zwick's Island Thursday. Known as a Monster Ball, the big sphere used in school athletics may have been heavy to handle, but considerations provided students with which sport — when they could catch it.

The Last Flight

Brig.-Gen. Bert Aillson settles into the cockpit of a Tiger Moth Thursday before taking off from Mountain View airfield for his last flight. It was a fitting exit. Brig.-Gen. Aillson's last air force flight was made in the first plane he went up in while in training in British Columbia in 1942. He is retiring from the armed forces today.

York Teachers Settle

PhD Valued at $300

TORONTO (CP) — High school teachers in York region were awarded increases ranging from 15 to 4 per cent over two years in an arbitration decision announced Thursday.

The minimum salary for a teacher without experience this September will be $8,186. The maximum will be $19,000, including a cost-of-living bonus of up to $300 and $600 for those with PhD degrees.

The 284 of 837 teachers now receiving maximum salaries will get increases of about 7 per cent and up to $300, depending on the rate of inflation.

The award guarantees that no teacher on permanent contract will be laid off because of declining enrolment or changes in student course selection. Reductions will be made through attrition.

John Honsberger, chief trustee negotiator, said in a telephone interview he unrealistically expects the award will cause the York County board of education to exceed 1974 provincial spending ceilings.

Kissinger, Eavesdropped

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Free Press says secret documents show that President Nixon and Henry Kissinger received regular summaries of spying and wiretapping conducted by the FBI on White House subordinates and supporters.

IRA Strategy

Hunger Strike Dying

LONDON (AP) — The Irish Republican Army said today another Irish hunger striker is a British prison is near death.

One Irish prisoner, Michael Gaughan, died Monday night after a 64-day fast and an attack of pneumonia. IRA spokesman Brendon Magill said Frank Stagg, who pioneered using the same tactic as Gaughan, "is on the same state as Michael was last week, and if something is not done he will be dead by the weekend."

Stagg, 31, serving 10 years for conspiracy, to organize an IRA unit, is one of five IRA members on hunger strikes in prisons in Britain. Like Gaughan, all were convicted on criminal charges, and all are demanding that they be classified as political prisoners and transferred to prisons in Northern Ireland. They would make them eligible for any amnesty that might be declared as part of a peace settlement in strife-torn Ulster.

The home office said Stagg remains in weak condition.

Ben Wicks

"...And watch the sun go down on Galway Bay."

He was fed artificially until a week ago, but after that refused to co-operate with the prison doctors.

His mother saw him Thursday for the first time in 18 months and reported: "It was just as if I was looking at a dead man. He was very, very weak and terribly thin and worn."

The home office said two other fasting prisoners, the sisters Dolours and Marion Price, "are under the best medical and mentally alert." It said the other two strikers, Hugh Feeney and Gerard Kelly, are "in good condition."

Lord Brockway, a left-wing peer, visited the Price sisters Thursday in an attempt to persuade them to end their fast. He told reporters he is "more hopeful" that something can be worked out.

Ground Beef Threatened?

OTTAWA (CP) — The food prices review board released a special report on ground beef Thursday, predicting lower prices in the next few months and criticizing two government branches for alleged failure to protect the public.

John Morris, a beef specialist with the board, said retail ground beef prices have already been easing recently, will continue to drop in the next few months due to decreases in the price of imported boneless beef.

Hamburger prices at Ottawa supermarkets now are about 62 cents, a decrease from recent prices of nearly $1.10 a pound.

In a couple of months, he added, the price could drop to 75 cents with prices at 69 cents for features.

Ground chuck, which has less fat than hamburger, usually sells for 10 cents more a pound and ground round is another 10 cents more expensive.

Beryl Plumptre, chairman of the review board, warned however that a protract dispute in the packing industry could throw the predictions off kilter. A lockout of employees now is in effect in Alberta and there is a chance it could spread to other provinces.

And the board's report said it is "alarming" that so few tests have been done to ensure that consumers are protected against health hazards and contamination from fraud.

The report says that between January, 1972, and December, 1973, only 165 tests for bacterial count were done by the health protection branch, whereas research investigators show poor quality beef in some stores, particularly in outlying areas.

Tests for economic fraud between March, 1972, and March, 1974, by the consumer affairs department showed unsatisfactory results for ground beef and sausages of between 20 and 33 per cent for 1,704 samples.

Mr. Morris said at a news conference that the imported beef, from Australia and New Zealand, makes up only 10 per cent of the content of ground beef but sets the retail price of ground beef to the consumer.

Tories Would Balance Budget

TORONTO (CP) — A crowd of 2,500 cheered Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield Thursday as he promised that a Conservative government, if elected, would balance the budget.

"We will bring in a balanced budget," he told a rally in the Ted Reeve arena held for Toronto-area candidates in the July 8 federal election.

It was the first time during the campaign that the party leader had pledged that a Conservative government would bring in a budget in which expenditures would match income.

Party officials on tour with Mr. Stanfield called the meeting the biggest and best reception he has had so far in the campaign.

Mr. Stanfield criticized his campaign today with visits to North Bay, the Ottawa valley and Ottawa itself, where he is scheduled to make a major address.

Other than the budget pledge, the Conservative leader had little more to say in his Toronto audience than what he has been telling reporters in Montreal, northern New Brunswick and central Newfoundland.

He accused Prime Minister Trudeau of ducking the main issues — inflation and selling a falsehood in British Columbia last week when he said that the government had proposed legislation to help old-age pensioners when it was defeated in an election forced.

"A complete falsehood," declared Mr. Stanfield.

Kettle Ban Takes Effect

OTTAWA (CP) — Regulations banning the advertising or sale of electric kettles that release lead from their bases in excess of 20 parts per billion went into effect Thursday. The consumer affairs department has announced.

At the same time, the department released a list of 82 brands of electric kettles tested by the department's product safety branch.

Forty-three kettles were found to release too much lead while 42 were judged safe for human use. Some of the models, under different brand names, were tested more than once.

Consumer Affairs Minister Herb Gray said in a news release the list represents all kettles of recent production known to be manufactured in Canada prior to May 17, 1974.

It was on that day that the electric kettle industry informed the department that the manufacture and distribution of kettles using lead solders had ceased, the minister said.

Tin Conforms To Standards

TORONTO (CP) — Eastern Appliances, a division of Toronto-based RTM Manufacturing Ltd., announced Thursday it has begun using tin instead of lead in making electric kettles to conform to new federal health standards.

Commissioner's Claim

Town Council No Forum To Air Police Actions

PICTON — Jesse Mason, Picton Police Commission chairman has suggested that town council is no place for councillors to question actions of the police department.

Mr. Mason made this observation after councillor John Elmore asked why the Picton police cruiser had to be towed by a local garage from a field in Wellington recently.

He pointed out that such business preferably should be addressed to the police commission.

Picton mayor James Bird, also a member of the police commission, informed council that he was unaware of the alleged incident and added that he would check the facts.

Picton Police Chief George Pitt today stated that he expects to present a report at a special meeting of town council explaining the situation about the cruiser. Chief Pitt said the meeting will be called by the Picton Police Commission and stressed that he has "no comment" on the incident at this time.

Picton Vet Student Wins Highest Awards

PICTON — A former Picton man, Donald F. Smith, has graduated from the Ontario Veterinary College at Guelph, a winner of the highest award given to a member of the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine Program.

Mr. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Smith of Picton, received the Andrew Smith Memorial Medal and also won the OVC Alumni Proficiency prize. The OVMA Ladies' Auxiliary Award and the Tuco Company Award are large animal medicine.

He also placed third in the Schering Essayy Contest.

Dr. Smith has accepted an internship with the University of Philadelphia, for one year.

Go-it-alone Brighton Benefits

BRIGHTON — Four residents here were more helped than hindered when village council opted to go on its own rather than along provincial aid following the July windstorm that rocked Brighton last summer.

Originally, the province said locally-raised funds would be matched dollar for dollar in a bid to get people back on their homes.

However, reports from the village's disaster relief committee say that some people could not be covered in the "narrow guidelines" spelled by the provincial governing relief spending.

Since the July 13 disaster, village council has approved fund-raising p rojects and donations from neighboring municipalities to speed restoration.

Dorothy Bristoll, village reeve, said, the province's guidelines were so narrow that there would have been many claims that the committee would not have been allowed to compensate."

To date, the relief committee has raised $37,000. Bulk of damages has been to private individual homeowner insurance. Uninsured property has been covered in $17,000 of relief committee spending.

The committee is paying the $50 and $100 deductible clauses in insurance policies and will spend the balance of funds restoring the village park.

Explaining the surplus of funds, Albert Bonnett, a bank manager and treasurer of the committee, said claims were not as great as the committee first thought they were going to be.

Most severely damaged was Brighton's Public Utilities Commission with $25,000 damage. The commission has debenture funds to restore equipment.

The Final Gesture

To commemorate 22 years of service in the armed forces, Brig.-Gen. Bert Allison (left) Thursday was presented with a plaque briefly outlining the history of aviation by CFB Trenton commanding officer Maj.-Gen. Hugh McLachlan at Mountain View airfield. Brig.-Gen. Allison went up in the first plane he ever flew for the last time yesterday. Today, with his days in the Tiger Moth history, he retires.

Allison Leaves Transport Command

Chief's Farewell a Flight in Time

By AL EABAS
Staff Reporter

MOUNTAIN VIEW — A small bright plane gently dipped its wings above the airfield here Thursday. In its open cockpit, Brig.-Gen. Bert Allison sat at the controls on his last official flight.

Landing after a brief flight, a beaming Brig.-Gen. Allison recounted: "This is how it started, this is how it ended."

He enjoyed it, he said.

To commemorate his retirement from the armed forces, friends at CFB Trenton had brought to services' Airport here the first plane Brig.-Gen. Allison had flown when he joined the service in 1942.

The Tiger Moth was the basic training aircraft and the one Brig.-Gen. Allison first took off the ground January 4, 1942 in British Columbia. It was also the last plane he lifted from the runway.

Born in Prince Albert, Sask., Brig.-Gen. Allison had served as chief of staff of Air Transport Command at CFB Trenton for the past five years. Previously, he was commanding officer of number four fighter wing in Germany.

After yesterday's flight, CFB Trenton commanding officer Maj.-Gen. Hugh McLachlan presented the retiring officer with two plaques commemorating his service.

U.S. Team Wins Rescue Contest

MOUNTAIN VIEW — For the first time in three years, American airmen have won the Allison Cup, an award given in the North American competition for excellence in parachute operations.

In two past years, Canadian teams have walked away with the top award, donated by Canada's Brig.-Gen. Bert Allison.

This year, a team from Hill Airforce Base in Utah won the competition completed at Mountain View airfield Thursday. It was the first time the competition has been held here.

In all, seven three-man teams, two from the United States, five from Canada, competed. Each participator was tested in his skill at parajumping, parachute repacking to a crash site, and free fall bundle drops.

For the first time this year, teams ran through procedures that would be performed in providing medical assistance to victims at a crash site. Marks were not awarded for this, however.

A CFB Trenton spokesman said it was introduced this year with the possibility it would be continued in later competitions.

Contestants were marks for the accuracy each exhibited in striking a small target on the ground. In the parajumping section, each jumped from 1,500 feet and aimed for a six-inch target.

In placing first over runner-up 413 squadron, Summerside, the American team was 75.80 feet closer to the target from points of ground impact in all three events.

The Edmonton team placed third. The CFB Trenton 424 squadron team earned fourth place, followed by CFB Comox (Vancouver Island) and California's 303 Aerospace Rescue and Recovery team. The survivalk training school from Edmonton placed seventh.

Trent River Victim Missing Toronto Man

TRENTON — Police here have identified the body dragged from the Trent River Thursday morning as that of 33-year-old Wayne Newton of Toronto.

Village's Firefighting Cost $5,000

MARMORA — Total cost of operating Marmora volunteer fire department was $5,371, clerk - treasurer William Shannon said in an answer to a question by resident Roy Frost, at this week's council meeting.

The 20 men on the force receive $150 per year, or less than $3 a week, councillor Bert Gray said Mr. Frost, who wondered why men had to be paid to be volunteer firemen, something which didn't happen when he was serving on the department.

Mr. Frost said he understood it was impossible for anyone to get on the fire department. Mr. Gray explained that the last three men taken on were picked because they could be depended on the spot coverage. Many of the firemen were employed on shift work at Marmoration Mine Co.

The body was found in the water when a visiting busier docked at the Trenton pier noticed an object partially submerged near the stern of his boat.

Det.-Sgt. Ed Vickers, investigating the incident, said the body was believed to have been in the water four to five days - consistent with a missing person report received on the weekend.

Apparently Mr. Newton was last seen by friends from Brighton Saturday night when he left to take a walk in the vicinity of the river.

Police here say there is no indication of foul play.

A pathologist's report is expected within the next week.

Youngsters Find Bomb

GREENBUSH — Children at play in Greenbush yesterday discovered a 75-pound bomb.

When the object, resembling a military explosive device was found a Greenbush resident contacted the Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police. A munitions expert from CFB Trenton was called and the bomb was taken by Trenton by military personnel.

Marmora Arena Study Questioned

MARMORA — Necessity for a needs-benefit study of the Marmora arena was questioned by Roy Frost, one of eight residents who formed a delegation at Monday night's council meeting.

Mr. Frost said he could shortly provide council with numbers of children who would be under arena, if that was the purpose of such a study. Reeve Jack Reynolds explained the existing firm is doing a detailed survey of all needs and benefits of an arena.

Marmora and Lake Township council has offered to pay $2,000 or half the cost of the study, and has expressed a willingness to contribute more to the arena's operating costs, Reeve Reynolds said.

Some discussion took place on possible ways and means of making the arena pay its way. Mr. Frost was strongly opposed to any increase in children's admittance fees, claiming that it would be a violation of the original purpose of the building. "Make them pay" he said of the hockey fans and curlers.

Hungerford Taxes Down

Hungerford township property owners will see a slight reduction in their 1974 tax bills.

At a special budget meeting in May the municipal council set rates of 118 mills for residential and farm public school supporters — decrease of 3.5 mills from last year — and 120.5 mills for separate school supporters, down 4.5 mills from the 1973 rate.

The commercial and business rate for public school supporters is 124 mills and 122.9 mills for separate school supporters. The decrease is 4 mills and 4.1 mills respectively.

The general municipal rate is 48 mills for residential and farm assessments and 48 mills for commercial and business property owners. The public school rate is 37 mills, residential and farm and 46 mills for commercial and business. The separate school rate is 44.5 mills and 48.9 mills.

Road Problem

MARMORA — "Cutting of good road surfaces for the installation of utilities should not be allowed," Edward Tustin said in a complaint about the condition of Cameron Street in Marmora Village Council meeting on Monday evening.

Deputy-reeve Grant Aichart, Road Chairman, explained corrective measures are being taken to prevent unauthorized cutting of pavement.

Highway Repairs Planned

Resurfacing of Highway 401 from Highway 33 at Trenton east to the Murray Canal bridge at Belleville, a distance of 18.8 miles, is among the highway construction projects to be carried out in the Quinte area this summer by the Ontario Ministry of Transtons.

Other highway resurfacing projects in the area include Highway 37 north from Highway 401 for 2.8 miles to the north end of the Colquhoun bypass, and Highway 2 from the south junction of Highway 49 to Napanee. The 1.4-mile section of the highway through Desoronto will be repaved with a plaque built and paved under a construction agreement with the municipality.

Another roadway project in go ahead this year under a construction agreement is the reconstruction of East Dundas Street in Belleville.

Reconstruction of Highway 41 from 4.6 miles south of Kaladar for a distance of 14 miles is also going ahead this year.

Another construction project planned by the department is on Highway 14 from Stirling northerly to Springbrook, including a structure at Squira Creek.

Ulster: A Political Problem That Defies Solution

A Hungry World

It is now common knowledge that much of the world's population — a figure of one in four has been mentioned — is suffering from malnutrition. Because of drought in Africa thousands are in a worse plight. In lands of the Sahara starvation, rather than mere malnutrition, is the key word and countless numbers will die unless relief can be got to them.

As many as 800 million may be suffering from malnutrition, according to a United Nations report. And the word is that world food reserves, such as were available in the form of wheat stockpiles during the war, are sufficient for but a month or less. Recent flooding in Saskatchewan and in the American mid-west will have an adverse effect on this year's crop.

A United Nations preliminary to a world food conference in Rome in November, urges a "worldwide effort to bring about a better-balance between growing world demand and supply."

A recent CBS television special on the food crisis suggested that something like the curbs introduced during the energy shortage; perhaps the giving up of one meal a week, or some such sacrifice, might be the answer.

But, what good would that do if food cannot be got to those who need it. The money saved, presumably could go to some organization like CARE (63 Sparks Street, Ottawa, Ont. K1P 5A6), but there remain problems of transportation, and government red tape, not to mention the sheer magnitude of the task of feeding an entire city.

However, if there is any concerted effort that Canada and other nations can undertake, to aid these people beyond individual and group contributions then we are certain people in this country would respond.

It is sobering to learn in this context that a popular restaurant chain in Canada has reported a revenue in the first quarter of the year amounting to many thousands of dollars.

Canadians eat well — perhaps too well for their own good. If some of this could be diverted to those abroad who have little or nothing, we would be fulfilling to some extent at least the moral obligation that today is so pressing. At the same time we could ease the pressure on our own resources which one day, what with increasing population, could create problems of supply here too.

Going Concern

One of the most successful of native craft enterprises in this area, indeed in all of Canada, is the Mohawk Gift Shop at Deseronto.

Proprietors Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Maracle have opened for another season with enlarged and refurbished premises and a wide range of authentic crafts from reserves across the country.

The store includes a wholesale operation with a continent-wide clientele. The Maracles also report sales to customers in Scotland and Germany; outlets in two other countries have shown interest.

In a business which has its share of failures, this Deseronto enterprise is a going concern.

Letters

The notice regarding Letters to the Editor which appears regularly on this page requires no elaboration. However, we would make one further point, in this context, and it concerns "phony" letters.

The Intelligencer in recent days received a letter bearing a printed name and a rural address. The Intelligencer sent it back, requesting a proper signature.

The letter, which sought to support current political actions of the Quinte Labor Council in relation to the United Communities Plan, was returned with a Post Office mark indicating the addressee was "Unknown."

This is not the first letter of this type that we have received. It goes without saying they will not be published.

With military disengagement completed in the Middle East between Israel and both Egypt and Syria, Northern Ireland remains the single place of continuous bitter warfare in the world, (Vietnam excepted).

The solution is in sight. As one distinguished journalist put it recently in Belfast, "every month a solution makes a solution seem that much further away."

The new element is the tough, military and well-armed Protestant extremist militia to match the new historic IRA Provisionals on the Catholic side.

Some idea of their power, even with 16,000 British troops in Ulster, was their recent, successful, one-day, total service facilities grinch was on the verge of shutting down North Ireland's power plants for a substantial community.

After 50 years of so-called "solutions" from Westminster, the beleaguered British government under Prime Minister Harold Wilson must find yet another attempt at reconciliation to supersede the ones apparently successfully smashed by former prime minister Ted Heath.

In brief review, Westminster was more or less compelled to impose the concept of a provincial legislature, the so-called Stormont, on the protestant majority.

The Protestants proceeded to dominate the Catholic minority as they had done to other ways in the various heavy industries of Ulster and the Irish Republic can Army moved in "protect" the Catholic districts.

The British solution of Stormont did not work. The troops were called in, and by 1972, London had abolished the local parliament and restored the old direct rule from Westminster.

Mr. Heath's formula before he left office was the so-called Sunningdale, signed by British, Eire and moderate Protestant and Catholic leaders, in this Berkshire village. Under it, there would have been a Council of Ireland, an executive council and an "All-Ireland Council" to consummate the eventual links between north and south in Ireland.

The rise of extremist Protestantism beyond the rabble-rousing sermons and speeches of an Ian Paisley or anticipated beseeching into a powerful force was enough to destroy the Sunningdale formula.

More troops are coming in. By now, the British Army in a part of the United Kingdom itself have rattled anti-guerrilla tactics as they never had to do in Malaya, Singapore, Cyprus or in any other modern hanging duties of the old empire.

Extremist Ulster's para-military units absorbing the same kind of units in the IRA Provisionals, add Ulster's home-grown know-how to the streets of Ulster.

The IRA Provisionals have long since been armed with foreign and professional weapons of the most efficient kind. These are Belgian, French, Czech and Russian with alleged exporting from American veterans of the Vietnam war hired on contract basis.

Mr. Wilson's dilemma over Ireland now is deep and serious. Like Heath, he is committed to a solution and of tough, military measures against violence.

The two prime ministers, so strongly opposed in almost all personality on many other matters, are agreed on Ireland.

Yet a bi-partisan policy, as the Americans call it, doesn't seem to be the answer either. Ulster is a very sick place.

THE CAMPAIGN TRAIN

Soviet Curbs On Chinese Vessels

By PETER T. SUM
The Canadian Press

The latest Soviet move in its quarrel with China on border issues may touch off a new round of heated exchanges between the two Communist states.

The Soviets now demand prior notification by Peking before Chinese vessels can pass through Soviet inland waterways near Khabarovsk on the eastern Soviet-China border.

Soviet says in effect that it will not give the Chinese any notably if Peking acknowledges Soviet territorial rights to the disputed river areas.

The Chinese have challenged the Soviet rights.

The disputed area covers several thousand square miles of river territory along a section of the border south of Khabarovsk where the Amur River bends northward before emptying into the Sea of Okhotsk 400 miles away.

The Soviets inherited the area from the tsarist regime which negotiated with China's last imperial court a series of documents in the late 1800s assigning the territory immediately north of Manchuria.

While the Soviets in their latest move have not mentioned these documents, their reference to them is obvious.

The Soviets say that Moscow, "displaying goodwill, has always received favorably requests" by Peking concerning the use of the inland waterways by Chinese vessels, "according to Russian-Chinese documents."

The historical documents stipulate that during the dry season when most rivers on the Chinese side of the border are too shallow for navigation, Chinese vessels may use the waterways north of the border while plying between Chinese ports.

The documents also say that China's imperial court recognized tsarist sovereignty in the area.

The waterways include the Ussuri River which is a branch of the Amur.

Soviet and Chinese troops fought a series of bloody battles on a small island in the Ussuri River in the mid-1960s. The Chinese claimed the Changtse—or Damansky to the Soviets—island and began to occupy it. The Soviets quickly erected them with the help of heavy artillery, tanks and helicopters.

The fact that the protracted Sino-Soviet border talks, which began after the bloody clashes, have not produced any tangible results is difficult to see any difference in the two countries' stands on the historical documents.

Peking maintains that the documents remain valid because both the Russian and the Chinese people respect the long-oppressive rule of the czar in Petrograd and of the Chinese emperor in Peking. It considers the documents as imperialist and, therefore, requires further examination in the light of the international brotherhood of the proletariat.

Moscow rejected the Peking view as sheerly. It insists that the sovereign rights and territorial integrity of the Soviet Union are not to be negotiated.

The need for Moscow to emphasize the Soviet position on sovereign rights can be seen in the light of Japan's clamor for the return of four tiny islands claimed by Russia to the north of the Japanese main island of Honshu. The Soviets captured the four islands during the Second World War and have been there ever since.

Moscow has repeated to Tokyo what it has told the Chinese regarding border sovereignty. But the Chinese, rejecting the Soviet claims, have supported the Tokyo demand.

Aside from the Sino-Soviet border quarrel, a recent incident has deepened mutual distrust between Moscow and Peking.

A Soviet military helicopter with a three-man crew led by a Red Army captain landed in the western Chinese province of Sinkiang in March. The Chinese are holding them. The Soviets say and its crew, indicating that the matter will face espionage charges.

Moscow maintains that the helicopter was in a humanitarian mission and that it had lost its way. It landed in Sinkiang in the main testing ground for Chinese nuclear weapons.

The Chinese have refused to allow Soviet diplomats to visit the detained crew.

In demanding that the Chinese obtain permission before using Soviet inland waterways, Moscow is undoubtedly aware that Peking not only will reject the demand but may stiffen its attitude on other Sino-Soviet matters.

The next step may be a move by the Soviets to detain some Chinese vessel that tries to use the waterways without permission.

Market Shows Signs Of Recovery

By VINCENT EGAN
Business and Consumer Affairs Analyst

Like a bear poking its nose out of its lair after a long hibernation, investors appear to be stirring again after a long retreat from the wilds of the 1974 marketplace.

So far, investors have been cautious and sensitive about renewing their activities—in the fashion of a bear cautiously taking his first skating lesson.

But the first short of stock movement do show a pattern that suggests a support level, and possibly the base for a recovery in price.

And the bond market, spirits have been lifted by the good public reception that was accorded to the government of Canada's recent two-part $600-million issue of bonds to be dated June 15.

Yield was 9.50 per cent on the $150 million of 10-year bonds, and 9.25 per cent on the other $450 million in shorter maturities.

The question now is whether conditions will appear bright enough to attract not only courageous individuals but also the giant financial intermediaries—insurance firms, trust companies, pension funds and the like—who have been holding back tens of millions of investment dollars awaiting a favorable moment to re-enter the market.

Commenting on the technical features of the stock market outlook, the Toronto Dominion research department says "we may soon be close to the point where a selling climax is taking

"We would not be disturbed to see another sharp drop in Toronto over the near term. This would be a buying opportunity to participate in a strong general market rally."

A March 8 brokerage firm, Moss, Lawson and Co. Ltd., notes that many "fundamentally attractive equity issues" are selling at or near their book values—that is, the per-share net value of assets as shown on the balance sheet, with no premium for their status as going concerns.

The Toronto Stock Exchange industrial index "appears to be entering a preliminary base building phase, probably above 182," says Moss, Lawson.

"If our interpretation is correct, excellent long-term values are available."

The contrary view is that those who look for an early and wishful thinkers, since the bottom already have not lightened since last fall:

The energy crisis is still with us, and is worse than ever. Interest rates keep rising to new highs, and the Watergate scandal drags on in the United States, and Canada's political future is not yet to be resolved.

Still, the investor who expects to see anything like the old easy problems may have a long wait. Markets often respond positively to preliminary signs of a turn-around.

Those who are bullish can cite such signs as a possible tendency toward stabilization in short-term interest rates, a trend toward supply-demand equilibrium in some previously scarce commodities, and especially the pressure on financial institutions to stop biting on the million of dollars they hold and to put them to work.

Financial markets will not soon shake off their nervousness, but the optimism is greater today than at any other time this year.

Memories Of Some Political Giants

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — After 30 years at any seat of government an inevitable and pertinent question asked of one is who is the governor of the legislature has been the most memorable over the span.

With probably some 300 members involved, including among them some very able men and women, the answer is not a question which can be easily answered with a snap reply.

Also the particular tastes of the observer, what he happens to like and dislike in public life, must be a factor.

First of all my bias is to mention George Drew, for it was Drew who led the Conservatives to victory in an unbroken reign in office in 1943 and established the system of government by which they have thrived and still survive.

However George was an introvert and reserved, not many people really got close to him in his life, and he was not a good man to leave one with memories.

Looking back on the 30 years, there are two other men other than he who are outstanding in my memory: Leslie Frost and Robert Macaulay.

Blackwell, a lawyer, represented Toronto Eglinton from 1945 to 1951 and was attorney-general from '45 to '48.

A huge man in both physique and ability he had been a star athlete, a baseball pitcher of some prowess, regular, but had lost a leg in the first war.

He was the second man in the Drew government, and was much more than most people realized.

He was practically the only man in the government with whom Drew had confidently discussed policy. And he almost single-handedly created the social assistance program, for example, was almost entirely his baby.

Both of these men, of course, in the public have forgotten. Also both were defeated.

They were too progressive for the term the old guard used towards them.

But one has to wonder what the fate of the party and the province might have been had these had won and become premier.

Tribute To Late U.S. Columnist

The Christian Science Monitor

The editors and news analysts of The Christian Science Monitor have been accustomed to reach for the latest issue of Newsweek whenever they looked in the front pages, but to the last inside page. This was where one expected to find a piece written by Stewart Alsop, his end-what was always intended to be briefly prized by all in the news business because of the combined unusual skill as a reporter with unusual ability to keep personal opinion and preconceptions out of the conclusions to be drawn from the information he gathered.

He started out with a point of view, yes. But if the information he gathered indicated a fault in the point of view, he would change. He never selected facts to sustain a preconception.

He was born a conservative and not an unthinking one (rebelled in both Oyster Bay and Hyde Park Roosevelts). He went to Groton and Yale - as the natural thing for an Alsop to do - volunteered when rejected by the U.S. Army for medical reasons, he went straight to London and was there on in the King's Royal-Rifles. A sense of duty to serve his country and its best interest, in war or peace, was part of Stewart Alsop. He elected after World War II to serve, through journalism, his country. The result was most reading for an editor. His column always had a new fact and a new insight for an Alsop to find in the country. While critical of many things done during the Nixon administration he never allowed them so fatty that he was to the end of his career welcome at the White House. President Nixon's tribute to Stewart Alsop was not lip service. Few writers will remain a standard of what a profession for years to come."

Cartoon: Mixed Response

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Intelligencer's "Page 5" cartoon of June 4 was a disgusting example of the paper's illiteracy taste and objectivity. Nobody can tell what point the cartoon except the labels. But that is a matter Intelligencer's easily corrected.

Let us pause a minute and examine the cartoon a little closer. The dignified young gentleman on the left is clearly identified as Mr. YMCA. The lady on the right must be Mrs. Belleville. Mr. YMCA and Mrs. Belleville are about to exchange blows. Why? Well They are prevented from so doing by three colored boys, one of social squalidness on a motorbikes named "Labor". Into his brass studded belt the thug has stuck and a suggestive baseball-bat. On its face-shield, "Labour", he does so in no uncertain manner, for Mrs. Belleville and Mr. YMCA stare with unbelieving apprehension at the thug's threatening posture. Clearly if they anticipate an imminent, slashing and crushing attack.

Now as we would, this is a good cartoon, keeping in mind The Intell literary ambitions. But the labels are wrong. For "Labor" there should be "Fabian Pretenders, LLC," and for "Mrs. Belleville," simply "Conservatives." We coerce" Mrs. Belleville, the typical Conservative by labor NOT to give: money, grants, personal favors — they have one, is now being coerced by the number of labels put on de just that.

Opposition Reminds Public ANY Mortgage too Expensive

By STEPHEN SCOTT
The CANADIAN PRESS

Three opposition party leaders were quick off the mark Thursday to criticize the federal government home ownership assistance plans announced by Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mr. Trudeau announced Part 2 of the plan in Regina Thursday, a day after Part 1 was unfolded in Vancouver.

He told a federal election meeting in Regina that an existing program called Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP) will be broadened to ensure that average families "need pay no more than 22 per cent of their income to own a decent home."

That program, approved by Parliament last summer, has provided $25-a-month subsidization of mortgage payments for eligible families earning between $6,000 and $13,000 annually.

Under the Trudeau announcement the subsidy will be raised to $50. Depending on where a person lives, the eligible income range can vary between $4,500 and $15,200.

The maximum home price under the program will be $32,000 in Toronto and Vancouver, $30,000 in Ottawa and Hamilton and scale down to $26,000 in other areas.

Mr. Trudeau said the proposal means that some persons will be paying less than a six-per-cent interest rate.

Mortgage rates today are in the neighborhood of 11 and 12 per cent.

In Vancouver Wednesday, Mr. Trudeau announced proposals designed to lower the down payment on low-and middle-income housing.

Price ceilings under that proposal ranged between $44,000 in Toronto and Vancouver and $31,500 in smaller centres.

There was no indication when these proposals would come into effect.

They were greeted with skepticism and criticism by the three opposition party leaders.

In Toronto, Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield told a rally "the average Canadian cannot afford a home. For many present homeowners, mortgage interest rates are prohibitive."

He said Mr. Trudeau's "brave new housing policy" announced in Vancouver simply was expansion of what was in the May 8 budget, defeat of which brought down the government—"from a sow's ear to silk purse in 30 days."

He said AHOP has no "orientation to reality in tight housing markets."

"Where properties are expensive, interest rates are high and money is scarce, the plan is virtually useless."

The Conservatives had proposed tax relief for excessive mortgage rates, were committed to attempting to free more serviced land for housing use and gradually would eliminate the federal sales tax on building materials.

"And I have been frank in telling Canadians that a real improvement in the housing situation won't be achieved until we get inflation under control."

New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis issued a statement saying the ceiling announced in Vancouver is totally unrelated to actual house prices and family incomes.

"Mr. Trudeau's scheme is meaningless, its irrelevant," he said. "The majority of Canadians still couldn't afford a house. Mr. Trudeau has failed to even offer a solution to the housing nightmare in this country because he continues to treat housing as an economic tool rather than a social necessity."

Only the New Democrats had a program that could deal effectively with the problem—six per cent mortgages that would lower monthly payments, a two-price system for lumber and other basic construction commodities and an end to land speculation.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said in Saskatoon that Mr. Trudeau should have acted to lower interest rates before the election.

If rust is a problem, Tremclad. is a solution.

- No hard scraping or sanding. Paint right over sound rust.
- Special formula inhibits rust without a lot of work.
- No primer necessary in most applications.

Lewis Touches All Bases

WINNIPEG (CP) — David Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, criticized the federal defence policy, defended his proposal for six-per-cent mortgages, ripped into the giant corporations and defended the rights of homosexuals Thursday before a student crowd at Red River Community College.

His first questioner wanted to know about the NDP's defence policy and Mr. Lewis replied that about $100 million a year is being wasted by Canada's participation in the North American Air Defence Command which should be scrapped because it is outmoded.

And, although he did not name them, he was critical of Canadian companies that sold material to the United States for possible use in the Vietnam war, which he described as "immoral from the day it started."

Mr. Lewis then explained his party's mortgage proposals for a questioner who suggested that mortgage payments should be tax deductible as they are in the U.S.

But he said this would be unfair to the more than 60 per cent of urban populations that live in apartments and who would be ineligible for deductions under such a program.

In the meantime, his proposal for a six-per-cent ceiling on residential mortgages was the best solution to the present situation and perhaps could be combined with tax adjustments for persons committed to mortgages with higher interest rates.

His continued attack on the multinational corporations, which he has accused repeatedly of milking Canada dry, came during a reply in which he urged the students to establish more humane priorities in an increasingly impersonal world.

He said the cost of medical care, education and other social welfare programs such as pensions and family allowances had to have more support through increased corporate taxes.

Mr. Lewis did not think the Bill of Rights was the appropriate place for legislated protection of homosexuals but agreed that society does not give them a fair chance.

"It is the belief of the New Democratic Party and my personal belief . . . that men and women have a right to live freely and with dignity no matter how they are made."

This won him a warm round of applause from the students.

Toyota has the lowest priced popular small car:
$2599*

Two thousand five hundred and ninety-nine dollars.
We think that's a lot of money to pay for any car. But we also think it's the best bargain in town.
Here's why:

Lowest priced of all popular* small cars.
Economy has to begin with price. (But it shouldn't end there.)
And when you compare prices, one fact stands out: of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada, Toyota has the lowest priced model. The Toyota Corolla 1200 KE2200K3.
Now check the dollar difference between Toyota and some of the other popular economy models.

Model	Manufacturer's Suggested Retail Price	Lowest Priced Model* (Standard Equipment Suggested Retail Price)	Difference
TOYOTA	Corolla	$2,599
Vega	2300 TS	$2,527	$(72)
Pinto	2000 TS	$2,632	$33
Datsun	1200	$2,899	$300
VW	1600	$2,995	$396

*Model with figures not available.

Now consider this:
The Toyota Corolla 1200 is not only the lowest priced model of the popular small cars.
It's also the one that goes the farthest on a gallon of gas.

Small car mileage chart.
Best mileage obtained by each manufacturer in miles per imp. gal.

Make	0	8	10	18	20	28	30	36
Toyota Corolla 1200									33.2 mpg
Datsun 1010									29.2 mpg
Vega Hatchback									28.5 mpg
Pinto									27.4 mpg
VW Rabbit (Diesel)									25.2 mpg

These figures are from the Environmental Protection Agency—a U.S. government body that tested 486 different vehicles to determine gas mileage. And in the E.P.A. Gas Mileage Guide of 74 models, the Toyota Corolla 1200 averaged 32.5 miles per imperial gallon. The best gas mileage of the 10 best selling small cars in Canada. Of course your own mileage may vary depending on road conditions and the way you drive.)

Need we say more?
Yes.

Best gas mileage of all popular* small cars.
A recent survey of small car buyers asked Canadians how they went about shopping for an economy car.
Not surprising, the two most important considerations were price and gas mileage.

Economy. And much more.
Still not satisfied?
Good.
Because, with today's shrinking dollar, an economy car should offer you a lot more. Not only good price and good gas mileage. But good value right down the line.

That's why even the lowest priced Toyota models come equipped with a wide range of extras ...like front disc brakes, four-on-the-floor transmission, and fully reclining bucket seats.
Where many car manufacturers list these as extra cost options, they're all standard equipment on every Toyota.

22 beautiful ways to save.
At Toyota, the big option is choice.
We give you a wider selection of small cars than any other manufacturer: 22 models in 6 different series.
And they're not only different in size. They're different in character.
Chances are one of them is just right for you.

Change your car. Not your lifestyle.
Now more than ever, the small car is the car of the future.
In the face of rising prices, it's one of the few alternatives left.
And if you're looking for small car economy with big car performance, styling, comfort and mileage range—then the only alternative left is Toyota.
Which brings us right back to the beginning. $2599.*

She's New OHC Region Manager

Most Ontario Housing Corporation clients are women and for that reason it may be particularly fitting that Belleville's new OHC manager is Kay Kokesh.

One of just a handful of women managing OHC regions in Ontario Mrs. Kokesh came to her job, it's month with more than 15 years business experience in the credit field.

That, and work with senior citizens through the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire and experience in administering the mills units Mrs. Kokesh to her appointment.

In her job, Mrs. Kokesh says, she administers 228 family units and more than 300 senior citizens units, both largely inhabited by women.

"I though I could capably cope with the job because of my experience," she says.

While the job is largely administrative, Mrs. Kokesh says she may be spending part of her work day doing on-site inspections of new OHC projects currently under construction.

"During the next year, OHC units in this region — which includes everything from Colborne to Tweed—will just about double."

Three senior citizens units are either planned or already under construction in Belleville and there are ten for citizens units planned in Madoc, Frankford and Cobourg. Tentatively, a new unit will be constructed in Picton, too, she adds.

Mrs. Kokesh will also be responsible for the placement of clients in housing units.

"We place people on the basis of need, not according to the date of application," she explained.

Mrs. Kokesh says a point system — with "credit" for such problems as overcrowding or shared bath facilities — is used to rate a client's needs.

Admitting that there is a "lengthy" waiting list, Mrs. Kokesh says a big responsibility of the Belleville office is to keep current files on families which have applied for housing.

"They have to be visited every six months at least," she says, "to find out if there situation has changed or if they're still interested."

Maintenance of OHC units some single family houses scattered throughout the city, is the responsibility of the office which employs a maintenance supervisor along with resident superintendents in large housing units.

A lot of responsibility, Mrs. Kokesh says — "I'm going to be busy" — but not for a long shot more than she can handle.

"Ten years ago they wouldn't have given this job to a woman," she says, "but things' are changing. It's being realized that women are just as capable as men."

Quota Woman

Jean James, Volunteer

Jean James and 39 other women volunteer their time to make monthly visits to chronic mental health patients in Quinte nursing homes.

Despite the group's dedication, though, Mrs. James says they're only skimming the surface.

"There are dozen more nursing homes in the area where the chronically mentally ill aren't visited," she says.

Mrs. James, who is chairman of the group known as "Visitors for Special Care Homes", explains that volunteers play bingo with patients, lead sing songs and folk dances or teach a simple craft.

An off shoot of the newly defunct local mental health association, the Visitors is associated with the Mental Health Association of Ontario.

Mrs. James says the group also works to help establish community support for former mental health patients and to foster community acceptance of mental illnesses as "just another disease."

As for the volunteers themselves, Mrs. James says "all they have to be is a person who genuinely wants to befriend people who need help, people who need some companionship.

"What we give them is a few smiles".

Mrs. James can be reached at 968-6899.

Ann Landers

'Mom' or 'Helen'?

Dear Ann Landers: I am 34 and in my eighth month of pregnancy. My husband and I are having the same argument for the third time, and still we can't get together on a decision. It's over what our child should call us.

Just was raised in an informal household. He wants the child to call us by our first names. He claims it will remove certain artificial barriers and make the child feel closer to us.

I am against it. I feel the child should call his parents Mother and Dad as a matter of respect. Am I right or is Jud?—Name withheld

Dear N.: I know parents who trained their children to call them Mother Jack and the kids turned out just fine. I also know parents who insisted that their children call them Mother and Dad and the kids are plenty messed up.

It's not what you call them that's important. It's how they feel about you that matters. Personally, I prefer Mother and Dad because it helps put the relationship in the proper perspective. Children can have a great many pals, but they can have only one mother and dad.

Dear Ann Landers: I've done a great deal of reading, but I've seen nothing on the danger of marrying an only child. If I could find a book on the subject soon, I just might write one myself.

Why is it that of all the columns written by Ann Landers, you have never dealt with this problem? It exists, you know. I married a woman who is living proof.

The only child desperately needs to be right all the time. Also there's a total disregard for compromise. The only child is rarely on time. "I'll be there in a minute," can mean anything from 30 minutes to an hour later.

"Me First, Mine" syndrome is especially noticeable in the child who never had to share with a brother or sister. The singleton tends to be a lopsided lover but a very good giver.

My advice to anyone who is considering marriage to an only child is, DON'T.—Massachusetts Reader

Dear Mass: Sorry, I don't buy it. I have known only children who have none of the qualities described in your letter, not these same qualities are painfully present in children who come from large families.

Generalizations are often wrong. And this one most certainly is.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a girl 18, who hasn't too many things to complain about compared with some of the letters I read in your column.

One little thing does bother me a lot and I'm sure you can help me. My best friend hangs around with me because she is guilty about my looks. She has told me several times that she's really crazy about Ray and asks a million questions about what goes on in his life.

I don't want to lose her friendship, but I hate being used. What do you think I should do?—Ambivalent in Canada

Dear Am: If all girls who hang around certain friends because they were ugly about their brothers were lined up, they'd reach from Toronto to Quebec City.

This is the oldest story in the world, and usually the brother is on to it. Such girls are viewed as pests if they hang around too much. Most brothers would rather chase than be caught.

Second Glance

By Vyv Richmond Graham

CONCERNING A CANADIAN WRITER: CONSTANCE BERESFORD - HOWE

"Morgrove she has definitely the story-teller's gift — - " — John Courtos.

This morning, in the Corby Library, we noted a book entitled THE BOOK OF EVE by Constance Beresford - Howe — one of her latest novels.

The author of the writer sent our minds back to the mid-forties, in Montreal where we were invited to attend a meeting of a Literary Club to hear a young Montreal novelist speak.

Here is an account we recorded of that meeting :

"Our speaker this evening will be Constance Beresford Howe," announces the Chairman.

Not knowing the various members, you swiftly try to guess which is she. Your eyes travel over several likely prospects. You notice, also, a youngish person whose effortless face is framed in a halo of dusky hair.

"That child," you remember thinking should be home tucked in bed."

That's why, when Miss Beresford Howe is finally introduced, that dusky person stands up, you feel considerably abashed!

Slender, straight as an arrow, wearing a shaft of white carnations pinned to the neck of her black dress, she confidently addresses the audience.

She tells how an idea teased her brain for an novel to the extent that she had to write it down to get it out of her system. After much hesitation she sent it off to the Dodd-Mead Literary contest "quite confident it would be sent back: Instead a telegram arrived saying she had won the $1200 prize and later attended a reception the company gave for all prize winners. The novel was THE UNREASONING HEART.

"The fact," she says, "that I was a Canadian was no hindrance. On the contrary, the policy of the company to encourage writers as they do is most praise worthy. They not only encourage you, but give you valuable assistance. I owe much to their wise counsel."

As you listen to this twenty-three year old writer, who has found time to graduate from McGill in Honor English, receiving the Shakespeare Gold Medal for Highest Standing in English and the Peterson Memorial Prize for Creative writing, who takes her Masters of Arts degree in May and who plans to attend Brown's University to work on her Ph.D., you are filled with amazement and admiration.

Later, we met her mother, Mrs. Beresford-Howe, who told us that her daughter began to read at the age of three, devouring books like Pearl Buck's GOOD EARTH when she was nine. She spent every spare moment writing, always writing when most girls her age were playing with dolls.

"I have always told her," Mrs. Beresford-Howe concluded, "that to be a writer one must write, for like any other talent, the ability grows only by use, by practise. Otherwise it —simply wastes away."

Successful Living

Old Folks Gain Nothing By Banking Gift Money

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We are an old couple with seven children all grown up. On birthdays and Christmas they always give us cash.

We have been banking the money, but if we die the bank freezes it and we would need a lawyer to get it out. Is there some way one can arrange things so that when we die the children can take it out of the bank without having to pay a lawyer?

There is not enough in them for two.

Constant Readers.

Dear Constant: It is not the spirit of those gifts to just bank your money, now is it? Your children want you to spend it.

Meanwhile, I suppose you keep on wearing the same clothes and jewellery you have had for years, sitting on the same old-fashioned furniture. How long since you have taken a trip to a faraway place? If you spend the gifts the children give, they will love you and sometime you'll have fun for it. You can still People with a capital P.

New for your question: No bank account is frozen before $2,500, and if you wouldn't have one of your children as a joint tenant of that bank account, you could be the survivor and could divide it up among the others.

But that wouldn't be my solution. You each make a separate will, stating your desires, with a lawyers know how to make a will out in plain, ambiguous language. Without them you may leave something undone and not figured at later in court, possibly with some bitterness.

CAC Looks at Autos

CALGARY (CP) — The Consumers' Association of Canada has called on the federal government to investigate discrepancies in consumer goods pricing and asked for legislation to help the consumer shop with confidence.

The association's 1974-75 consumer theme is the automobile. Its 37th annual meeting ends today following a speech by Low-ell Dodge of Washington, director of the U.S. Centre for Auto Safety, who has served as an alternate for consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Further resolutions were to be discussed in the last day of the three-day conference, including one on electric kettles manufactured with lead solders. That resolution asks for a recall of leaded releasing hazardous amounts of lead in boiling water.

One of 13 resolutions adopted Tuesday said: even with the variance of sales tax and distribution costs, the prices of numerous products "are higher than seem justified" in Western areas of the country.

Some eastern delegates, mostly from the Montreal area, abstained from voting on the resolution, which asked the department of consumer and corporate affairs to "undertake substantial research, at least on a sample basis, into the costs, profit margins and efficiency of the process of distribution of numerous products to remote areas within Canada."

"We suspect there is some profiteering at the local level," said Betty Kertuk of Cranbrook, a member of the British Columbia delegation which proposed the resolution. She said B.C. lumber, apple and salmon are sold cheaper in population centres outside the province than in remote areas of B.C.

The Quebec delegation reported increasing incidence of accidental poisoning of children under five and asked for federal legislation requiring the use of child-resistant containers and packaging for all forms of potentially hazardous drugs.

A resolution introduced by Nova Scotia asked all levels of government to promote efficient urban public transportation systems to reduce the use of the private automobile.

Certain of trifles and shotguns sold by mail or telephone, measures to protect credit-card holders from paying unnecessary interest charges, the posting of prices on prescription drugs and the use of standardized soft-drink containers were called for in other resolutions.

James O'Grady, an Ottawa lawyer elected president of the association, replacing Margot Brechin of Etobicoke, Ont., said the association membership, at 110,000, should be higher.

"We should double or triple our membership. When we have a larger membership, we will be able to finance projects which we are unable to do now."

Magic Lady
By Cassie
How much you gain think about it? I don't know but I really can't believe everything I read in the newspapers. Some of the articles are late Sunday evenings have my mind all mixed up, after a day at the beach, knowing it has to look decent for the next day. Then I read about the "Dead Sea" test! This is an interesting process! Eat after covering most of the body with mud. Then have you get pretty as the store with the cosmetics. Now I'm not sure if I'm going to try it or not. Do you feel that your daily's or today's paper is the best source to get all the get your hair set, your manicure? If you do, you're wrong! If you're a reader of the Magic Lady, you're not pretty poorly. Well, a city is not complete without its daily newspaper, let alone the fact reliable one. Now I'm not saying that I'm the best one around, but I'm close.
Pictured above is my poor husband, FREDDA. You just should see him on "poor" days! He's not to bad to care, since he's not a man of many words. Now I'm not saying that he's not a man of many words, but THIS WEEK I've heard 37½ a week. I'm not complaining, but I'm sure that I'm not the only one with a husband and babysitter. Come on in and discover a world of wonderful things to purchase, the world of Magic Lady.

Canada World Youth Arranges Exchanges

OTTAWA (CP) — Attention, young Canadians: if you want an all-expense-paid chance to exchange living conditions with foreign young people, get in touch with Canada World Youth.

But be prepared to spend close to a year living in fairly rough conditions, working on projects here and abroad.

Canada World Youth was formed with federal financing early in 1972. By September of that year 150 Canadians had been selected to work in five countries, most of them underdeveloped, on projects that included building or repairing community buildings, agricultural and reforestation programs and various types of food, wood and fish conservatives.

They were divided into groups of 16. Assisted by group leaders, they spent three months learning the culture and language of the country to which they were assigned. Then they worked on projects in various parts of Canada to learn about country living and the basic skills they would need in the exchange countries.

They then spent about 4½ months living and working in one of five foreign countries, followed by another 4½ months with their young people working on projects in Canada.

In 1972-74 the number of participating countries increased to 11. The first six-month training period was cut to one month but other aspects of the program remained much the same.

Pierre Bourdon, executive director of Canada World Youth, says changes will be made.

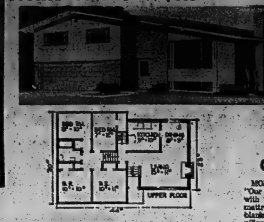
The project should offer more challenges to its participants, he said during a recent Ottawa conference to review international youth-exchange programs. Delegates from 39 countries attended.

As it is now, participants in the 16-person groups feel that "even if the crops are bad, there will be enough money on the table," Mr. Bourdon said. "We shouldn't over-protect them."

Participants should be encouraged to take more responsibility for their living conditions, said Mr. Bourdon, a member of a federal committee that recommended establishing Canada World Youth.

He also said he hopes Canada World Youth's five regional offices will establish greater contact with small communities across the country to learn how exchange program participants can best serve the communities they temporarily live in.

There should be greater contact also with schools and universities to encourage them to think of Canada World Youth programs as a supplementary source of education.



Participants should be allowed to count their experience abroad as credit towards college diplomas or university degrees.

Canada World Youth receives $2 million a year from the secretary of state's department of state for urban affairs. Participating foreign countries pay the rest so there are no expenses for young people and families.

Applicants are first chosen to represent a cross-section of young Canadians from different regions, social classes, income groups and educational and language backgrounds.

They must be between 18 and 20.

Even Flowers Can Teach At School for Handicapped

CHESTER, N.S. (CP) — Everything in a teacher's at the Stoney Lea Farm, even the walls and the flowers.

The training school for the handicapped — which built last summer on 25 acres of rolling timber and meadowland seven miles from this seaside village, surrounding spot for its well-being.

It's a typical day at the farm at the emotionally handicapped child, unable to cope with classes of classmates today, wanders into the calendula. They are entertained and lets the child watch him making pastries.

Or the child might drift into the office and watch the secretary type a letter. Then he taps outside and watches chores on the living animals.

He may have learned nothing in the classroom, but he's learned something about cooking, office work and nature. But as an emotionally handicapped child it is something to begin on.

With that kind of learning in mind the school has been designed to make the handicapped at ease. The main building, designed by architect Alan Lorimer of Halifax and Chester, is full of the warm and stimulating textures of real wood. The exterior is of rough cedar shakes and the interior is done entirely with varnished pine. Its 22 doors open out to picturesque fields and woods with house-sized boulders and contrasting the original Victorian farmhouse and barn and farm animals.

The buildings and grounds are a reflection of the wealthy Chester couple whose vision was the creating force: it is a deluxe example of humanity in institution could be.

"We spend a lot of time with flowers," said David Olsting, young principal of the farm.

"Sonny Lea is an attitude towards socializing — a willingness to accept these kids as individuals."

He admits he was chosen as principal partly because he is not easily frustrated.

The farm has had 21 students since it opened last September and plans to reach a maximum of 70 by fall. The students range in age from five to 9 years, although almost all are children. They come mainly from the South Shore area and are from all economic classes.

The farm takes in all types of handicapped persons — the retarded, the culturally deprived and the emotionally disturbed, as well as those with hearing disabilities or other physical handicaps. Three of its students are blind.

"People say you should not mix disabilities," Mr. Olsting said. "Our attitude is 'Why not?'"

Each child is taken on a one-to-one basis, those with one major disability can be helped by those whose disabilities are different.

"What we try to do is to get the kids with emotional disabilities to the level where they can cope.

"You have to start with what these kids can do. If Johnny knows only the word 'cat,' that's where you start.

"We don't use IQ here. IQ does not mean anything except the capabilities of a child to memorize or to puts pencil to paper. But what about the child who has a high intelligence but can't communicate?"

So the farm tries to bring out the child's ability to communicate.

"We exude learning situations out of everything in the building."

A child can learn something, even by watching the dishwasher, the janitor or farm the cow.

The farm also provides learning of the conventional type in classrooms, in a number of well-equipped workshops, crafts and pottery shops, and in the outdoors.

The ultimate aim is to bring the students to a level at which they can cope especially in the rural communities from which most of them have come.

The inspiration for the farm originated with Dr. and Mrs. David Baker, a wealthy couple formerly from Sylvania but now year-round residents of Chester, where they had summered for years.

The third of the Bakers' six children is a victim of cerebral palsy. Her name is Stoney Lea and it is after her the farm has been named.

Coffins Can Hold Caterpillers

MONROE, Conn. (AP) — "Our coffins are nice boxes, with satin-lined foam rubber mattresses, with lace satin blankets and lace-covered satin pillows. They serve as both coffin and vault, are airtight and watertight and have bronze handles."

And some are only 18 inches long.

For more than a year the Hughes and Chapman Movement Co. has been selling these luxury coffins for pets. The one described above held a parakeet.

"If your grandfather died, why would you purchase a coffin? Because you love him," said laudable Jennings, company vice-president. "Our coffins are for pets that are loved."

Since her company branched out from monuments for people she has sold 170 animal coffins to creatures ranging from caterpillars to dogs.

"We're able to fill most requests, but once someone asked for a coffin the size of a horse; we couldn't fill that one."

The coffins cost from $11 to $165.

"It's not just the rich who bury their pets in coffins," she said. "It's people who love their pets and don't want them just thrown into the ground.

"I got the idea from my brother in Florida. He and his provides coffins but also holds mourning services and burials for up to $350."

Some of her customers request markers. The monuments have the pet's head carved on them and some are inscribed with words of endearment such as "My Little Angel" and "My Darling Pet."

Monuments start at $85. For cremated pets, the company sells stainless steel ash urns for $36.

Machine Robbed

Belleville police are investigating a break-in that ssisted thieves approximately $5 in cash from a soft drink machine in the cafeteria at Deacon Brothers' Ltd. on Dundas Street East late Wednesday.

Police report thieves broke a window on the south east rear side of the building late last night or early this morning and entered the cafeteria where they jimmied the soft drink machine.

Hammer Heisted

Thieves stole a jackhammer, valued at approximately $600, from a construction site in the northwest Belleville park here some time Tuesday.

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie reported the theft today after construction workers found the hammer was missing a 8 a.m. Tuesday.

The hammer was leased out to the Hughes Construction Ltd. and was being used at the International Cooperage site in the industrial park.

Hospital Becomes Fine Hotel

MEENAH, Wis. (AP) — What should a hospital, do when there aren't enough sick people to fill all the beds?

At Theda Clark Memorial Hospital, they rented the beds to healthy folks. In fact, a whole floor has become a residential luxury hotel.

Confronted with the dilemma of unused beds, space and facilities, hospital officials converted the top floor of the six-story hospital into the Meinen Ste. Hotel.

Gerald Aldridge, president of the hospital, said the 44-unit hotel—which he believes is the only residential hotel in the United States actually located in a hospital—meets a housing need in the community.

At the same time, it allows the hospital to have unused space and idle beds into a healthy profit.

Aldridge said the rent, $325 a month for single rooms and $375 for two-room suites, is reasonable, considering the services.

Residents are provided food, furniture, color TV, laundry, housekeeping and a full range of activities from sewing to ceramics.

They can be prepared in the hospital cafeteria, but residents are served at their private dining room.

They have whatever they want from the extensive hospital menu," said Aldridge. "The food is delectable, not at all like most hospitals."

There are two small kitchenettes each stocked with fruit and snacks the residents can keep for their own refrigerators.

Residents come and go at will and entertain in the lounges, banquet rooms and dining room. Some have cars they leave in the hospital parking lot but most prefer to go to nearby stores, libraries and theatres in the company of other residents.

Aldridge said most of the residents will probably be elderly but he emphasized that anyone can live at Meinen Ste.

"This is not a nursing home," he said. "This is a place strictly for people who are healthy and can take care of themselves with no constant medical attention. It's aimed towards the person who wants to live independently and comfortably without having to manage a home. There is no feeling of a hospital here."

However, most of the 19 residents who have moved in since the hotel opened in April say living in a hospital will probably be much advantage of Meinen Ste.

"That's like security," said Alice Jones, 86, looking out a large window at a panoramic view of the Fox River spilling over a series of small dams far below.

"If I live near the hospital and have a heart attack, it takes them at least four minutes to get to me. But here, if I have a heart attack, help is less than two minutes away. What better place is there to be safely than on top of a hospital?"

Hastings Liberal candidate

Marie Kurchak Chosen

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Quinte politics has a fresh personality — Marie Kurchak, first woman to fight a federal election in the Belleville area.

The young journalist and television producer was acclaimed Liberal candidate for Hastings Thursday night — and fielded serious new statements in the area's traditional political environment.

The politician must take a stronger, more responsible role if cynicism — caused by political opportunism — is to turn people off public involvement, she warned.

But, in what was her first political speech, Mrs. Kurchak was also partisan.

Implementation of conservative price and income controls would swell government bureaucracy which the Tories already are criticizing, she said.

No longer, she told the convention at the Belle Theatre, can Canada's democratic system tolerate the politician who neglects real issues, just to score points with hometown voters.

"It's the role of the Opposition . . . to criticize. But our system can no longer tolerate politicians who exaggerate and distort to make hay for themselves," she said, striking long applause.

The complexity of modern problems demand work on every level.

"We can't tolerate the political jockeying and distortion," said Mrs. Kurchak. "It is immoral. It's irresponsible and it's disloyal to this country . . . It erodes the democratic institutions by turning people off political participation."

At 28, Mrs. Kurchak also is the youngest candidate to contest the riding. Raised in Toronto, she had earlier explained her bid for the Hastings nomination was a deliberate personal choice and not a parachute candidacy by Liberal party headquarters. She and her husband Bill, 29-year-old television writer and producer, have been making a residence in the Hastings County area for more than a year, she said.

Her nomination was unopposed and the Kurchak bid the only proposal put before the convention.

Problems demand a positive approach because society is tired of "negativity". In that vein, she criticized Jack Ellis — her Conservative opponent and MP in the last parliament — for "harping" on the Unemployment Insurance Commission issues.

The upheavals wrought by social change in recent years have made young people casualties.

They've turned off and become apathetic because they've seen a hypocritical world.

Positive attitudes are needed to offset the problem, said Mrs. Kurchak. Liberal government policies have taken an "imaginative" approach to social problems. Although not perfect, many not be apparent for years.

The Liberal government has taken steps to protect consumers threatening evasion of farm production.

"It's time the farmers have to have a good economic proposition if they focus on their land . . . until a couple of years ago farmers faced bankruptcy.

The Conservative prices and incomes controls program would also hit farmers since some high-cost foods have to be imported.

But the Conservatives contradict themselves, said Mrs. Kurchak.

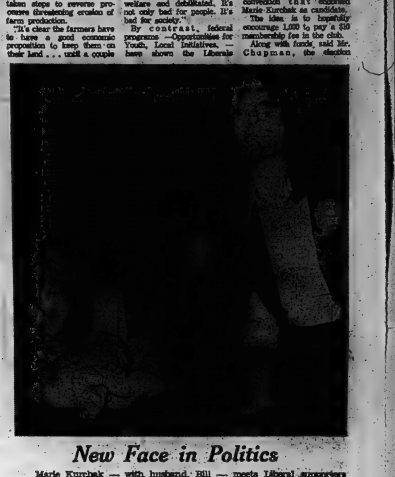
"They'd have to hire a pretty big bureaucracy to do its controlling. If you want to control and regulate anything you've got to . . . hire people to do the regulating. And that's going to cost, people."

When Conservatives criticize welfare, she said, they should be reminded it's a provincial jurisdiction. And in Ontario, provincial programs "are guaranteed to keep people dependent on welfare and debilitated. It's not only bad for people. It's bad for society."

By contrast, federal programs — Opportunities for Youth, Local Initiatives, have shown the Liberals respect personal independence and expect people to "pull up their own socks".

Mrs. Kurchak's nomination was moved by party treasurer Kerry Sedan and seconded by Mrs. Effie McCabe, long-time party worker.

Organization for Mrs. Kurchak will head all kinds of volunteers".



Liberals Have New Scheme

The Liberals in Hastings riding have come up with a new project to raise campaign funds.

It's called the Thousand for Ten Club, announced by riding president Frank Chapman at the nominating convention that endorsed Marie Kurchak as candidate.

The idea is to hopefully encourage 1,000 to pay a $10 membership fee in the club.

Along with funds, said Mr. Chapman, the election

New Face in Politics

Marie Kurchak — with husband, Bill — meets Liberal supporters Thursday after nomination as candidate to contest Hastings riding in July 8 election. The 28-year-old Toronto television journalist and communications expert is the first woman to run in the federal constituency.

Home Again

Eight pioneers, the first Canadian students to participate in the Belleville - Lahr exchange program, returned last night on a Canadian Armed Forces flight after nine months in Germany. The eight Lahr students now in the city will return in Germany June 20. Lined up to go through immigration are Linda Bellfey, Mike Neville, Jennifer Hamilton, Rosemarie Gauthier, Jim Colrum, Sue Rose and Delaine Brown. Missing is the eighth student, Clyde Dawson.

Board Protests Hydro Route

Quinte Planning Board members expressed strong disapproval with Ontario Hydro's proposal to run a 115,000 volt line on the eastern outskirts of Belleville to serve Prince Edward County on Thursday.

Hydro representative, Ron Miller told board members that the line is only an alternative the utility is currently reviewing. It would run along a proposed north - south arterial road in Belleville and along an existing easement, he said.

Two 44,000 volt lines now use an abandoned railway right-of-way in the area. This, said Mr. Miller, would be used by the higher voltage line.

Strong opposition to the line in the more eastern townships forced Hydro to look at the Belleville corridor alternative, said Mr. Miller.

Speaking against Hydro's proposal, deputy director Frank Sickmans said the route is not acceptable.

"It would be directly in line with possible expansion of Belleville in the future," he said.

"As staff, we can't understand why you have to go all the way west to Belleville and then all the way south to serve Picton.

Mr. Sickmans said he could not understand why Hydro does not use a more direct route from the Ontario Generating Station at Bath to Picton.

In a letter to Hydro, planner Stewart Murray noted: "It would appear to be more logical to supply electricity to the county by means of a 230 KV line following a direct route from Lennox GS across Adolphus Reach."

Mr. Sickmans said too many unknowns exist in Belleville's east and the western parts of Thurlow townships to peg a corridor alternative there.

During the meeting, Mayor Robin Jeffrey stressed her strong objection to any lines serving the county coming near Belleville.

Museum's Displays Now on Location

History hit the road early this week in Hastings County as three Belleville residents completed a four-month Local Initiatives Project at Hastings Heritage House, the Hastings County Museum.

The LIP grant that provided winter employment for Jack Frame, Carol Carruthers and Mary Jane Hale also provided Hastings County with its first museum exhibition circuit".

As a result of the trio's work in sorting through the artifacts stored at Glanmore House and setting up display cases, eight Hastings communities — Tweed, Coe Hill, Stirling, Trenton, Madoc, Marmora, Campbellford and Bancroft — are now sporting a historical display that depicts some special aspect of early pioneer life in Hastings County.

The three LIP workers spent their winter and spring setting up a series of eight displays that will circulate about the county on a six-week rotational basis in each of the eight mentioned communities.

Jay Bascroft, the local museum proudly displays an exhibition entitled Tills and Flounces that describes the early art of dress making.

In Tweed, the tourist centre sports a display case that is built around the theme of General Stores and exhibits a variety of goods that normally have been found in those staid old buildings.

The display in the town hall at Coe Hill centres on the theme of Shoe Making, and includes in its exhibit a wooden cobbler's last, an old cobbler's hammer, a repair box and various cobbler's tools.

The Stirling council chambers is the site of a display that depicts the early arts of spinning, dying and weaving — complete with rug hooks, samples of natural vegetable-dyed materials, a miniature loom and woven rugs.

The public library in Trenton is currently reliving its School Days with a special display case that depicts the days of the old country schoolroom. The exhibition shows a display of slates, slate pencils, an old hardcover pencil sharpener, old textbooks and an old lunch (lard) pail.

In Madoc, the theme of the exhibit at the library is Fashions and the display proudly holds a variety of old togs and bobbies, home store building blocks and an old pair of lace-to-shins.

The exhibit in Marmora's bank is entitled Early Kitchens and it displays a set of squire paintings, a flat iron, a cuttlebone wood-rasp stove and some candle moulds.

In Deseronto the museum exhibit set up in the library is centred on the theme of Maple Sugaring — Pioneer Style. The display outlines the pioneer's method of tapping maple trees and preparing the sugar and syrup.

Under the new exhibition circuit, all of the displays will eventually find their way into the care of each of the eight communities and after a six-week period will be replaced by a new exhibit.

Eventually, the Hastings County Historical Society hopes to see each of the communities develop their own displays and there in turn will be put into circulation around the county.

Trial Ordered

A Belleville man, Harold George Marshall, has been ordered to stand trial on charges of assault causing bodily harm and wilful damage over $50 following a preliminary hearing in provincial court here yesterday.

Marshall is charged with having assaulted Lloyd Lake, of 90 Byron St., Belleville, with a pick axe handle and with having allegedly smashed the windshield and having ripped the mirrors off Lake's 1968 model car last Feb. 9.

Judge T. Y. Wills ordered Marshall to stand trial after having heard the evidence of three witnesses during a preliminary hearing in provincial court here yesterday.

Two cyclists escaped injury Thursday following a two-car collision at the intersection of Highway 37 and Thurlow sympathy concession road five.

Cecil Plaehn, of RR4, Trenton and Gregory Ross Jessup, of RR1, Corbyville sustained no injuries.

Belleville provincial police are still investigating the incident. Damage is unknown.

Man Must Stand Trial

A Belleville man, Allen Leo Molloy, has been ordered to stand trial on a charge of indecent assault on a female following a preliminary hearing in provincial court here yesterday.

Molloy is charged with having assaulted a female in an incident at a Wareham Street home last Feb. 22.

Judge T. Y. Wills ordered Molloy to stand trial after he heard the evidence of five witnesses during a preliminary inquiry in provincial court yesterday.

Stollery Defends Jobless Payments

Canada's unemployment insurance system does not reward the unemployed, Canada is the target for "wild and unfounded remarks," Peter Stollery, MP for Spadina in the last parliament said Thursday night.

In the past year, payments under the scheme have averaged $37 a week to claimants, he told a nonfarming convention of Hastings riding Liberals at the Belle Theatre.

Mr. Stollery, who was vice-chairman of the Congress manpower and immigration committee, seized the opportunity at convention keynote speaker to counter-attack conservative Jack Ellis, the riding's last MP and a critic of unemployment insurance.

"Don't for God's sake, let people run that program into the ground," said Mr. Stollery.

Critics of the program don't have their facts straight, he claimed. Anybody with a minimum of brains about how that program works can refute people like Mr. Ellis."

In the past year payments under the scheme have averaged only $67 a week, said Mr. Stollery.

"How can anyone tell...this is a dis-incentive for working. Can anyone live ... on $67 a week in 1974. I don't believe it."

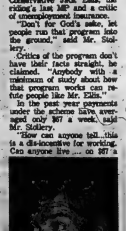
Under new legislation introduced two years ago, the program is now better enforced and its harder to abuse the system.

Claimants must now prove they are actively searching for jobs - a contrast with earlier years when they were permitted people to work in warm weather then quit for three months on full benefits.

Once a common practice with many, new rules now make such claims for jobless benefits impossible.

Also overlooked is the fact the current program was not designed to be self-sufficient for four years. This was to encourage professional groups to join, thus making unemployment insurance universal. Such groups pay premiums on a gradually mounting scale until the fourth year.

Peter Stollery also said the prices and incomes control program proposed by the Conservatives has been discredited.



"I don't think anybody believes it. I don't think the Conservatives believe it," he said.

In fact, the Conservatives don't have a workable policy for anything. Their main policy is history."

The Liberal minority government has passed "very important legislation" during the 15 months of its life, he said.

Under the Liberals Canada has had first-class government with sound policies and a remarkable prime minister.

"The future is bright," said Mr. Stollery. Canada has a good government. We are the envy of the world. And if we can't sell that to the Canadian people then there is something wrong," he said.

Teacher Wins Lion's Chevy

Schoolteacher Alice Lawlor won't have to worry about driving in the car she has been thinking about.

Last night, Mrs. Lawlor of 28 Bunton Street won a 1974 Chevy Nova in the Lions Club Draw at Ben Memorial Auditorium.

Proceeds from the draw went to the Special Olympics for the Mentally Retarded in Winnipeg next week.

A cheque for $3,000 the net proceeds from the draw, was presented to Rick Johnston of the William R. Kirk School by Lions president, Bill Rose. Rick is one of 40 young people in Hastings County taking part in the Olympics. They leave next Thursday to go to Winnipeg.

Mrs. Lawlor was at home talking on the phone when notified that she had won. She says she didn't believe it at first and had almost forgotten she had bought the ticket. Two Lions representatives had difficulty convincing her of this fact when they arrived to inform her she won.

She said she bought only one ticket at the Quinte Mall in March. Mrs. Lawlor teaches at St. Joseph's School.

"This is the first time I've ever won anything," she said, after sitting in front seat of her new Red Nova.

Jack Ellis made the draw.

Woman Hurt In Collision

A Deseronto woman was treated and released from Belleville General Hospital following a single-car accident in the westbound lanes of Highway 401, three miles east of the Shannonville - Gravel Thursday.

Darlene Sodergquist 22, of 205 Thomas St., Deseronto, sustained a fractured jaw and abrasions to her arms and legs in the accident.

Drivers Threaten Work Stoppage

The private truckers who haul sand, soil and gravel for contractors will talk a work stoppage in Belleville Sunday.

The meeting will be held at Belleville-area members of the Ottawa Truckers Association, Belleville - Kingston branch, who are disgruntled over going rental rates.

A work stoppage has been in force in the Kingston district — where the group has more members — since June 1.

Mary O'Neill, a dump truck operator and driver in the Belleville area, says the truckers are seeking $16 an hour for running their trucks. Rising costs necessitate the hike.

At present, the provincial government's transportation and communications ministry pays $12 hourly, which she says is "the minimum wage."

Nonetheless, one big road contractor in the Belleville area is currently paying only about $11 an hour, says the spokesman.

"The Belleville meeting will be held at the Black Horse motel at 1:30 p.m. when the truckers will discuss allowing new members as well as work stoppage possibilities,

Basically, Beta's plan calls for development of 90 acres of complete land use by Beta Balsam as a first stage in Sidney Centre, the site for one subdivision is part of a development to be between 1,000 acres of land in Sidney and Murray townships into a residential and recreational haven.

In the process, Frankford and Balsam would be melded into community of approximately 5,000 people along the west bank of the Trent River.

Mr. Hanna told the board Beta's plan is now ready for subdivision registration.

He asked members to indicate support in order to speed processing at the provincial level.

Speaking against board approval, Leonard Reid, Frankford, council board appointee, said, "Until we have something on the official plan and know what will be done with the bay - a new rescue van got a big boost during the week as the Hastings — Prince Edward Firefighters Mutual Aid Association donated $50 toward the project.

Earlier in the week, a private donation from a Roslin resident boosted the fund by an additional $15.

The Corbyville firefighters are seeking to raise approximately $7,000 so that they can purchase and build a new rescue van.

At present, the firefighters operate a small second-hand vehicle previously struck that is completely outfitted with rescue gear. They need a new truck since the old one is now too small to carry all the equipment they have collected over the years.

In the past, the volunteers have been instrumental in helping police free accident victims from wrecks along Highway 401.

Anyone who is interested in helping the volunteers can send their donations to the Corbyville Rescue Squad, Corbyville, Ont.

At present, the firefighters operate a small second-hand vehicle previously struck that is completely outfitted with rescue gear. They need a new truck since the old one is now too small to carry all the equipment they have collected over the years.

In the past, the volunteers have been instrumental in helping police free accident victims from wrecks along Highway 401.

Anyone who is interested in helping the volunteers can send their donations to the Corbyville Rescue Squad, Corbyville, Ont.

Wind Hurts, Cards Blow Lead

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco Giants literally won in a breeze Thursday.

Aided by Candlestick Park wind, the Giants scored seven runs in the fourth inning and went on to beat St. Louis Cardinals 8-2.

"Candlestick is by far the toughest park to play outfield in the National League," said St. Louis centrefielder Luis Melendez.

Melendez lost a flyball during that wild fourth inning and it cost the Cardinals three runs. Frustrated centre Gary Matthews' wind-blown double with the bases loaded. Melendez noted: "All you can go by is the sound of the ball hitting the bat. It sounded hard hit, so I started back. But the wind held it up and I ran as hard as I could but couldn't get to it."

The wind also pestered St. Louis' starter Lynn McGlothen, who held a 3-0 lead before he was blown out of the game in the fourth.

"I had great stuff and when I got that 3-0 lead, I thought I was in control," said McGlothen, a former American Leaguer. "But I just couldn't adjust to the wind."

In the other National League games, New York Mets nudged Cincinnati Reds 4-3; Houston Astros beat Montreal Expos 4-0; Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 6-0 and Chicago Cubs beat San Diego Padres 5-1.

Lou Brock's walk, run-scoring double by Tom Heintzelman and Reggie Smith and Joe Torre's RBI single produced a 3-0 lead off Mike Caldwell in the first inning as St. Louis chased the Giants' ace left-hander.

One-out singles by Gary Thomasson and Bruce Miller sparked the seven-run fourth off McGlothen, 7-3.

John Milner hit a leadoff home run against reliever Pedro Borbon in the eighth inning, tilting New York over Cincinnati.

Milner's shot, his ninth of the season, travelled 420 feet and broke a 3-2 tie in the game. The Mets had come from behind with two runs in the seventh on Cleon Jones' single to even the game. Borbon's pitch to the Mets' first baseman in the eighth was a misplaced fastball. Said the pitcher-pitcher: "It's supposed to go out. Instead it goes in."

Lee May hit two bases-empty home runs and Larry Dierker pitched a three-hitter, pacing Houston over Montreal.

May opened the fourth inning with a home run and then hit another one, his ninth of the baseball season, in the sixth. Both blasts were off Montreal right hander Steve Rogers, 3-6.

The Astros scored two runs in the second inning when Doug Rader produced an RBI double and later scored on a wild pitch.

Dierker, 3-2, allowed an infield single to Ron Hunt in the third inning and two hits—to Willie Davis, a single in the sixth and a double in the ninth.

Andy Messersmith pitched his second straight shutout with a five-hitter and Ron Cey blasted a two-run homer, leading Los Angeles over Pittsburgh.

Messersmith, 5-5, permitted only [illegible] in 10.

Cey slugged his homer in the fourth with Steve Garvey aboard via a single. It was Cey's eighth homer of the baseball season and second in as many days.

The Dodgers chased Pittsburgh starter Ken Brett, 6-4, in the midst of a three-run fifth, featuring a bases-loaded walk to Jimmy Wynn.

Steve Garvey singled home a run for the Dodgers in the seventh, his 48th of the year.

Don Kessinger and Rick Monday each knocked in two runs to help Chicago and left hander Ken Frailing beat San Diego.

Mike Hegan Will Do in a Pinch

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In Milwaukee, pinch-hitters are as popular as prohibitionists and about as successful.

But that was before Mike Hegan.

Hegan, a newcomer to the Milwaukee bench, laced a two-run pinch single Thursday, the first successful Brewer pinch-hit in 34 attempts this season, and the Brewers clumped California Angels 9-7.

Elsewhere in the American League, Texas Rangers dropped Cleveland Indians 6-2 and New York Yankees downed Chicago White Sox 1-0.

In a pinch, the last person you'd call on would be a Milwaukee pinch-hitter. But Calif ornia manager Bobby Winkles left the Brewers little choice.

"I knew they didn't have any right-handed hitters left on the bench — except Bob Collucio," said Winkles, explaining why he replaced right-handed pitcher Skip Lockwood for lefty John Cumberland in the seventh inning.

"I knew Collucio had been hurt and I wasn't sure he was able to hit."

Milwaukee manager Del Crandall, who later confirmed Collucio was unable to hit, was forced to send up the left-handed-hitting Hegan.

Hegan had never faced Cumberland before, but he consulted his team-mates.

"They told me he has a big breaking ball, so I tried to lean up to the plate," said Hegan, recently acquired from New York Yankees. "In that situation, I wasn't trying for a home run. I just wanted to make sure he didn't strike me out."

Jackie Brown threw a big curve at the Cleveland Indians—they wanted fastballs and he fed them something considerably slower.

"I don't think I have any special spell over the Indians," said the Texas pitcher who blanked Cleveland 2-0 last week. They are basically a fastball-hitting team and my best pitch is a curve ball. It's just coincidence that I've been lucky."

Brown, who pitched a seven-hitter, received seven runs, two of them in a three-run Texas second inning in support of Jackie Brown.

Chicago's George Medich scattered 10 hits and the Yankees were deprived, former teammate Stan Bahnsen of his 100th major league victory in his fifth straight unsuccessful bid.

Black Diamond Ties Lenders

Black Diamond stretched its undefeated string in the Industrial Softball League to four games last night, tying the Quinte Hotel Lenders 6-6 in a game at Sir Mackenzie Bowell School.

The team bowled the season with four straight losses.

Jack Francis was the starter on the Diamond mound, going three innings, following all four Lenders' runs. He gave up six hits, walked one and failed to strike out a batter.

Ron Bateman came on in the fourth, giving up no runs on four hits in his four innings. He fanned five and walked none.

Terry Murphy and Mark Sheridan shared the pitching chores for the Lenders, with Murphy going to the bottom of the fourth. Murphy gave up four hits, striking out eight, and walking two.

Sheridan fired the last two and one-third innings, also allowing two runs, on five hits. He walked two and left three batters watching third strike.

Gene Francis cracked a two-run homer for the Diamond in the fifth inning for his big hit, with Jack Francis and Dave Jones adding a double and single each. Bateman had a double in the sixth Ron Henderson, and Bob Neil each drawing a base hit.

Bob Lloyd led the Lenders with two doubles and two singles, with Murphy adding a pair of singles. John Mahoney, Mike Strub, and Larry Parrish rounded out the batting with singles.

In the other game played last night, Mead Johnson defeated Stanley Warner 13-3 to a contest at Prince Charles School.

Wednesday, at Queen Elizabeth School, Ross Geen made four singles and also pitched Brooks Bond past Mead Johnson, 16-1. The only glaring mistake charged to Geen came in the fifth inning when Meads' Wm. Whalen crashed a solo home run.

Over the seven innings, Geen allowed seven hits while fanning none and walking one.

Larry Meads and Vern Whalen divided the pitching chores for the losers. They surrendered 15 hits while walking five. Whalen recorded a pair of strikeouts.

Besides Whalen's circuit clout, Meads got six singles and one of those was supplied by coach Ray Hall in his only trip to the plate. Tim O'Connell, Blaine Young, Charlie Rowbotham, Jim Sopha and Rick May had the others.

Leading the winners' 18-hit attack were Larry Bilbao with a double and two singles, and Ron Stratton who singled three times. Don Goodfellow tripled and singled and Bob Nesbitt met the ball for two singles.

United's Cordeiro Pursues McDonald

A Pair of Runaways And a 2-1 Squeaker

Two Bay of Quinte Soccer Association contests produced runaways for the home clubs Thursday, but in the third, the host squad had to work to pull out a squeaker.

In Cobourg, the home town Tony's disposed of Cooney's Haulage 8-0 while at Trenton's Centennial Park, Whitby Insurance blanked Belleville United side 7-1.

Two unanswered goals in the second half carried Brighton past Canadian Forces Base, Trenton, 2-1 in a match at East Northumberland Secondary School.

Tony's win, the club's fourth against one setback, propelled the high scoring team into undisputed possession of first place with eight points. Just one point back are Whitby and Belleville Parsons, each with seven.

Cobourg scored its goals in bunches. The team whipped in three within 12 minutes in the first half and hit for another three-goal cluster after the interval.

John Van Bolen took care of three Cobourg goals. Alex Eisert converted two cover kicks with headers. Tony Mc-Miller also counted twice. Ben Veenhof had the other goal.

The pitch at Brighton is not the smoothest in the league and the playing conditions appeared to hamper the CFB passing game. However, the club forced the play in the first half and was rewarded on Ron Burkowski's goal with 20 minutes gone.

The goal stood up until the second half when a CFB defender, attempting to clear, saw the ball deflect into the net off Brighton's Gary Murphy.

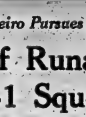
With 15 minutes to play, Bruce Mohr got his head to the ball from a corner kick and Brighton had it won.

Mohr was a standout for the Brighton who also produced use of Jock Thompson's experience.

Playing without the services of Robbie Ryan, Gord Kelly, Robin Barker and Eric Hunt, United gave it a good try at Trenton but got no run of gus in the second half.

United's midfield game suffered when Jim Bryce, team captain, and to take over on goal, He was later relieved by defensive standout Joe Cordeiro.

Whitley's went to the attack early with Jim McDonald finding the mark on a shot to the top of the net. United equalized after Trenton goalie Terry Hore se up an indirect kick when he pushed a Belleville player inside the 18-yard line.



Batista Zanette connected with a hard, low shot and it was 1-1.

Henry Sonneveld took over after that to shoot the home team into a two-goal lead. He converted a ball sent into the area by Ron Cannons on a what turned out to be the winner and later he clicked on a direct free kick from close range.

After the interval, Sonneveld completed his hattrick, teaming up with Lee Taft, Canpons and McDonald.

Before it was over, McDonald joined Sonneveld in the three-goal bracket. On his second counter of the game, he cracked home a pass from Eddie Mullins and on his third, he made bustle pay off.

Mullins completed the scoring in the game with 10 minutes to play.

Triple Jump Record For Trenton Athlete

TORONTO (CP) — Richard Gosselin, a Grade 13 student who doesn't have a coach to train him, broke the existing Canadian record in the men's high jump record Thursday.

Gosselin of Verchenchoyle-Venier collegiate institute athlete jumped six feet, 10 ¼ inches a new provincial record for the men's division at the Ontario Federation of School Athletic Associations track and field championships.

The existing record of 6-4 was held jointly by Quebec's Daniel Hilaire and Dave Mahoney of Hamilton, a British Columbia athlete jumped 6-11 on a meet in Victoria last year. But that record has to be ratified.

Cordero Won't Be Up, Velasques Takes Over

NEW YORK (AP) — Trainer Willie Shoemaker thinks Cannonade could be the fastest three-year-old in the Belmont Stables' stable to become the Kentucky Derby winner wasn't so fast in getting ready for his race.

Maybe I worked Cannonade too fast for the Preakness," Shoemaker said Monday after a flight of 12 was entered for the 1½-mile Belmont.

Cannonade worked a mile in 1:36 1-5 Monday, compared to 1:36 1-5 for Little Current and 1:36 1-5 for Hoston County, and went five-eighths in :59 3-5 and six furlongs in 1:13 2-5 Thursday.

No matter how fast Cannonade goes Saturday, he will run without Angel Cordero who rode him in the Derby and to a third place finish in the Preakness.

The New York State Racing and Wagering Board ruled against Cordero's appeal of a suspension for careless riding last week at Belmont Park. The suspension began last Monday and ends next Monday.

Normally after the board ruled at the Belmont Park meetings, Stephens said he and owner John Olin decided to have Jorge Velasquez to ride Cannonade.

[illegible] ... the early favorite for the June Belmont, scheduled to start about 5:40 p.m. EDT, was Little Current, fifth in the Derby and winner of the Preakness by seven lengths under Miguel Rivera, who will ride again.

Little Current is part of a John Gaines-Smith entry which also includes Covered Postage, winner of two of four career starts, who may be scratched.

Trainer Frank (Pancho) Martinez said Withers winner Accipiter, entered as part of a Sigmond Sommer entry with Robe The Great, also may be scratched. Robe The Great, a three-time stakes winner, was a disappointment in both the Derby and Preakness, finishing 16th and ninth respectively. Accipiter finished 11th in the Derby.

If 12 start, each under 126 pounds, the Belmont will be worth $173,260, with $103,770 to the winner. With 10 starters, the gross will be $170,450 with $102,270 to the winner.

Others entered, with Triple Crown experience, were Hudson County, second in the Derby and eighth in the Preakness; Jolly John, fourth in the Preakness; and Kin Run, fifth in the Preakness.

Gerry Organ

The Demands Beyond Reach

OTTAWA (CP) — Players seeking contracts with Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League increased demands by up to $30,000 says general manager Frank Clair.

"Unless there's a drastic change in the entire situation we're bound to lose a good share of our talent . . . especially-imports . . . to the World Football League in 1975," he said Thursday.

Clair singled out contract talks with veteran Charlie Brandon and field goal specialist Gerry Organ.

"I spoke to Charlie Brandon on the phone earlier this week and his salary demands are simply far beyond our reach," he said.

"The same goes for Gerry Organ, whose agent also wants us to come up with more money than we can possibly afford in the Canadian Football League.

"Salary increase demands we've been asked for range anywhere from $15,000 to $30,000, others want bonuses to further sweeten the pot and they're just not in range," he said.

Clair said Brandon and Organ, the Eastern Football League scoring champion in 1973, are probably planning to play out there option this year with the 1975 Grey Cup champs and his salary demands are pipe dreams.

CFL General Managers Don't Expect Delays

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Most general managers in the Canadian Football League are confident that training camps will open on schedule despite the threat of a league strike.

Meetings between players and managers are scheduled next Wednesday in Calgary and George Reed, CFL Players Association president, said no player will report to camp until a ten-year agreement is signed.

Reed said negotiations would resume after an accounting firm had reviewed financial information supplied by the nine CFL clubs.

Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the CFL, and chairmen of the player-management meetings, said Thursday he saw no cause for alarm "although time is important."

He said the players' association had agreed two weeks ago to look at the statements and then decide whether they wanted an independent auditor to go over the figures.

They just decided to do that at the Calgary meeting and, as far as he was concerned, everything went as expected.

Marv Levy, general manager of Montreal Alouettes and the Eastern Football Conference, said rookies and veteran players are expected in camp June 12 with the rest of the players arriving June 15.

He had not heard about Reed's statement, but expected all his players to be on hand.

The players want a guaranteed minimum salary of $11,000, higher training-camp payments, increased pensions and more money for pre-and post-season play.

The terms have been described by the clubs as "excessive." In order to substantiate that, the owners agreed at the league's semi-annual meetings last week to let the players take a look at their financial statements.

Reed said after the Calgary meeting the financial information was limited to two sheets of paper.

"There were no books, no statements, just that a certain amount of dollars was last last season."

Gaudaur said it may be necessary for the independent auditors to go to the clubs and look "at the work sheets or whatever you would call them, but the owners have agreed to this."

Earl Lunsford, general manager of Edmonton Eskimos, also said he is "optimistic that there will be rational thinking and we'll come to a rational decision."

Lunsford recalled that organizations went in the 11th hour two years ago before the players finally agreed to a two-year pact.

"We're going to operate whatever happens. We've sold a lot of tickets and are going to honor them. If we have to shape up, we'll just have to open camp with the rookies. However, maybe nobody will show up but the rookies," he said.

"We'll just have to play it by ear."

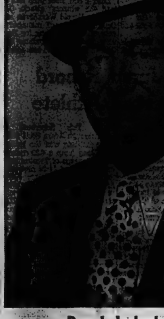
Lunsford said quarterbacks and local players are scheduled to begin unofficial workouts in Winnipeg Monday, with regular training camp workouts to begin Monday, June 17.

B.C. Lions general manager Jackie Parker said the Lions would be going to camp as scheduled, and will play all exhibition games. "We don't have to use rookies."

Bob Ackles, assistant general manager, said all players were due to report for workouts starting in Penticton June 17.

"We plan to go ahead as usual, whether or not the veterans report," Ackles said.

Jim Wood, head coach of the Stampeders, said in Calgary that training camp for his Western Football Conference club would open on schedule, June 15.



He said he refused to worry about the strike threat. "Everything is relative," Wood said. "Whatever happens, will happen to everybody."

Frank Clair, general manager of Ottawa Rough Riders, said he expected the CFL Players' Association position would be settled before it would affect the Riders.

"In any event," Clair said, "the Canadian CFL contract calls for suspension of veterans rejecting terms. Riders' training camp opens next Thursday with a veterans scheduled to report a day earlier. Ottawa quarterbacks and rookies are expected on Tuesday, "to get a good look at them," Clair said.

WORLD CURLING SITE

DULUTH, Minn. (CP) — Duluth has beer selected as site of the 1976 world curling championships, it was announced Thursday. It will be the first time since 1970 that a United States city has played host to the event. Other bidders for the championships were Colorado Springs, Colo., Kitchener-Waterloo, Ont., and Moncton, N.B.

Punch Imlach

Break Out the Bills Says Sabres' Imlach

TORONTO (CP) — The National Hockey League should take a "hard-nosed approach to the dealings with the rival World Hockey Association, Punch Imlach, general manager of Buffalo Sabres of the NHL, said Thursday.

He said he is annoyed with what he considers the NHL's overly-cautious approach with the WHA.

"There is only one way to really hurt that outfit and that is with money, big money," Imlach added.

He said the NHL should be going after big names—stars the WHA lured from the league.

"If we approached a WHA star, some NHL club would scream that we were tampering with someone whose rights it held," he said.

The two leagues don't offer much talent room, Imlach said.

"I watched Toronto Toros beat Cleveland Crusaders in a WHA playoff in Toronto and the next night I took in a New York Stanley Cup playoff. There was no comparison. I don't think more than five players from the Toronto-Cleveland game could have made either the Rangers or Habs.

"But we can only stay No. 1 by taking a hard-nosed approach, fight the WHA with every weapon at our command because it is the A-bomb in this war."

11 Straight

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Peterborough PCOs recorded their 11th straight win as they defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 26-13 in Ontario Lacrosse Association Junior A action Thursday.

In the only other games, Stan Cockerton's seven goals led Oshawa Green Geels to a 26-14 win over Etobicoke PCOs.

NHL Officials Hire Lawyer

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Jim Beatty of Brampton, Ont., has been retained by the National Hockey League Officials Association in an effort to curb increasing verbal attacks by officials by club personnel and players, it was announced Thursday.

"The Association has been very concerned about the increasing amount of criticism of officials by team executives, managers and players," referee Wally Harris said in a prepared statement announcing Beatty's appointment.

Harris, president of the officials' association, said the action was taken "to assure that we would not face another session subject to such attacks without the full support and recognition of the league and (NHL) board of governors."

Beatty met with NHL president Clarence Campbell here Tuesday and "agreement was reached on the recognition of the seriousness of the situation and on specific recommendations to the board next week during the league's annual meetings.

On the association's instruction, Beatty filed a brief with Campbell on behalf of the officials and specific recommendations designed to curb the attacks.

Beatty said he expects a further report following the league meetings.

"In that report we expect some further rule changes and new procedures which will speak directly to our concern for the proper respect and recognition of the role of officials in hockey."

Allen Signs

TORONTO (CP) — Offensive end Eric Allen announced Thursday he has signed a three-year contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League—but didn't sound happy about it.

"Why did I agree with Toronto?" Allen asked. "As of now, I don't feel I made the best deal."

Quebecois Whip Stingers

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Quebecois built up a 7-goal lead in the first period and went on to defeat Syracuse Stingers 18-10 in a National Lacrosse League game watched by 3,452 fans Thursday night.

Gord Floyd, Dave Litzenberger, Jim Lynch, Bill Langley, Wayne Sutherland and Rod McCarthy each had two goals for Montreal, now 4-6 in league play.

John Davis, Dale McKenzie, Bill Nurrin, Gord Odachuk, Bill Bradley and Bill Sheehan got the other Montreal goals.

Bruce Murdock, Jim Miller, Paul Cloci and Travis Cook each scored twice for the Stingers with Pat Differ and Jim Biggs getting the others.

Montreal took advantage of 13 minor assessed in the game by referees Carmen MacMillan and John McCauley.

The Quebecois outshot Syracuse 44-41.

In the loss game tonight, Maryland Arrows visit Toronto Tomahawks.

Opera in The Original Performance in September

TORONTO — Herman Geiger-Torel, General Director of the Canadian Opera Company, has announced that the rarely-performed original version of Mussorgsky's Boris Godunov will be presented during the Company's 28th season, Sept. 6 to Oct. 12 at O'Keefe Centre.

The production, opening Sept. 26, will be directed by Dr. Torel, conducted by Heinrich Bender and designed by David Mitchell and Suzanne Mess.

Mussorgsky was responsible for giving his opera two different forms. As he originally conceived it in 1868-69 and submitted it to the management of the Imeryinsk Theatre of St. Petersburg, it contained seven scenes. This original score was rejected out of hand. The freedom and novelty of style - particularly his harmonic heresies - were much too revolutionary for the acceptance committee. The opera also lacked a love interest and was unsuitable for the most part, in what seemed a highly unorthodox manner.

It took courage and remarkable faith in himself and his opera, for Mussorgsky not to take back his music script and destroy it. Instead he rewrote the opera.

It was not until Jan. 27, 1874, that the complete new Boris was performed. An embattled group of enthusiasts, drawn by the strong note of enlightened criticism, heralded the opera as the manifesto of a new era. They were, however, in the minority. The opposition of critics, academicians, rival composers, was decisive. The opera was denounced as dissonant and vulgar, wholly bereft of technical competence and a travesty of music.

Today, Mussorgsky's masterpiece is recognized as one of those rare works of art that defy the encroachments without seeming to have been influenced by any particular style or tradition. Musicians still find it difficult to understand how a 39-year-old ex-civil servant, with virtually no musical schooling or experience of composing on a large scale, was able to proclaim his genius with such astonishing assurance in this, his first opera. In so doing he evolved a style of his own which was to exert a powerful influence on some of the most important composers who followed him.

The Canadian Opera's Boris Godunov will star Vaccouver bass Don Garrard in the title role. Performances of the opera will be given on September 24, 28, October 2, 4, 7, 12.

CBC Stage Trilogy Will End Saturday

Hood Gula and Sound Bone Dance completes the trilogy of plays by Michael Cook aired on CBC Radio. It will be broadcast on CBC Stage, June 8 at 8:05 p.m.

Cook, a transplated Irishman, is fast becoming one of Newfoundland's most prolific playwrights. Several of his plays have been produced on radio, including Color the Flesh the Color of Dust, the first part of his trilogy about Newfoundland outport fishermen. Jacob's Wake, also in the series, was originally broadcast under the title, There's A Seal at the Bottom of the Garden. Another play, Apostles for the Burning, was heard on CBC Tuesday Night last December.

All have been staged in St. John's. Color the Flesh the Color of Dust was also produced in Halifax and Ottawa, and was seen at Toronto's St. Lawrence Centre last season. Hood Gula and Sound Bone Dance was performed in Montreal, and may soon be seen in Toronto. Jacob's Wake was recently presented by The Open House company at the Theatre Canada festival in May.

All this can be gratifying to a writer who's been in this country less than 10 years. He had, it seems, taken to Newfoundland, like a seal to water. Most of his plays are concerned with the history of his adopted province, and the changing lifestyles of its inhabitants.

Hood Gula and Sound Bone Dance is set some time in the future when the formerly fish-filled waters off the Newfoundland coast are now almost everything but scavengers, because they have been over-fished to the point of extinction.

Two old men still meet every day on their fish stage to dream of the glorious days that used to be, incapable of facing the fact that their old way of life is as extinct as their fish.

Kohanyi Named Producer

John Hirsch, Head of CBC—TV Drama, has announced the appointment of award-winning film maker Julius Kohanyi as producer of the new Canadian Film Makers' series, to be seen this coming fall-winter season in prime time Fridays at 10:30 p.m. on the CBC—TV network.

Mr. Kohanyi, 37, has been an active film maker since his early twenties, and his films have been seen in theatres, festivals and on television in many countries. "Henry Moore", his film on the famous English sculptor, has won six international awards.

"Images," a current theatrical short, won three awards. "Henry Moore" and "Radio" are among his many films telecast on CBC—TV, and he has also had his works in Scandinavian countries, Australia, and elsewhere.

"Games," one of his latest films, will be shown at the Ontario Science Centre in Toronto on June 7, on the last day of the Centre's standard feature.

A member of the pre-selection jury for the Festivals Office of the secretary of State, Mr. Kohanyi has seen most of the new Canadian films produced over the past few years. He is also an executive member of the Directors Guild of Canada.

Canadian-born, in British Columbia, of Hungarian parents, he spent 10 years of his childhood living in Hungary.

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 21,000 persons saw Sly Stone, 30, leader of the rock group Sly and the Family Stone, get married in Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

He married Kathy Silva, a model from Maui, Hawaii. Both were dressed in gold—Sly in a suit and cape, she in a sleeveless gown.

The 30-minute ceremony began like a Las Vegas revue, with 11 girls in black walking on stage, each carrying a tall gold-painted palm frond. Bishop R. R. Stewart from the First Jurisdiction of the Churches of God and Christ in San Francisco performed the ceremony.

The bride's vows included "obey him and serve him."

After that, Sly and the Family Stone gave their 11th sold-out concert in the Garden.

The couple, who met two years ago, have a nine-month-old son.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The mother of deposed Miss World Marjl Wallace says her daughter had an overdose of sleeping pills because "she may have felt it wasn't possible to go on."

Mrs. Marlene Wallace said Wednesday her daughter was resting in treatment but still was in critical condition from the overdose Monday.

Miss Wallace, 20, was a close friend of racing driver Peter Revson, who was killed recently in an accident. She was stripped of her beauty title because of publicity surrounding her relationship with British soccer star George Best.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Actress and model Jennifer O'Neill has confirmed she plans to marry Ellen Gould.

Miss O'Neill said in an interview Wednesday that she probably would marry the actor after they finish a film together in Europe this fall.

Gould's first marriage, to Barbra Streisand, ended in divorce. He married actress Jennifer Bogart last December, but they also have parted.

Your Horoscope

By BERNICE EDDIE OOOL

Saturday, June 8

Aries (March 21-April 19) You need time away from the home and the responsibilities today. Call some of your pals. See if you can't get up some fun.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Early in the day pressures will be more acute. Your temper will be more volatile than later on, when you'll let go and relax.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) Tension over finances could put the temper on your day if you permit it. Direct your attention to less-worldly interests.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) You're going to be a bit frustrated with your mate today. You'll learn later that what you were angry about wasn't really his fault.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't get too bent out of shape when you find you won't have as much time as you thought to get something completed today.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Pressure from another will tend to sway your judgment and coerce you into making a decision you shouldn't. Hold your ground.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) An activity of yours will not start out being much fun. In fact, it could begin on a hectic note. But wait, the laughs come later.

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll learn of something confidential that will give you the drop on another. It won't add to your credit if you use it.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A male friend of yours always comes to you when he's a trifle short. Don't be surprised if he does get in touch today.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A problem between two pals of yours is developing and you're apt to be caught in the middle. Beware the one who always drops his word.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something that has been a source of frustration for the past few days will be removed or come to you, promising you a free weekend.

Pisces (Feb. 20-March 20) Usually it's fun to be where the action and the noise is. That's when it's all happening. This evening, however, you'll enjoy a sway your judgment and coerce quiet spot more.

By Oswald and James Jacoby

Here is another hand from the Reese-Dormer book. South is in what looks like a fairly comfortable two-heart contract, but things start out badly. The opening lead of the queen of clubs kills off dummy's king.

South ruffs the third club. If he simply bangs down his ace and king of hearts, he is going to have to lead spades himself. If this happens he will lose three spades and one heart in addition to the two clubs the defence has already taken in the bank.

To Your Good Health

Cancers of Skin Most Curable

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a spot on my forehead which my doctor tells me is skin cancer and should be removed. Can you tell me how they remove it? And does it spread? And is it really curable? Also what causes it? — R.S.H.

First of all, and most important, do what your doctor tells you to do. Have the skin cancer removed without delay.

Skin cancer, particularly on the face, is fairly common among folks who have been exposed to the sun a great deal. It is very common in the young, but something to watch for as we get on in years.

Removal is usually quite simple, either by surgical removal or by electrocautery, and it is done with only a local anesthetic.

There is one advantage in surgical removal: bits of tissue can be taken to the laboratory for examination, to make sure that enough has been removed to get rid of all tissue in which cancer cells are present.

If it isn't removed, it can spread. In fact, R will spread—which is the basic fact that makes cancer so dangerous. It will spread and spread.

Skin cancer, however, is the most curable of all cancers for the reason that it is easily visible, can be discovered early and can be removed before it has had a chance to spread to dangerous proportions. So take full advantage of the fact that yours has been found and identified early.

What causes it? As I said, long exposure to the elements is known to contribute to skin cancer, just as other irritations can lead to cancer elsewhere. But the actual basic question of "what causes cancer" is not specifically known.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the difference between bleached and unbleached white flour? Are they really safe to eat? I know health fads don't approve of either. Is it because white flours deplete the minerals? — T.S.O.

The milling of white flour does remove vitamin B and some of the minerals which, however, are replaced again by the enrichment procedure.

Unbleached flour tends to be brown as seen in whole wheat bread. Bleached flour is treated to remove the brown color to give you the pure white appearance of white bread or cake.

I think the fussing over such milling and bleaching is very much overdone; especially since the enrichment process is in such general use.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a relative who suffers with arthritis in her knees. A friend suggested gold cure, and in my younger days I had heard of it myself. I wonder what's the current status and do you recommend it? — E.C.C.

It involves injection of gold salts, and it was originated a couple of dozen years ago. It fell into disuse, but in fairly recent years has been reinvented again, and at the same time the technique of administering the correct dosage has been improved substantially.

In some cases—it works very well; in others, it does not, and there is no way to determine in advance.

It is primarily effective in rheumatoid arthritis, which usually involves various joints of the body, but I would question whether your relative, with the typical knees, has rheumatoid arthritis. More likely osteoarthritis, for which gold salts would not be indicated.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been told that those with type O blood have a problem digesting proteins and it causes bad breath, but with that blood type they have no problem digesting carbohydrates and fats, so the proteins just lie in the stomach or intestines and putrefy, taking several days to digest. What can a person with type O blood do? Proteins are essential to good health but no one likes bad breath. — M.J.I.

The best thing you can do is forget about any such wild theory. I also remember that type O is the commonest type of blood, so if the theory were true, an enormous number of people would be having that trouble. Just discard the notion.

Win at Bridge

'I don't care finesse' works

A little thought should show him a way to be sure of his contract except against most unlikely breaks.

He simply cashes one high heart. Then he leads a diamond to dummy's king and one back to his ace. Now he ruffs his last diamond, leads dummy's jack of hearts and lets it ride.

This is what might be called an "I don't care" finesse. If it loses, West will either have to lead a spade or give South a ruff and discard. Either way South will lose two spade tricks. Usually it wins. Now South doesn't lose a trump trick and makes his contract in spite of the three spade losers.

School Graduates Trained Drivers

MASSTOWN, N.S. (CP) — The Commercial Safety College, which operates on a 163-acre site in this community 13 miles west of Truro, graduates about 70 drivers a month for straight and tractor-trailer trucks.

It is the largest safety college in Canada, with a staff of 35 and 53 training vehicles. In its 16 years of operation, the college has acquired a three-acre practice driving field, the latest visual training system, a student residence and cafeteria and has nearby highways for driving.

Even with its annual 1,000 graduates, however, the college is not keeping up yet with the region's demand for 1,400 new drivers each year.

Basil MacKay, general manager of the college, emphasizes that the institution is not a correspondence school.

"We do not believe that driving can be taught through the mail and with home study," he said. "Our college is a physical reality with its phildelected training equipment, professional training staff and real people."

The students stay in residence or at nearby homes and learn theory in the classroom while practising constantly on the three-acre pavement or highways.

Harry G. Marsh, founder and president of the college, said the school has gained prestige through careful evaluation of students and proper training techniques.

"We have a growing number of students and inquiries from Ontario and Western Canada and are actively considering how to serve the need."

Mr. Marsh said the alternatives are bringing students from outside the Atlantic region to the Masstown site or opening a similar school in another part of Canada.

When the college began it's avowed aim was to assist the transportation industry in training drivers and Mr. Marsh said the school is confident it can help both transportation and industry operate more efficiently while maintaining an impressive safety record.

Corner Stores Losing Their Share of Market

TORONTO (CP) — Independent shop keepers—those folks who run the neighborhood corner store—are finding it more and more difficult to compete with the large chain stores.

Paradoxically, the small businesses are big business but their marketing is shrinking, says Charlie Gorrell, secretary-manager of the 3,500-member Retail Merchants Association of Canada (Ontario) Inc.

Mr. Gorrell said independent shopkeepers accounted for 57 per cent of all retail sales last year in the province—$8.1 billion compared with $8.7 billion for chain stores. Five years ago the small businesses accounted for 60 per cent.

"Unfortunately, the gap is narrowing," Mr. Gorrell said. "You've got two extremes—the very successful and the never successful—and in between the small businesses are finding it a living."

He said part of the problem is that some shopkeepers think they can sit back and the money will come rolling in. They do not promote the business and they do not work to please the customer.

Consequently, they sell the business or close down, he said, noting that he gets three to four changes of ownership notices every week—most for variety stores.

Last year in Toronto, 236 businesses of all types went bankrupt leaving behind more than $27 million in debts, Mr. Gorrell said.

Dance Centre Open House Saturday Night

Quinte Dance Centre will wind up its second year of operation Saturday night at 7 p.m. with a ballet presentation at its studio over Eaton's Order Office on Front St.

The public is invited at no charge and refreshments will be served.

Also on display will be drawings of teacher Brian Scott and his students, drawn by area public school students. David and assistant Scott, ballet master and mistress of the National Ballet in Toronto will attend the performance.

Great Lakes Traffic Light

DETROIT (AP) — Great Lakes ocean vessel traffic is at its lowest point in the last decade, a fact officials attribute to a worldwide shortage of ships and increased use of container to move cargo by rail.

As of May 31, the Great Lakes Commission reported 116 ocean ships had moved through the Welland Canal, compared with 241 in the same period a year ago.

The Detroit-Wayne County Port Commission now is studying the impact of containerized cargo and possible ways to increase Detroit's share of shipping from Midwest ports.

An increase in trade between nations and the blockage of the Suez canal by the six-day Israeli conflict has aggravated the problem created by the short age of ships, shippers say.

Winnipeg Man Guilty In Fire Deaths of Nine

WINNIPEG (CP) — Herbert Wray Williams, 21, of Winnipeg was found guilty Thursday of criminal negligence and arson in connection with a Jan. 18 fire that killed nine persons.

A jury deliberated six hours before finding Williams guilty on nine charges of causing death by criminal negligence, death by criminal negligence, 20 counts of causing bodily harm by criminal negligence and one charge of arson.

Williams was remanded to June 20 for sentencing.

The early morning fire destroyed an apartment building, killed nine people and injured 20 others, including three firefighters.

The charges were laid after Williams surrendered to police. He brought up the subject during questioning by police on another matter.

Two police detectives testified in the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench that Williams admitted he was responsible for the deaths and gave a written statement saying he was in the apartment's basement and without thinking threw a burning match into an open locker full of newspapers.

Several members of Williams' family testified he was drunk the morning of the fire.

Defence counsel Paul Walsh said the conviction would be appealed.

Wet Weather May Cut Back Harvest

OTTAWA (CP) — Cool wet weather continues to set back crop seeding operations throughout the country, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

In many low-lying areas in the Prairie grain belt, there will be no crops seeded at all this year.

In the second of six reports on crop conditions across the country, the statistics bureau indicated that farm seeding progress this year may severely harm prospects for a big harvest.

From the Maritimes to British Columbia poor spring weather conditions have held back farm work. Field operations are about two weeks behind normal schedules.

Late springs increase chances that crops will be wiped out by fall frosts and early snows.

By region, the country's crop conditions look like this:

In the Maritimes, all field operations have been delayed about 10 days. Only half of the field crops and a third of the potatoes have been planted in Prince Edward Island. In Nova Scotia, grass growth is slower than usual and only a quarter of the spring seeding is finished. Similarly, in New Brunswick, "crop conditions are very late."

In Quebec, cold wet weather had gripped the province until the last few days. Pastures and hay meadows have just begun to grow and all seeding operations are much later than normal.

Ontario has also suffered from below-normal temperatures — 4.5 degrees — and amounts of rain. Although conditions have improved in the last two weeks, hay and pasture crops in the south and east have been set back considerably.

Nevertheless, spring grain seeding is nearly finished in all but eastern and Northern Ontario and corn crops are almost all planted in the western part of the province.

On the Prairies, farmers have been able to get on the land in the last few days after better weather. Seeding progress varies greatly. In Alberta, planting is nearly finished in many regions, but in Manitoba, only a small part of the intended acreage has been seeded. Saskatchewan farmers are about mid-way between the other two.

The bureau says warmer, drier weather is needed to get crops growing and to allow seeding operations to continue.

In many districts, there are low-lying areas which are either flooded or still too wet to work; some of these will not be seeded at all this season."

In British Columbia, cool temperatures and above-average rainfall have delayed seeding operations sharply.

Only about half the crops have been planted in some areas.

Mayors Fight To End

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities engaged in a debate on capital punishment Thursday at the close of its four-day annual convention, but, as might have been expected, the matter was left unresolved.

A resolution introduced by Surrey, B.C., drew more discussion than any other item at the convention which drew more than 800 delegates.

When nothing resolved, one delegate ended the impasse by moving a referral motion that passed unanimously.

It was a lively end to a quiet meeting that produced one important item—the announcement that a committee has been appointed to study public finance. The committee is composed of representatives of the federation, provincial and federal governments. It is to find the most equitable system of municipal finance.

Winnipeg Ald. Bernie Wolfe, elected the federation's new president, said that is there was one definable thrust at the convention. It was the desire to widen the support of its members.

A program to secure that support was launched with the passage of a resolution to establish regional committees on rural and small communities. The committees are to promote programs that will assist smaller centres and provide communication links with the federation that may appear dominated by the large municipalities.

In line with the growing awareness that a new form of financial base must be found for municipalities, Mr. Wolfe said the day is gone when senior levels of government can take a paternalistic or patronizing attitude.

"They must sit down with us at the table and involve us in the decision-making that affects us," he said at a luncheon.

Mr. Wolfe's remarks seemed to be upheld by three senior politicians who addressed the convention—Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer, federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford and David Lewis, national New Democratic Party leader.

All three said there is a need for changes in the financial base of municipalities to relieve property taxes.

Prime Minister Trudeau managed to outfox a few delegates without even being present.

Mr. Wolfe fired a barrage of criticism at the prime minister for not sending some consultation with municipalities before announcing his new housing program. He said the federation also was disappointed the announcement was not made earlier by Mr. Basford, instead of being about a "third hand through a newspaper report."

A number of resolutions were given approval on the final day including one regarding the Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline.

It asks the National Energy Board to undertake to involve adjacent municipalities in the planning and design of the pipeline.

The convention is to be held next year in London, Ont.

Dale Bamber Stops Reserve

Dale Bamber's three-hit pitching stopped Reserve as Latta posted a 10-4 South Hastings Baseball League win, Wednesday, at Latta.

Bamber got the job done while striking out five and walking only one.

Glenn was charged for five runs off four hits. He fanned none and walked none. Dancy, in six full innings, was touched for four hits, five runs. He struck out one and walked three.

Damon Richardson sparked the winner's 9th parade with a double and two singles. Barry Dubbs batted a double and a single and Bob Smith hammered his third homer of the season, a three-run job.

The only Reserve hitters to solve Bamber's curbs were Bob Green who doubled and Mike Murphy and Murray Maracle who each managed a single.

At Shannonville, Harold Brennan and Doug Stewart combined for a two-hitter as visiting Read claimed a 6-4 win. The pair combined to strike out eight and walk four.

The loser was Glen Barbastock who went the distance on a six-hitter. He fanned five and walked just one.

John Valvasori was tops in the batting department for Read with a double and a pair of two-baggers single. Gerry Brenner, Carm Brenner, Larry Colley and Pat O'Connor each collected a single for the winner.

WOODY HAYES ILL

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University football coach Woody Hayes was in stable condition in hospital Thursday after complaining of chest pains. Neither hospital spokesmen nor Hayes' personal physician would speculate whether the 61-year-old Hayes, who ranks second among active college coaches in the number of victories, had suffered a heart attack.

Visiting Teams Win In Lacrosse Action

Teams based outside the city of Belleville did very well in Belleville Minor Lacrosse house league action this week, with two of the four games played going to the visitors.

In a Monday night novice contest, Frankford put it to Quinte Mall by a 15-9 score. Billy Paine in the Frankford net recorded the shutout, as well as providing the offence with a pair of markers.

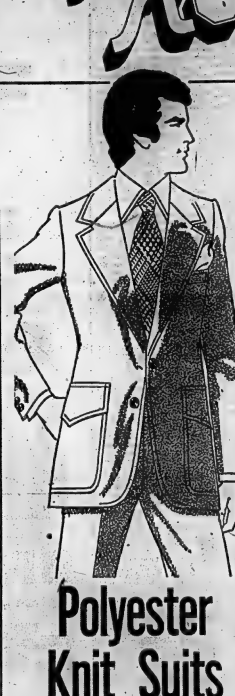
Andretti at Mosport

The old axiom, "you have to be good to be lucky" certainly doesn't seem to apply to Mario Andretti.

Anyone involved in the world of motor racing realizes Andretti is a talented race driver, but the 34-year-old former Indianapolis winner is hoping that Lady Luck stops frowning on him by the time he arrives in Toronto for the Labatt's Formula 5000, June 15, 15 and 16 at Mosport Park. The 5000 race is part of the Labatt's Blue doubleheader weekend which will also feature the traditional Can Am race.

Andretti, who will be running Parnelli Jones' prepared Lola T332 certainly didn't have much good fortune during the recent running of the Indy 500. In qualifying he had to switch cars in order to be competitive, and then on the day of the race he barely managed to finish the first two laps.



His Formula 5000 machine, however, presents a somewhat brighter picture. Andretti has been breaking lap records at Riverside Calif., during test sessions and all indications from Andretti are that his Lola is going to be very competitive.

Tax-free Grants

PM Pads Home Plan

HAMILTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau announced a $33-million program Friday to make tax-free $500 grants to first-time buyers of moderately-priced homes.

The last of three phases in the Liberal housing platform for the July 8 federal election, the plan follows announcements earlier in the week of proposals to lower mortgage interest rates and to increase the supply of moderately-priced housing.

Mr. Trudeau said the grants will be available only to first-time home purchasers.

Legislation must be passed by Parliament before the program can go into effect. The Commons is not expected to be called into session until August or September.

The moderately-priced house is defined under Mr. Trudeau's program as one costing up to $44,300 in Toronto and Vancouver and up to $41,600 in Ottawa and Hamilton.

Limits in other centres vary from $31,200 to $38,500.

Mr. Trudeau said the plan would have the effect of decreasing costs attributable to the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials.

He rejected the Progressive Conservative election policy proposal to wipe out the tax progressively, saying it would give benefits to rich and poor alike. The Liberal program would help the middle-and lower-income groups.

The first phase of the housing platform was announced Wednesday in Vancouver where Mr. Trudeau said that all lenders will be required to invest low-down payment mortgage money in houses within the reach of the middle-and lower-income groups. He estimated that $1 billion a year in low-down-payment money is going now for expensive housing.

The second phase was announced in Ottawa where the prime minister said that the Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP) will be broadened to reduce mortgage rates in some instances to as low as four per cent.

Current rates on the private mortgage market are about 11 per cent or more.

Aides said Friday night the grants scheme would be open to about 68,000 families a year. The figures were based on the projected number of moderately-priced housing starts for 1974.

On other issues, Mr. Trudeau said he can't assess yet how the election campaign is going. Crowds seemed receptive but many people are only awakening to the fact that the campaign is under way, he said.

Stanfield Says Owning Home Distant Dream

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said Friday night that owning a home is still a distant dream for most Canadians, despite three major policy announcements this week by Prime Minister Trudeau.

"The prime minister has bombed three-times," said Mr. Stanfield in commenting on Mr. Trudeau's latest announcement that a $500 tax-free grant will be paid to first-time home buyers.

Speaking at a rally for Ontario area candidates that attracted about 1,500 persons, Mr. Stanfield said the first two housing announcements still left home ownership beyond the reach of low-income Canadians.

Under the three parts of the Trudeau housing proposal, announced in Vancouver, Regina and Hamilton, Ont., the Liberals claim downpayments, mortgage interests and federal sales taxes on house building will be reduced for low-and medium-income families.

Part of the program calls for the broadening of the present Assisted Home Ownership Program (AHOP) to provide subsidization of certain mortgage payments.

Mr. Stanfield predicted the $500 grants would make little difference and wondered "what promise Mr. Trudeau will make next week."

A major theme of his speech was housing and he said no new houses were built in the last six months last year under the Assisted Home Ownership Plan in either Toronto, Sudbury, Thunder Bay or London, Ont.

"I think it's incredible that the prime minister of this country would announce a home-ownership program and say it is designed to help someone whose income is $4,500 a year.

Gasoline Hike Averages Five Cents on Gallon

OTTAWA (CP) — The average price of gasoline increased five to six cents a gallon in the last five months, bringing prices to 69.8 cents for premium and 64.48 cents for regular, the Canadian Automobile Association said Friday.

The association based its findings on a survey of 558 gasoline retail outlets across the country last week.

Gasoline prices increased by two or three cents east of the Ottawa Valley, the Association said. West of the valley, the increase was greater, totalling 11 cents in Manitoba.

Highest-priced gasoline in the country was between 74 and 75 cents a gallon for premium and 68 to 70 cents for regular. Those prices were being charged in Thunder Bay, areas of northwestern Ontario, eastern Quebec and the Saint John, N.B., area.

IRA Price Sisters End Hunger Strike

LONDON (AP) — Irish sisters Dolours and Marian Price have taken their first voluntary meal in 205 days, ending a prison hunger strike which threatened to provide the Irish Republican movement with its newest martyrs.

Unconfirmed reports said two other hunger strikers, Hugh Feeney and Gerald Kelly, joined along with the Price sisters for an Irish Republican army bombing raid in London, also broke their fasts.

The government announcement of the sisters' decision came late Friday as Irish republicans were holding an emotional requiem mass for Michael Gaughan, an IRA member who died Monday while on prison hunger strike.

"I would imagine the conditions must have been satisfactory to them or they would not have come off their strike," said Merlo Drumm, an IRA spokeswoman. "There is no question that they could have surrendered in any way."

The IRA hunger strikers have demanded transfer to prisons in Northern Ireland as political prisoners — which would make them eligible for amnesty in event of a political settlement of the sectarian war.

Patricia Hearst Calls Parents 'Pigs'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patricia Hearst, kidnapped heiress turned gun-carrying revolutionary, says she fell in love with one of her captors and watched on television as he died in a shootout with police.

Miss Hearst said in a taped message from the underground Friday that she and her "comrades" watched televised coverage of a blazing gun battle between Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA) members and Los Angeles police May 17. Six SLA members died.

In the tape sent to radio station KPFK, Miss Hearst professed her love for the SLA soldier named "Cujo," believed to be 23-year-old William Wolfe, one of those whom ed.

"It's so hard to explain what it was like watching our comrades die," Miss Hearst said. "It made me mad to see the pigs looking at our comrades' weapons, to see them holding Cujo's AS and his watch, which was still ticking. He would have laughed at that.

"I died in that fire on 54th street, but out of the ashes of it I was reborn. I know what I have to do. My comrades didn't die in vain."

Miss Hearst, who was kidnapped by the SLA on Feb. 4 and now calls herself Tania, vowed she would rather die than return to her family. She denounced her family as "pigs."

She spoke in a quiet voice, laced with profanity.

Apparently speaking for William and Emily Harris, the only other known surviving members of the SLA, she said: "We mourn together, and the sound of gunfire becomes sweeter. The Harrises also spoke on the tape.

Wolfe's charred body was found in the burned house after the shootout along with the body of Donald (General Field Marshal Cinque) DeFreeze and four women SLA "soldiers." An autopsy report said Wolfe died of burns and smoke inhalation.

There was no definite confirmation that the dead Miss Hearst spoke of was Wolfe.

Sirica Revokes Secrecy

Nixon Conspirator: Grand Jury

WASHINGTON (AP) —Judge John Sirica has revoked the secrecy order cloaking grand jury papers which name President Nixon as a co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up.

But it's up to the Supreme Court to determine when the material becomes public.

Sirica lifted the order Friday at the request of presidential lawyer James St. Clair who sought the action after it became known that the Watergate grand jury named Nixon and others as unindicted co-conspirators.

But he noted that the material is in the hands of the Supreme Court in connection with its review of a Watergate tapes subpoena battle between Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski and the administration.

In another federal courtroom Friday, Judge Gerhard Gesell warned that Nixon risks "appropriate procedures under the contempt statutes" if he continues to withhold records subpoenaed by former aide John Ehrlichman for the trial beginning June 17 in the Ellsberg break-in case.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Circuit Court for the District of Columbia refused to disqualify Sirica from sitting in the cover-up trial. The court rejected a petition by lawyers for five of the seven defendants, who said Sirica demonstrated bias in the first Watergate trial and should be removed from the cover-up trial.

Gesell ruled last week that Ehrlichman has the right to examine his own White House files for material necessary in his defence. Ehrlichman, G. Gordon Liddy and two others are accused of conspiring to violate the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist through the 1971 break-in.

The administration consented, then refused to allow Ehrlichman's lawyer into the file room. Saenger lecturing St. Clair, the judge called the administration action "complete disregard of the court's order."

"I just don't see how I can tolerate it in terms of this case and in fairness to this defendant."

Gesell said Nixon's action, in effect, denied Ehrlichman his constitutional right to be represented by a lawyer.

Gesell said he will draft an order dealing with the situation.

It was not clear whether Gesell would approach the impasse through contempt proceedings against the president. He said he might be forced by Nixon's refusal to disclose the material to dismiss the charges against Ehrlichman, but "that is a course I should not follow until I have exhausted all other possible opportunities."

During the hearing Ehrlichman's lawyers said they have subpoenaed State Secretary Henry Kissinger, White House counsel Fred Buzhardt, and White House Chief of Staff Alexander Haig to testify on the opening day of the trial. Gesell rejected a subpoena for Nixon, who will be out of the country then.

In other Watergate developments:

—A staff report of the Senate Watergate committee says the Nixon administration used the federal bureaucracy for political profit, apparently violating criminal laws in the process.

English Still Favored

MONTREAL (CP) — Only 13.5 per cent of Quebecers favor making French the province's only official language with no recognized status for English, says a poll commissioned by three daily newspapers, two French and one English-language. The poll, appearing today in The Gazette, Le Devoir and Quebec City's Le Soleil, shows 61 per cent of those questioned thought both English and French should remain official languages.

Poor Spring, But Few Quinte Crop Problems Seen

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A wet spring which delayed sowing for Quinte district farmers several weeks, is not expected to have a too serious effect on canning crops.

Tomato transplanting is now mostly completed. And, although it was a few days later than is normal, it is not expected there will be much difference in the harvesing date.

A spokesman at the Picton office of the provincial agriculture and food ministry said it all depended on the weather.

If the weather remains warm and bright, plants will mature rapidly. But, if unfavorable, ripening of tomatoes could be delayed. Application of a spacer could still speed up the process and see harvesting completed before autumn frosts.

Farmers normally like to get transplanting of tomatoes underway by May 20. This year, due to continued spring rains, planting did not generally start until about May 27.

In former years, before development of ripeners, a transplanting delay of a week was considered serious in terms of late ripening and possible frosts.

One Prince Edward farmer — how out of the tomato-growing business — said at one time each daily delay in transplanting beyond May 24 meant a week's delay in ripening.

Today, corn growers were said by the provincial agriculture office spokesman to be in good shape.

Earliest corn went in the ground about May 15 and planting was general last week.

"Corn is right on time," said the Picton official.

At Saragas Foods Ltd. at Mountain View, where tomatoes and beans are processed, pilings of the years has seen a change in the method of operations.

Some years ago many local farmers grew tomatoes on a contract basis for the Mountain View plant. The company now is growing most of its own processing tomatoes.

At Metcalf's Foods Ltd. in Deseronto where peas, beans, corn and carrots are processed, it was expected that only peas would be affected by the late spring.

Normally, the factory commences its pea pack around the 20-24. This year, because of later planting, the factory will not start processing until about July 1st.

Ron Lazier, plant superintendent said it appeared the pea pack would be about one week later than usual.

The Deseronto factory with its variety of packs offers a cash income for up to 60 or more district growers.

Approximately 45 farmers grow corn on a contract basis with many of these also growing peas, beans and carrots.

Peas are the first pack for the Deseronto factory. Then beans, corn and carrots, are

Theatre August

Young Actors Plan New Season

By AL ZABAS
Staff Reporter

Plans are once again afoot to bring Theatre August back to life and put young actors, from county university and high school students — on stage.

As in its four previous summers, Theatre August will produce three one-act plays.

Work decisions are being made for about a six-week season. Production dates are July 25-27.

Rob Clement is one of 19 young people working to get the show onstage.

He says the company hopes to be operating out of Belleville Theatre Guild's playhouse on Pinnacle St. But precise arrangements have not been ironed out.

Participation from the city's youth community is being sought once again.

June 11, at 8 p.m., those interested in acting or behind-scenes tasks will meet at Pinnacle Playhouse.

"Anyone who'd play in band can bring it down and discuss it," says Clement.

The company also works on a co-operative basis. Everyone lends a hand getting three plays onto the boards. Should someone be interested in preparing a play, he can have the plays onto the boards. Should someone be interested in preparing a play, he can have the facilities made.

The older — and founding — members of Theatre August will play a lesser role in actual production activities this year.

"We want to involve young blood," said Clement. "That way it can be kept alive in the future."

Truck Traffic Jars Herchimer Residents

Residents of Herchimer Ave., fed up with the noise and jarring of heavy trucks rumbling past their doors, are not likely to see any immediate relief.

At least the city traffic and light committee is not recommending the establishment of truck routes and points out that according to the city's proposed official plan, both Herchimer and Bleecker Avenues are designated as major collector streets.

The feeling of committee members is that there is nothing they can do as there is no alternate route that trucks could take.

Committee members were discussing a 73-name petition from Herchimer Ave., residents objecting to the use of their street as a thoroughfare for transports and other heavy vehicles.

The petition said Herchimer Ave. for years has been subject to a great deal of noise and ground tremor caused by the heavy vehicles.

As taxpayers and homeowners they are demanding prompt action by the city to prevent the heavy vehicles from using the street.

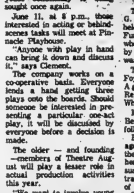
The objection of Herchimer Ave. residents has been before council for some time and action has been the subject of a report from Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Crosbie, at Monday's meeting of the traffic committee, said he had hoped, with the closing of Front Ave. and Annex cement plant the problem would "go away."

The chief said he hated to "give people off" but asked where else could the trucks go.

The only other through route between Station and Dundas streets in the east end of the city is Bleecker Ave. and residents on this artery are also complaining of heavy trucks.

"What can we do?" asked committee Chairman Alderman Jack Ireland.



He said the only alternative until the proposed north-south artery in the city's extreme east end was constructed would be to direct trucks along Front and Pinnacle Street which in many cases would be miles out of he way.

The alderman said the proposed north-south artery in the city's east end was still five or 10 years away.

Alderman Arthur Keegan agreed there was nothing that could be done to rule trucks off Herchimer Ave.

"Streets are built for traffic, its a fact of life," he said.

Alderman Paul Russell was opposed to the establishment of specific truck routes with out a complete study, and didn't feel the city needed such routes at the present time.

JAMES W. CARRIE, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Carrie, 138 W. Dundas, Belleville, received His Bachelor of Arts Degree with First Class Honors in Politics and was awarded the Department of Politics Book Prize, at the May 31 convocation of Brock University, James will be continuing his studies at Regent College, Vancouver.

Paper Pickups Spreading Out

Alderman Jean Smith is almost certain she's conclusively proved there's waste in schools.

And the schools seem to be co-operating.

The woman city councillor broke her vow to remain silent on education — particularly after Wednesday.

Then, at the Bells Corners public school, Grade 3 pupils collected waste materials for their re-use.

Ald. Smith is convinced there's tons of waste paper in the second forenoon, schools and offices in the buildings. Most of it probably just goes to the municipal garbage dump, taking up valuable space. She began talking the topic with school administrators and found them co-operative. Then she decided to test her ideas in practice. She got student organizers in several city schools to help.

Yesterday with a pickup truck loaned by the city parks department, the city councillor and students loaded waste from offices and lockers at Holy Redeemer School and Nicholson Collegiate. It was hauled to Hillcrest School for the regular Thursday pickup.

Next week, it'll be Queen's Secondary School's turn to contribute.

Meantime, the calendar may have thrown a wrench into the regular city-wide waste pickup in May, believes Ald. Smith.

Waste has been running at 30 tons for the month. In May, it dropped to 20 tons. But this may be due the fact there were five Thursdays in the month. Pickups — according to city zones — are the first four Thursdays and people may have become confused.

Ald. Smith has these reminders:

— Don't worry if you think you're seeing a garbage truck picking up your carefully-sorted paper. The pickup contractor now is using a packer vehicle just like a garbage truck. It's tidier, and it holds more.

— Don't worry about wet weather. Paper packs even better when it's wet.

— Leave newspaper on the street the night before pickup.

New Buildings Under Way

Belleville is to have another modest centre building.

A construction permit has been taken out by Maurice H. Rollins Construction for a $280,000 two-storey structure on the north side of Victoria Ave. between Pinnacle and Church Streets. Excavation work is already under way.

Adding to the general traffic confusion of the area is work on Victoria Ave., which this year is being rebuilt between Pinnacle and William Streets.

And the city is to have another "mini bank" structure.

Construction is under way on a new Noricrio credit union building on Sidney Street across from Northern Electric. Permit value of the structure, which will have its own value, is $54,000.

Provincial Winners

Two of Belleville's finest artists — at the Grade 5 level — received provincial honors this week, when they received a set of certificates and some prize money from Fire Department Inspectors Reg Christopher and Paul Stephenson for their provincial award - winning fire prevention poster. Eric Hasenkopf, a Grade 5 student at Harry J. Clarke School, received a first-place certificate and a $100 Canada Savings Bond for his all-Ontario prize-winning poster, while Susan Empson, a Grade 5 student at Prince Charles School, received an honorable mention certificate and a cheque for $10 for her good showing in the provincial contest. The two Belleville students won their honors in a contest that involved almost all Grade 5 students in the province.

Art Takes Over Old Schoolhouse

AMELIASBURGH — The setting is the same as you would imagine it to be — the large one-room building with a cupola on top where the once familiar bell sounded four times daily to summon pupils to class and release them.

S.S. No. 12 in Ameliasburgh is one of the oldest remaining country schoolhouses in the township with the grounds around it surrounded by the acres and adding to the atmosphere.

It is a fine example of a well-preserved landmark serving a useful purpose. In this instance an art and craft studio with classes in program Monday through to Thursday weekly. Enrollment is 85 at present and increasing.

Named the schoolhouse Studio, the undertaking was started last September by Mrs. Barbara Whalen of Belleville, a talented painter in her own right.

The assistant from the beginning has been Mrs. Ben Williamson of Belleville, whose specialty is woodburning with art pieces similar to the murals used in ancient Sparta.

While the studio has been functioning for the last months the official opening was set for the middle of June. What the prospects of pleasant weather were considered a deciding factor in holding the show outside.

On Sunday June 16, from 1 p.m. until dusk an outdoor display advertised as Art on the Fence will be the featured attraction for an exhibition and sale with entries nearly 30 in number already, from talented Quinte artists and craftsmen a registered to participate in the show.

Local entries include the offerings of pupils instructed in batik by Mrs. Margaret Pedersen, of RR 1 Carrying Place and portrait painting by pupils attending classes with Mrs. Marjorie Rinerson, of RR 1 Carrying Place as instructor.

The quarter of an acre of land (the schoolyard) surrounding the studio will be enclosed with a snow fence which the exhibitors can use as a backdrop. Also there will be made available tables for the displays of crafts and sculpture.

There will be a diversified selection of batiks, sculpture, pottery, ceramics, weaving, leather goods. Batik is an ancient process of imprinting images on cloth in a variety of colors by using hot wax. Each color desired requires a separate dipping and drying operation. James Taylor, MPP for Prince Edward - Lennox, will preside, for the official opening of the exhibits at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Services Mean Expansion

New Prospects in View For Marmora's Future

MARMORA — New prospects for growth are being held out for this village by a project that will start this summer.

The undertaking — installation of a sewerage system for the community of 1,500 — may cause some dislocation of movement for some time.

But at its completion, the village's potential for expansion will be that much greater.

It means at a significant time The area's biggest industry — Marmoraton Mining Company — is expected to shut down its big open-pit iron ore operation here by 1977 when economically-available resources will be worked out.

A sewage disposal system would lighten the village's attractiveness for industry, says Wilbeton Shannon, municipal clerk-treasurer and part-former reeve. Water supplies were installed some years ago.

In the past 2. was "just about impossible" to attract industry without full services. Now, with a labor force also available from the mine, and a community geared to support a work force, the village certainly has possibilities for attracting industry, he says.

This week, contracts totalling $2,276,000 were submitted to Toronto by construction companies for installation of mains and a pollution control plant.

The overall installation "holds out new prospects for the village," says Mr. Shannon.

Not only does the upcoming mine closing "make it essential the village service facilities be expanded so the community could stand on its own feet."

Housing has been in big demand here as people move out of bigger centres.

Now, with complete servicing of all building lots possible "every available space will be taken up shortly," believes Mr. Shannon.

The community's elderly also stand to benefit. The village already has made application for a 26-unit senior citizens building.

However, the eventual undertaking could be bigger. This is because provincial government authorities have suggested a combined project involving neighboring Delora village and Marmora-Lake township. The units would have to be built in here because this is where the services will be.

This week's contract awards in Toronto mark the satisfactory end to a long waiting period.

The sewerage project has been long sought by village councils for years, knowing the mine eventually would shut down, said Mr. Shannon.

Impetus was given local council by Clarke Rollins, MPP Hastings, who also was Minister of Lands and Forests totally serviced for the same reason.

Work should start shortly since all the planning preliminaries have already been drafted over the years.

"Indications are the order is out to get the work started as soon as possible — within a month," said Mr. Shannon.

A meeting will be arranged soon with members of the Marmora Hydro Commission to discuss a legal agreement for repayment of the loan.

East And West

America: land of personal endeavor, initiative and freedom, as distinct from the Soviet Union: a country where the State is in control, the population tags along, and personal initiative and freedom are minimal.

This is the impression that lingers from reading of the impressions of an American who has spent most of his 50 years in Russia. Albert Johnson was seven when his electrician father went to the Soviet Union to work as a specialist as did hundreds of Americans in the early 1930s. The senior Johnson died just one day after his wife, now 74, and young son left the U.S. They rose to remain in the Soviet Union.

Now the younger Johnson and his mother are back. Trained in Russia as an agronomist, and separated for many years from his mother (who worked as a proof reader for Soviet English-language publications, was arrested as "a spy," and spent seven years in captivity in Siberia), Johnson never knew a yearning for his homeland.

In an interview with The Christian Science Monitor's Charlotte Salkowski, he said: "Things weren't so pleasant there, being a foreigner. They did not persecute me but I was never really trusted. Life was miserable — you cannot read what you want, there are shortages of things — and I wanted to return."

"In the Soviet Union," he also noted, "you are always taken care of and you lose initiative. They give you the jobs and a pension and then you are obedient. Here everything is on your own initiative and you don't know what to do or how to do it."

Indeed that is the rub so far as Mr. Johnson's present circumstances are concerned. Born in Trenton, N.J., he has had to content himself with menial jobs since his return, from dishwashing to stockman in a book store specializing in Russian works. He also does scientific translations to improve his English and hopes to get back into agriculture.

But at 50 it is not easy. In his case a security clearance for work with the government may be more difficult to obtain. In Russia it was easy to get work, here he says "no one cares . . . and life is so complicated." And, an ironic touch in the land of the free, there are "so many government forms."

However, by Soviet standards, both Johnson and his mother agree they are "rich." They have their own apartment in Takoma Park, Md., compared with the one small room in a communal apartment in Moscow, and they eat better.

For Albert Johnson though it is a hard enough path to hew. He is having difficulty adjusting to the competitive life and its uncertainties; and looking to his own experience on returning, gets the impression "it's normal for professionals to do unskilled work."

And there was this observation: "In the Soviet Union you can't say a word about Brezhnev. "Here Nixon is treated like a common person. That weakens the country. . . . But then, does it? Perhaps that's the "cult of personality" thing in the Soviet Union? Look what happened to Khrushchev.

What is it they say . . . east is east and west is west and never the twain shall meet!

That Accent

David Lewis' "Welsh" accent has been in the news again, although without making anyone much the wiser as to how he came by it. Mr. Lewis, who was born in Poland, was asked about the accent as he stepped off a plane recently. All he said was that his late parents had taught English-as-a-foreign-language David Lloyd-George had noticed it as well — and this when he was studying at Oxford. One of these days we may get the final, definitive, word on this intriguing sidelight of the Canadian political scene.

Long Weekend

We have heard no further talk this year of the suggestion that the term Dominion Day for the July 1 holiday is something of an anachronism in these days of heightened identity, nationalism and all that. It has been proposed that the holiday be renamed Canada Day. Whatever the merits of this, there is one aspect of this year's holiday with which no one will quarrel: it falls on a Monday. The long weekend make us feel that this much-lusted but elusive age of leisure is in fact a shade closer.

Why Do They Do It?

The Candidates in A Punishing Election Campaign

By RICHARD JACKSON
OTTAWA — So you asked the poor guy why he was running himself ragged — and very possibly into debt — in the rugged race with two or three others for a seat usually safe for that seat in the House of Commons.

Or maybe you did not bother, knowing that if he wanted to knock himself out physically and better himself financially, well, that is his right, and it is a free country, anyway, isn't it?

But chances are if you asked the friendly neighborhood Liberal, Conservative, New Democratic, Social Credit, or What's-It Candidate, you might did not get much of an answer.

Not one you could make a great deal of sense of, or really understand.

Maybe candidate is running for re-election, perhaps the whole explanation is simply addiction.

The guy is hooked on politics. He digs it hard — and wins or loses is always a bit chancy — the thrill of that last-great $25,000, especially where there has to be a little taken out of it for every passing community hall, the hours are rotten, and the future about as uncertain as a future can get.

He is a member of the team and a member of the cabinet, the answer to his motive is power and the enjoyment of its exercise.

But if he is on the backbench of the winning party, he is about as far from power as it is possible to be and still be in the House of Commons.

For if he is there in the rank and file of the government party, Great Men of the Cabinet ministers invariably consider themselves mightily given if only mites — power that he just sits there on the backbench and shuts up.

A discreet silence is always the safest ground a backbencher can make, and mum is the word on the government's every move, undersides, and sights never sighted.

But shh, I whispered about, the poor guy at least can say his piece in caucus.

Sure he does, if he wants to praise the Great Men of the Cabinet in their All-Wise Decisions.

But let him be less flattering and he is the Invisible Man.

And you know what happens to invisible members.

They become "mavericks", "a pain in the ass", "publicity" ostracized as untouchables, and banished into the outer darkness of the party where no favors are done, no plums picked, and no pork provided for the constituency barrel.

It is a little more rewarding — after all, there has to be some compensation for being on the losing side — for the backbencher on the Opposition side of the House.

There the noisily inventive he is, the better an MP.

He can ask questions of the government, and the more embarrassing to the Parliamentary Powers That Be the higher he is rated and marked, by his party's leaders, for a place of power, should they ever make it to the Treasury Benches.

He can bring to task or initiate all the ideas that get him interested in politics in the first place.

His bills will get nowhere, but he is the bolzen of the Commons Order Paper, and drop right off worn a session ends.

But at least he got to introduce them and perhaps even talk about them.

So the potential for power is there if he and his party can make it to the other side of the House where he might get a free hand and the chance to exercise it.

Veteran or freshman candidate either, on this basis the motivation has to be the same.

He can't bring anything to the coffee-drinking, all these speeches, the work and worry and the cost is to serve one imperative purpose — the conviction the candidate holds in his secret heart that if given he chance he can get things done, good things, things for the history books that might remember him.

"Do you have anything that will make a person high-strung and nervous?"

Bill 55's Potential

A Swan Song for Fast-buck "Auctioneers"

By DON O'HEARN
Thompson News Service
TORONTO — Smokey Joe and Harry the Shill will probably not be able to carry on their somewhat nefarious operations much longer in Ontario.

Joe and Harry are hop-skotch artists. They skip about the province from community to community spending anywhere from a couple of weeks to a couple of months in each, semi-milking the natives.

Smokey Joe is a distress sales specialist.

His operation is conducting "Try" and "bankrupt" sales.

He will buy out at a distress figure a store hit by fire or bankruptcy.

He will then set up a sale. He will put out the merchandise he has bought from the store at a big mark-up over the few cents he has paid for it. Then to make a really big buck he will load in batches of shoddy merchandise he has picked up cheap to sell hang around as long as there is action and merchandise left. Then he will move on to another town.

Harry is an "auctioneer." He hires a small storefront in a town and starts carrying on continuous "auctions."

He has a stock of some nameless merchandise. His mainly he will have a bunch of cheap watches, junk jewellery, found on a couple of weeks to a couple of months in each, semi-milking the natives.

But they are obvious targets, and in fact are not the worst.

Thus the prohibitions against "false, misleading or deceptive consumer representation" could conceivably even hit the Bobby Orr and the Gary Players of the merchandising world.

For one of the regulations of the legislation requires that people endorsing products must actually use them.

Thus if Orr says a certain hockey powder is best he must really use it. (Hockey might smell better!)

The whole intent of Bill 55, which has yet to be debated in the house but which has now its law by this fall, if not by summer, is to try and give, by law, the consumer an even break.

It covers pretty well every phoney or borderline practice of which our retailing society today has so many.

Thus even TV repairmen, or the man who fixes your toaster, are covered.

If they say you need a new part, for example, and you really don't need it.

They could be put in prison for a year or fined up to $2,000. (With corporations it can be up to $25,000).

The Bill is a new break for Ontario's store-to-store shopper.

But really it is but sensational in the field of new law.

The federal government has had some restrictions against bad business practice for quite a while under the Combines Act.

In the U.S. they have had certain protections for 50 years. And currently the B.C. parliament is debating a Trade Practices Act which is quite similar to Bill 55.

Nixon Tour: Is It Window-dressing?

By JOHN D. HARRON
Foreign Affairs Analyst
Thompson News Service

It's impossible to determine what the real motive must be for President Nixon's forthcoming visit to the Middle East and the U.S.S.R.

There has to be one. The obvious reaction is that he is going on another public-relations gimmick like his domestic tours to safe Republican areas at this time to follow up on Dr. Kissinger's successes.

If this is his real reason, he should forget it, since any continued news toward impeachment will not be affected by such crude window-dressing on the president's part, but by the relentless work of the House Judiciary Committee towards that end.

The president starts in Cairo and if where he will be most warmly welcomed by his newest ally, Egypt's President Anwar Sadat; then on to Damascus (where the Syrians have been conducting full-dress relations with Washington), and Riyadh, capital of the Saudi-Arabian kingdom.

On a purely foreign policy approach, the president's timing should be excellent. It will be within the time of Kissinger's two successful disengagement agreements between Israel, Egypt and Syria, but not before the new meetings for a Middle East peace being held in Geneva. There has been a report about sending a delegation from the Palestinian liberation movements.

But Nixon will be home and back to bigger matters in his life before that issue comes up again. In Russia he will be equally hard to assess at this point what he hopes to gain from his tour in domestic terms, somewhat less so in foreign policy terms.

Like Brezhnev and Kosygin he is committed to detente. But how many in the Soviet politburo secretly do not follow the current Brezhnev line on the arms race with the West? There must be Soviet hawks as well.

It's conceivable therefore that when June 27 in Moscow could be something of a mutual admiration society if Nixon needs the Soviet leaders and they equally need him to polish up personally tarnished images as leaders and world statesmen.

In any case speculation on this kind has endless possibilities, none of them possibly close to accuracy, except that in foreign affairs President Nixon's record is free of the deep blunderes and blunders of his domestic one, a record he would like kept that way for the historians.

Car Insurance: Another Boost

Car insurance is going to cost more-much more — in seven provinces where it is still in private hands.

Effective July 1, premiums are to increase an average of 8.4 per cent. The new prices bonsk rates up 12 months after a nearly similar move.

By province, here are the average increases in premiums as announced by the 56-member Canadian Underwriters Association:

Newfoundland, 11.6 per cent; Prince Edward Island, 16.3 per cent; Nova Scotia, 17.9 per cent; New Brunswick, 18 per cent; Quebec, 10.3 per cent; Ontario, 6.3 per cent; Alberta, 6.1 per cent.

The reason cited by the insurers is a familiar one: It costs more to settle claims because of higher costs of medicine, hospitals, auto parts and body-shop labor.

If there has been any financial advantage from the rapid and widely heralded safety improvements in automotive design, and the more general use of seat belts, it is not apparent in the new and higher premiums.

According to auto-insurance men, the 1973 underwriting loss — a record $138 million — will be exceeded in 1974. The underwriting loss is the amount by which claims payments and expenses exceed the premiums received by the insurance companies.

But the insurance company doesn't keep your premium payments in a vault. It pays its claims and expenses and invests to put these funds to work; earnings are then enough to offset the underwriting loss.

Thus the insurance companies still survive, despite their losses. But their frequent premium increases and their near-silence on the subject of investment gains will be no consolation in the hands of those who have governments defined universal insurance coverage (as in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia).

Supporters of provincial plans criticize private insurers mainly on other grounds as well — inefficient administration, arbitrary and unfair handling of claims, neglect of the consumer.

Government-operated plans, however, are subject to the same criticism-plus complaints about political patronage, favoritism toward activist groups, lack of competition, and the use of general tax revenues to keep premiums down.

Over the next few years, the auto-insurance business will be on trial in the court of public opinion as never before. The private insurers' claims of greater efficiency, better service and lower true cost will have to be demonstrated-or withdrawn.

Their clients have a right to ask why they must pay annual increases of up to 18 per cent, and when they can expect to see-in their premiums or elsewhere-benefits of the time and money that have been spent on safer cars and roads, mass transit, driver training and accident prevention.

Focus on Inflation

Other Issues Squeezed Out

By Russell Anderson
The Globe and Mail

The focusing of attention on inflation as the dominant issue in the federal election campaign was a predictable sequel to the Bank of Canada's decision. The action is acknowledged to be the most powerful weapon to fight the mounting economic problems facing the country.

The almost exclusive preoccupation with inflation is natural, though, is unfortunate. There are other issues of importance, including trade negotiations, industrial and regional development policies, and the state of relationship with other countries, notably the United States, over the evolution of social policies. Moreover, there is a high risk that the concentration of focus on one problem will push the various political parties into advocating policies and measures that will be counter-productive.

The unfortunate fact is that there is very little that any government in Canada can do to bring inflation under control except over a lengthy period and then only if the major countries are successful in containing the inflation that has become far too wide-spread and too deep-rooted to be amenable to quick and easy solutions.

The Government cannot simply order inflation to stop, although this, ostensibly, is what some are promising to do. Nor, in Ottawa Bureau, was similarly treated.

The Intelligencer

Belleville's budget for 1974 indicates that several members of Council will not run again; how could they, after producing a six-million bike.

Even after allowing for the effects of inflation the budget reflected the parochial outlook or a blased clique of politicians deliberately seeking to curry favor with the purchase of the Potter property while continuing to subsidize the salaries of the managers and professionals in the M.C.A., the U.C.R.A. and the Chamber of Commerce. They are the beneficiaries of the pensioners over 65. Pensioners Concerned got nothing, and the most effected and needed social agency in the district, the Citizens Bureau, was similarly treated.

Our interesting Rem was $238,790 for "other".

What "other" is was not made clear. However, if the $238,790 for "other" together with the $100,000 for boards and the purchase of the Potter property had been voted out, it might have been possible to increase the mill rate at all.

A little gas and an exercise of common sense would have produced a budget that would not be a burden to our senior citizens and others on fixed incomes, and would have encouraged industry to establish in the established villages that bleed for the ever-increasing costs of urban sprawl.

City Council Should Have Taken Stand

By MAURICE SWITZER
Managing Editor

Belleville city councillors have missed out on a golden opportunity to stand up and be counted.

The occasion came at the last regular council session when a resolution from the regional municipality of Peel condemning violence in amateur hockey came up for discussion.

A brawl-ridden Ontario Hockey Association Junior B playoff series between Bramalea Blues and Hamilton Red Wings prompted the Peel resolution, which petitions other provincial municipalities to ask the OHA for a special inquiry.

Bramalea won the first game of the playoff series 9-2, but team officials refused to send their players onto the ice in Hamilton again, fearing for their safety. Those officials were subsequently suspended by the OHA.

While the provincial government has conducted its own inquiry into the free-for-all one-game series that was awarded to Hamilton by default, the Ontario Hockey Association has apparently not deemed a full-scale investigation necessary into hockey violence in general, and in the Bramalea-Hamilton series in particular.

That is not just interesting to the parents of the 1200 Belleville boys who play in this city's minor hockey system. It is interesting to anyone who read this week about an 18-year-old Brampton boy being sentenced to a six-month reformatory term for killing an opposition hockey player in a post-game fight.

It's bad enough to see Philadelphia Flyers or Boston Bruins spearing, butt-ending, and slugging their way through what is supposed to be a game of skill and dexterity. But, the viewer can rationalize, at least THEY'RE getting paid thousands of dollars for living dangerously.

But when rank amateurs play sport in an atmosphere of unbridled violence, they are flirting with tragedy.

That was what prompted the resolution from Peel, a resolution no more complicated than a petition asking support for a worthy cause.

Councils were not being asked to issue a debenture or pass a prohibitive bylaw; they were merely given the opportunity to add their names to a list of people growing more concerned about the welfare of our youth.

As Pickon reeve Ross Cronkwright urged fellow town councillors before they endorsed the resolution this week: "It's not merely a government issue, it's a parent issue."

Unfortunately for Belleville, there were no such eloquent expressions forthcoming at the last meeting of this city's council.

There was some silly debate about whether the resolution should be referred to the recreation committee, which council defeated, since they felt minor hockey was outside of that department's jurisdiction.

That decision having been taken, council voted on the original resolution, and it was lost on a tie.

Presumably, none of the councillors who voted against the Peel resolution are aware that there is a violence problem in amateur hockey. Not only is the provincial government showing a passing interest in the problem, but such organizations as the United Church have established committees to try and propose solutions.

It is also to be assumed that none of the dissenting Belleville councillors realize that their city is represented in the same league as Bramalea, one of the two teams at the vortex of the dispute.

In fact, Bramalea defeated Belleville's Bobcats in a close playoff series to win the chance to represent the Metro Toronto Junior B league against Hamilton.

Those boys who were getting their eyes gouged with "foreign objects" and who received threats that there was a bomb on their team bus could have been from this city.

Would that have to happen before our council took a stand?

Part-time Cartoonist Picks Up Ideas from Newscasts

By MIKE BRADSHAW

Eugene Moshynski has been a commercial artist for the past 11 years. But during that time he has broadened his artistic scope to include everything from designing Christmas cards to abstract paintings.

Among Moshynski's undertakings is a recent dabble in political cartoons.

A few months ago the Intelligencer began featuring a weekly opinion page known simply as "Page Five". A short time after the inception of "Page Five," Mr. Moshynski began doing cartoons for it.

The idea for the cartoons came to me while I listen to the news on the radio, watch it on television and read it in the newspaper," commenta the bespectacled Moshynski, surrounded by books in the den at his Carrying Place road home.

"As soon as the ideas come I draw a rough outline on whatever is handy and then redo them in my spare time," he adds.

Moshynski breeds an air of confidence as he describes his work. Not overconfidence, but a self-recognition of his own ability. "I understand politics very well" he says. "I have to understand them in order to make light of them."

Generally the cartoon are satirical caricatures of local political events or figureheads, but Eugene has done many based on provincial and national politics as well.

"I really enjoy creating the cartoons," grins the 30-year-old artist.

Moshynski demonstrates keen perception, anticipating questions before they are asked.

"I wouldn't mind doing a series of political cartoons for a newspaper syndicate. The challenge would make it interesting," he smiles.

For the past two, he has developed talents in many commercial forms of painting.

Advertising jobs include sign painting, the designing of company trademarks and public relations brochures.

An area antique dealer depends on Moshynski's expert skills to restore painted designs on glass and furniture.

Moshynski came to Canada with his wife in 1948. At first he lived in Midland and then in Trenton. Now he lives on the Redeemerville road about four miles past that village.

His office, gallery and workshop are all located in his home and the presence of his work has robbed off on his family.

Daughter, Susan, (he also has a son) is taking a university course in art. During the summer months she places to work in her particular field of art. Presently, she travels to the Quinte Mall on weekends and does work in pastels.

The Moshynski gallery speaks for itself. Currently there are over 100 paintings ranging in size, type and price.

Ambition and ability have landed Moshynski a position, through Loyalist College, as an art teacher in the rehabilitation program at Warkworth Penitentiary.

For Eugene Moshynski though, life hasn't always been so easy going.

He and his wife are natives of Poland, who spent five years in a German concentration camp. Then they immigrated to Canada. The two took jobs wherever they could, the first of which was working in a hotel.

For a time following the war, Eugene Moshynski made a living sketching commercially for the United States Army.

Moving became a way of survival for the Moshynski until finally they settled down in Trenton and Eugene began work at Bata Shoe Company.

Moshynski had studied art in a correspondence course in commercial art and 11 years ago began his own business.

Now his business has grown from strictly commercial art to encompass all types or art. His name is becoming more and more prominent, in the area and across the province.

To his success Eugene simply says, "You have to enjoy your work to become good at it. And I love mine."

Buyers Should Beware Super Selling Techniques

BERT GERLING
Citizens' Bureau

PROBLEM:

Mr. and Mrs. B. received a telegram announcing that they had been selected to receive a gift from Siegel's Department Store, 89 Station Street, Belleville. To redeem the gift, the B's were advised to call a local telephone number to arrange a convenient time to pick up their gifts. The telegram was cryptic in pointing out that BOTH husband and wife had to be present to receive their gift.

The B's pondered the prospect of receiving something for nothing. It did not seem to make sense: why should strangers want to give them anything? Surely, the whole thing had to be a sales-gimmick.

The B's had all but forgotten about the telegram when they received a "Gift-O-Gram Reminder" in the mail, stating that this was the second and final notice, that the B's gift had been paid and had to be called for within three days. Again the B's were exhorted to call Siegel's and arrange to collect their gifts.

The quasi-official form of the notice weakened the B's resolution to ignore the offer. Perhaps it was genuine - after all the "Gift-O-Gram Remin der" stated in plain English,

"We are holding your part of the more than $12,000 in 'Get Acquainted Products' we are giving away to residents in this area without obligation."

Did it not stand to reason that the company had to spend money on advertising gifts in order to secure customers? Since accepting the gift would have no strings attached, they might as well make an appointment to see what this was all about.

The B's obtained their gift all right — a Teflon frying pan.

They also received their copy of a conditional sales-contract listing about $800 worth of merchandise; a fire-alarm unit, a sewing machine, a floor-polisher, and a projector.

Once again at home, the B's looked at their contract and wondered if they really needed a fire-alarm system. A salesman at Siegel's had extolled the virtue of this alarm-unit no end. He pleaded with the B's, urging the unit upon them "in the interest of their loved ones."

BERT GERLING

Away from the high-pitched sales-pressure and in the quiet of their home, it dawned on the B's they had committed themselves to paying hundreds of dollars for articles which they didn't need.

SOLUTION:

Mr. B contacted the Trenton Citizens' Bureau and related the details of his "purchase." He was hopeful, however, that the 48 hour cooling-off period required to protect the public from high-pressure sales-tactics would rescue him from Siegel's. Unfortunately Mr. B had to be advised that this "cooling-off" period pertains to contracts signed outside the seller's place of business.

The B's had signed their contract on Siegel's premises. It was therefore legally binding on them.

Mr. B was referred to the Queen's University Law Students Legal Aid.

Queen's University Law Students Legal Aid is available to the public free of charge, at 249 William Street, Belleville, Tel.: 962-0132. Their office is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. every day except Friday and in addition from 6 to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

ED NOTE:

In no way is it suggested that the operation of the store in question, which also has a Kingston outlet, is anything but perfectly legitimate within the terms of the law.

Siegel's, an unusually heavy volume of complaints about Siegel selling techniques has been received by the Chamber of Commerce, the Citizens' Bureau, the Intelligencer, and the Ontario Department of Consumer and Commercial Relations.

Labor Council Applauded

By WILLIAM HOCKLEY

The news that Quinte District Labor Council is about to flex its muscles is indeed welcome news.

For a long time this organization has tended to remain on the sidelines and restrict its considerable influence to those problems immediately connected with the labor movement.

The notice of motion laid down by veteran labor representative Ian Reilly regarding a possible boycott of organized labor of the 1974 United Way Appeal is a step in the right direction.

Mr. Reilly has not yet spoken to the motion so his reasons cannot be discussed. However, there is enough evidence that considerable concern exists in the community about these yearly fund-raising from two or more sources.

Supports Labor Boycott

Reader Believes We Got Along Better Without UCS

By CLARENCE YOUNG

Last Saturday's Page Five did little to encourage the Quinte District Labor Council to call off its proposed boycott of this year's United Way Appeal.

The obscenity and crudity of the anti-labor cartoon, together with the condescending articles by Virginia O'Rourke and Dr. Douglas Horne showed the attitudes of those who have had their way so long in Belleville.

Mrs. O'Rourke displayed such condescension that one is left with the impression she feels she is addressing herself to a group of disobedient children who ought to be spanked for disagreeing with mother.

What right Mrs. O'Rourke, as president of the United Community Services has to instruct the Quinte District Labor Council to "make a responsible and informed decision" is beyond me. Is she subtly indicating that they are not capable of doing so without her help?

The implied threat in her last paragraph needs little explanation. Why would it be "most unfortunate for the Labor Council to take any steps to diminish the effectiveness of the United Way Appeal?"

Its effectiveness can be summed up by the amount of "double dipping" that is indulged in by some of the participating agencies.

The old ploy of telling us that if the city did the thing it would cost the taxpayer a great deal more is not valid in this case at all as the city has never tried it.

A great deal of loose talk is circulated by the YMCA about its fulfillment of a need by making available its swimming pool. In the first place the city of Belleville never asked for the YMCA and in the second, the number of people using it is only a very small percentage of the population — many of the swimmers are the same ones counted over every time they use the pool.

I can see no reason for the YMCA to make a fuss about making their playing field area available for use to the city. After all we pay for it by tax exemptions.

In case Dr. Horne has forgotten, the "grant" given to the YMCA is for the very purpose of paying the school tax. If he cares to recall only a couple of years or so back they made no bones about asking for the money for this very purpose until it was pointed out to them that this was illegal. Since that time it has been given for "services rendered".

Like elephants, some of us have long memories. My theme has always been in relation to the UCS and the YMCA: "Where are all the volunteers you talk so much about." Surely to goodness from among the army you claim to have recruited there are some that could run the administrative side of things.

It seems to me for organizations that have such perennial financial difficulties a saving of in the area of $40,000 is not to be sneered at — and that could easily be arrived at by getting rid of the overpaid professionals that ride on the backs of the unpaid volunteers.

We got along very well before the birth of the UCS, in fact, as I recall, we did better, the YMCA was a good bet when it was on Campbell Street. Then without asking the taxpayers who were going to have to continually ball them out of trouble, they built a comfortable suite of offices around a swimming pool, hired the costly professionals and then sat back and asked us to continue to fork up the money to keep things going on a variety of doubtful excuses.

It's time this came to an end. I agree with Ian Reilly and I hope he and his colleagues stick with it. If the YMCA is all it claims to be it will command the public support from those it claims to be serving.

If it does not it should fold its tent and leave. That's the rule of the game.

* * *

Ed Note: Ian Reilly does not seem to share Mr. Young's harsh opinion of the June 1 Page Five caricature of himself. In a letter to The Intelligencer, Mr. Reilly says "... I with to extend my congratulations to Eugene Moshynski for the excellent editorial cartoon ... in which I am characterized so well."

Free Books for Home Preservers

Earnest home preservers already have rhubarb and asparagus in the freezer and are working up to a summer-long orgy of blanching and freezing.

Novices, or experienced freezers who need to refresh their memories, can write to the Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Government of Ontario, Toronto, for Notes on Home Freezing or the federal Agriculture Canada, Ottawa, Ontario, for "Freezing Foods."

While you're at it, you can write the provincial government for its Jams, Jellies and Pickles booklet.

There's an alternative to those expensive flower-drying kits if you'd like to preserve some of your own garden blooms this summer. All you need is regular yellow cornmeal and borax powder like "20 Mule Team Borax."

Mix two parts cornmeal to one part borax.

Cut your flowers the day you wish to begin drying them; it's best to cut them at mid-morning. Gently shake off excess water on the petals. Cut the blossom from the stem just below the calyx where the stem swells to become the flower's base.

Pour about two inches of the mixture in a container with high sides and a cover. Place the flowers on this bed and carefully sprinkle with the mixture until the flower is completely covered. Be sure not to bend or crush petals. Cover the container and store it at room temperature for three to seven days.

The "curing" time will depend on the type of flower, home humidity conditions and temperature.

When you think the time is right — allow more time for tulips than carnations, naturally — gently remove the flower. If it is still "leathery," return it, repacking with fresh mixture and allow to cure another day or so.

Wouldn't it be great department: (Some random complaints from customers around town).

Wouldn't it be great if men's size nine-elevens socks fit somebody besides the size nines?

Wouldn't it be great if you could buy potatoes that weren't damp and squishy and ready to turn into a forest as soon as you get them home?

Wouldn't it be great if you could get through the supermarket check-out the last once without having to wait for somebody to find a price for an item?

Wouldn't it be great if the price of something went down?

Bridge—A Dangerous Game

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — To Peggy Hanna, bridge is a "wonderful, wholesome sport."

But she says it has ruined marriages, caused ulcers and left couples childless, and "there are some married couples who should never play—not together, anyway."

Mrs. Hanna is a new life master, the highest rank a bridge player can get. Although she and her husband Richard, another life master, don't play bridge table at a marital battleground, they tell some stories that might prompt some card players to stick to solitaire.

"I've seen husbands scream at their wives; some people can be very rude and insulting. At tournaments, the room sometimes sounds like a disturbed ward," said Mrs. Hanna, who notes that bridges competed against partners is be silent during bidding.

"I've never been to a national tournament where they didn't have to call the doctor," she said. "The tension is incredible."

To a serious player like Mrs. Hanna, the rank of life master represents the culmination of years of study and hundreds of bridge hands—"each of them different."

Life master is to bridge what the Hall of Fame is to baseball. Players must accumulate 300 master points, 10 of them from regional and national contests.

Mrs. Hanna began playing fewer than 15 years ago when a Welcome Wagon Club in South Bend, Ind., offered lessons in "social bridge," a less demanding game than duplicate bridge.

She can't name a single friend she doesn't play bridge and she thinks nothing of driving 50 miles on a rainy night to keep a bridge appointment. Most vacations are combined with bridge and the Hannas spend their honeymoon playing bridge with hundreds of others in a 28-day national tournament in Pennsylvania.

"We go to three or four national tournaments a year, enter most of the regionals and sectionals, and we play three or four nights a week with friends or at our local bridge club," Mrs. Hanna said.

Look Good—Feel Good

By DORIS CLARK

My sister, Sally Hamilton, came across a letter you wrote several years ago. She signed it "Worn Stress Becomes Distress" . I don't remember.

"I said, 'Maybe you think that what you do or how you look doesn't matter much. But just try and see how much it does for you and for those around you when you perk up. Well, I tried a new hairdo and bought something new and it did have an impression. "It is an effort, though, at times, to keep up one's physical appearance as well as one's spiritual strength. We must trust in God no matter how troubled we may be. He will not fail in giving us the strength to carry on."

Sally gave me her article, "Lovelier With The Years", for reproduction a while ago, and many of you have read it. I am sure you would agree with Sally if you were to try giving yourself a lift about how you look.

"Those around you," isn't it part of good cheer and good morals to look your best for those you love the best?

One mother I know told me she was brought up with a felt when her daughter told about how freshly groomed her favorite teacher. "I was. How she always smelled so good! That mother confessed that from that day on she made a point of cleaning up, putting on fresh make-up and giving her hair a good brush before it was time for the kids to get home from school. She remembered about every light dash of good perfume, too. She wasn't going to let any old teacher be a rival of hers!

She said her husband, even noticed the difference. She said that when he kissed her hello he remarked on how fresh she looked. How did she manage it, he said after a long day's work?

That was another hint — and sprinkling of a blow, too. It made her realize that her hesitation of woes to her husband had become a habit with her. She had forgotten that his return from business was in itself a stirring procedure — 50 minutes by crowded bus after the high pressure of an executive day.

So she began thinking of him and grinning for him a little. She began think--- of him enough to put herself in his shoes. What she discovered shocked her.

Far too many of our fine middle —aged husband and fathers are dropping out of the human rat race via heart failure, and they need all the peace and relaxation they can get back home to lift the pressure quickly.

And while you are at it, remember to stress grooming for other people, too. How about little six-year-old Molly, or Jack, at 127 Very early brush hair, manicure finger nails. Even at 12 a boy can notice how good it feels to ...'ve a bath, believe it or not! ...sponsibility. Back in my original question: How does a father fill his young children that their mother doesn't want them? —Heartsick Grandmother. . . .

Dear Grandmother: Those two youngsters are going to feel plenty rejected without being told that their mother doesn't want them.

I hope you and your son will do everything in your power to protect the children by explaining that their mother chose not to stay married to their father and they are not with her because she couldn't take them.

Keep in mind, too, that the day may come when their mother might get her head together and want to have a relationship with her children. If you muddy the waters now it will create a permanent roadblock for the future and this would be very sad for the children.

Dear Ann Landers: Since everyone reads your column will you please print this? It would probably help a great many people who need a better perspective. The poem was sent to me by a friend who asked that I not identify her. Thank you.—Bess

Dear Bess: Here it is. While I respect your friend's wishes to remain anonymous, I believe we should credit Sydney Harris, since the poem is a ripoff of his original:

When he speaks, it's "words of wisdom."

When she speaks, it's "idle chatter."

When he tells her what to do, it's good advice:

When she tells him, it's nagging.

When he naps on the couch in the evenings, he's getting a well-earned rest after a heard day's work.

When she naps on the couch, she's neglecting her duties.

When he yells at the children, he's disciplining them:

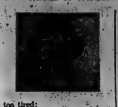
When she yells at the children, she's impatient.

If he's snappy and unkind to her, it's because she drove him to it;

If she's snappy and unkind to him, she's ill-tempered.

When he's too tired to pay any attention to her, he's just too tired;

When she's too tired to pay any attention to him, she's frigid.



If he had written this, it would be a literary masterpiece;

Because she wrote it, it's just complaining.

Dear Ann: This might sound stupid, but do animals see color?—Nature Lover

Dear Lover: Only monkeys and apes see color. The reason: Living creatures have developed only those abilities they need. Nearly all wild animals hunt at night. Animals that graze do so mostly in the evenings. They don't need to see color.

Monkeys and apes are awake in the daytime and they need to see color so they'll know what they are eating, and also to protect themselves against danger.

'Marital Sensation' Hides From Husbands

BOMBAY (CP)—Renu Kumari's first wedding took place in March, 1968. She was then only 11.

"I have forgotten my first husband's name," Renu said in an interview. "It was. I think, Gautam Sharma" or Pratap Sharma."

Renu's memory lapse is understandable. In the last 25 years, she has married 30 men, bearing a dozen children.

Beautiful, laughing Renu's marital record has become a national sensation in India because, as the United News of India agency put it, 29 of her former husbands are in hot pursuit of her.

The UNI reported from Patna, capital of Bihar province, that some of them have already reached the remote hamlet of Sunderpur on the India-Nepal frontier in the Himalayan mountains with hopes of retrieving her.

"A hide-and-seek war is going on in the high Himalayas," says one Hindi-language weekly of Patna.

Renu's longest marriage lasted four years and the shortest three months.

"She wrote wedding bells for me," she says. "I'm going to devote the rest of my life to pick (prepare) and weave a work among the backward tribes of my area."

A correspondent of the Daily Express quotes Renu as having left one husband on that she now is "sick of the marriage business."

At least five of her former husbands mean to fight it out legally. They have engaged lawyers talented in the tricky field of marital litigation.

One 44-year-old Ram Singh of Giya town in Bihar—said: "I am prepared to spend any amount to get Renu back. She is my legally wedded wife. All the other so-called husbands are only tricksters who tried to exploit a gullible and innocent woman."

Renu told a police official who visited her hamlet that her 30 husbands included five government officials, two doctors, a policeman, two politicians belonging to the Socialist party and two rich landlords.

Why are so many men after Renu?

She is not only beautiful but rich. One senior Patna High Court lawyer placed the wealth at nearly $650,000—a fantastic amount in Indian conditions.

Police officials say there appears to be no legal basis for Renu's marriages. They believe, she probably lived with various men over the years, bearing children and then moving on to the next "romantic assignment," as one official described it.

The officials say this is not unusual in some tribal communities, though they are staggered by Renu's record.

Will the law some day catch up with Renu?

Luckily for her, her hamlet is only a few miles from the kingdom of Nepal. If any of her ex-husbands get really nasty, she just has to cross into Nepal.

How do you know what's fair when it comes to Transatlantic fares?

$398

Is our summer fare really a bargain?
Well, first, consider what it will get you. We'll fly you from Toronto to London for 22 to 45 days for as little as $398 return and to Glasgow or Manchester for even less. You can choose a Friday or Saturday departure for only $16 more, your children under 12 travel half-fare, and fly on a regularly-scheduled British Airways jet. So, unlike the charters, there's no deposit required, no risk of cancellation, flexibility of travel dates, and a full refund if you have to change your plans. And, just as important, you get the kind of superb service and attention you'd expect from British Airways.

Consider who's offering the $398 Bargain.
British Airways is quite simply the largest international airline in the world. And, we think, the best. We've got almost 200 destinations in 88 different countries. We've got a lot of satisfied customers and a lot of reputation because of them. And we're not about to take a chance on losing either.
And consider where the $398 Bargain will take you.
London, alone, could keep you happy for a year. But London is just one small part of Britain and Europe. We can fly you to 62 other destinations all over Europe. And because we know our way around, we can offer you a raft of special "Personalized Holidays" which your British Airways travel agent can tell you about. Some cost just a little more than our $398 Bargain. And some cost a lot more.

But every one of them is a bargain in itself.
Our biggest bargain of all.
Any British Airways or Air Canada travel agent is the expert to see. They'll tell you all you'd like to know about fares and exciting "Personalized Holidays". And they won't charge a cent for doing so. See them soon. Because the sooner you plan your trip, the sooner we see you. And, frankly, we're looking forward to it.

Spiritual Leader of Blacks Defends American Company

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A spiritual shepherd of blacks in South-West Africa, invited to take part in church criticism of a U.S. firm operating in his homeland, had in contrast some words of praise.

"The Americans are doing their best by my people," Bishop Leonard Auala said in an interview. "I do not want to discriminate. Only because of the apartheid policies, they have to do it."

His gentle manner injected a moderating note—and some surprise—into the U.S. church action.

At the same time, however, he condemned the racial separation of apartheid.

Despite the problems, he said he strongly opposes efforts to get American firms to withdraw operations in protest. Instead, saying such action would leave blacks jobless and without means of livelihood.

"Something is better than nothing," he said. "My people work for the Americans and we are satisfied with those white people. They also are against apartheid, but have to follow South Africa's laws."

Bishop Auala, 46, a heavy set, courtly man with crew-cut gray hair, heads the Evangelical Lutheran Ovambokavango Church in Namibia (South-West Africa) whose 330,000 members make up half the mainly black population of that disputed territory.

"My people want to be a free nation. Independent states, black and white together, hand in hand, one country," he said.

"But I don't want white people put over my skills. We're not against white people, only against discrimination."

The bishop was on hand for a stockholders' meeting Wednesday in Wilmington, Del., of the Newmont Mining Corp., largest employer in Namibia, readying a resolution by United Church of Christ holding $1 million worth of shares.

The resolution called for "fair employment" standards of equal pay and opportunity without regard to race, and for efforts to gradually any laws where they may interfere with achieving that objective.

Blacks in Namibia now get about a sixth the wages of whites, the church documentation said.

But Dr. Howard Schomer, the church's international affairs secretary who visited the company's Namibia mine, said black workers were kept crowded in bunkhouses, apart from families. He called their living conditions inhuman.

Disagreeing with Bishop Auala that the Americans did "their best," he suggested the bishop referred—not to wages and conditions—but to American racial "attitudes."

"Attitudes, yes," the bishop nodded. The attitudes of black people and American employers is better than with South African white supremacists. With them, we are far apart." He said his hands are tied. "There is a wall between us. But not with the Americans or whites."

There are about 85,000 whites among the 750,000 people of Namibia, ever which South Africa has continued to exercise authority in defiance of United Nations action calling the South African administration there illegal.

Selection of 'Seats' Good Test of Character

By Dr. Gordon C. Smyth

I ask you to read Luke 14:7-11. Evidently, diners-seeking did not have to await our times. Location of reclining seats at ancient banquets was a precise art. Protocol made it clear which of three people on a couch held highest rank.

You took my suggestion? You have read the parable? Fine! In its terms, then, which of the three withheld, is indicated, was most likely to be removed to the edge where state cigarette butts stagnated the dust-plush corners of the couch?

No, says Jesus in that simple but genius device, don't set seek a high place, or you will be nudged without ceremony to the bottom and the ironic public shame. So, what do we do?

Misinterpretation No. 1: Calculate. This is the gambit of the "religious" person. He is shrewd, enough to appear humble so that he can be proud of his humility and thus be advanced. He is not a new type. They used to call them "Pharisees".

No, says the Christian faith. Ambition of this sort is dishonest. Real humility is opposed to calculation. The "Prodigal Son" dare not kneel and then rise, even his father's shoulder to see how the roasting of the fatted calf was going along. You cannot sneak up on God.

Misinterpretation No. 2: Play It Safe. This is the gambit of the Canadian who is smart enough but is bewildered by the extremes of our parable. Why take the risk of making for the head table and losing all?

He knows there are seats at mid-distance where there is still room to hide and where people not in the spotlight, but also not behind the posts and off behind the cigar smoke.

This is a typical "politician" solution. Give lip-service to institutions for good in the community. Even turn up occasionally and make public contributions. But do not become involved. You may convince yourself that you are concerned and the downward trend in society. At any rate, being above controversy and beyond making mistakes involved in participation may create for you a flawless image.

No, Jesus says again, deep commitment and risk are part and parcel of genuine humility.

Interpretation? There may be others: here is mine. The parable is not interested in masks but in persons. It does not say how to act so much as it says what to be.

It is concerned where pride, pride defeats its own ends. Humility has its own reward. It is born of a faith that takes life in its stride. Jesus walked this way, and He found a place. On a gallows. St. Paul writes, "He humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even death on a cross." (Phil. 2:8)

P.S. There is a Sequel. There had been no capitulation, no self-seeking, no self-withholding. "Therefore God has highly exalted him and bestowed on him the name which is above every name." Full circle. The ethical note in the same passage. He says, "have this mind among yourselves, which you have in Christ Jesus." Amen and Amen!

English Churches Selling Treasures

By ROD CURRIE

LONDON (CP) — A sudden, sharp increase in thefts from churches and the growing need for many of them to sell ready cash has led to a new trend within the Anglican community of auctioning irreplaceable treasures.

Predictably, this has led to a row, with many traditionalists arguing that the churches have no right to cash in on treasures donated by the faithful hundreds of years ago.

"It's rather like popping some of the Crown Jewels," says Rev. Peter Hawker, keeper of the treasury at Lincoln Cathedral. "The treasures of the church are as much treasures as the church has no right to sell what people have entrusted to it."

Nevertheless, the practice is growing. At the medieval parish of Middleton, Yorkshire, recently seeking permission to auction Italo-Gothic century silver cup worth about £25,000 (U.S.$60,000). It was found in the vicarage attic about 100 years ago and now is to a London bank vault because the church cannot afford to insure it.

This situation underlines the argument of those who say such treasures are overused, hardly ever even seen and that the church is justified in taking advantage of the current inflated prices for antique silver.

Several years ago it was estimated that the Church of England's treasures were worth about £20 million ($60.6 million) but recent steep increases in the antique and silver markets have vastly enhanced their value.

St. Giles Church in south London is another recent loser from the diocesan bishop to sell two William and Mary flagons, also kept in bank vaults, to help pay for interior improvements.

"There's no advantage to us in keeping them," says Canon Douglas Rhymes. "They are completely useless things—we haven't used them for hundreds of years."

Notable recent sales were of silver plate by St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, for £73,000 and two Tudor flagons by the Westwell parish in Kent for £56,000.

The upsurge in such sales follows a report that more than 1,000 churches in Britain were raided last year with thieves taking Georgian and Restoration period silver, old paintings and other valuable regalia worth thousands of pounds.

Church officials increasingly face the alternatives of locking up even more of their treasures or leaving the churches themselves during worship. The latter choice, it is said on official, "puts Christianity in danger of being a one-day-a-week affair for Sundays only."

A spokesman for the ecclesiastical Insurance office, which insures 90 per cent of the 18,000 Anglican churches in Britain, said "the rise in thefts against churches began about four years ago and now has reached a steady plateau of about 2,000 a year."

Successor Appointed

ANTIGONISH, N.S. (CP) — Sister Margaret Delorey of the Congregation of Notre Dame has been appointed principal and superior of the St. Francis Xavier University's Mount Saint Bernard College. She succeeds Sister Catharine MacNeil, who has been named eastern provincial superior of the Congregation of Notre Dame.

Nobody Cared

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — Four secondary school students who took part in a shop-lifting experiment here concluded that "nobody really cares at all." The experiment was part of a project on crime conducted by three school classes. The students said most shoppers took little notice or bothered to comment about the thefts—$23.72 worth of food.

Dance Through School

MILLBROOK, N.Y. (AP) — Bennett College and New York University will open a special six-week program in July to give students aged 13 to 16 the chance to pursue a dancing career while continuing their education. The pupils will train with NYU's professional dance company on the campus of Bennett College, located 85 miles north of New York City.

Hastings Election Gets In Stride

By HARRY HULMAN
Twenty-two days is exactly one month left to day's election day.
Federal electioneering this week began gathering momentum in Hastings riding. Jack Ellis, nominated Conservative, officially launched his campaign. The Liberal cause remains under Mark Rudkai at their candidate. Robert Sanders, New Democratic Party contestant has also been at the starting line. The voters have a triple contrast in personalities, political philosophies and past electoral standings to view in the next four weeks. Here's how the three wage some preliminary feature as they leave the campaign starting line in earnest:

BOB SANDERS

NDP: 'Gimmicks No Longe Count'

Bob Sanders, Belleville, General Hospital social worker, talks with relish when he speaks election to Hastings.

As New Democratic Party candidate, he takes on a hefty challenge. The NDP always has been an underdog trailing local establishment Tory and Liberal organizations. Support has been sparse — 3,300 votes from a total 31,800 in 1972 — and so has' financing. The realities of the situation has brushed off on candidacy style.

Mr. Sanders, 32, says his campaign will be free of hoopla since "gimmicks no longer count" with a well-educated electorate who want logic and facts.

In 1972 Hastings NDP registered election expenses at $994. Mr. Sanders says NDP spendings is only about five per cent of its bigger opponents.

To help with campaign expenses he's borrowed $300 on a personal backstake — $200 left after interest paid.

But "brotherhood and solidarity will carry us through," he says.

Mr. Sanders is the only Hastings candidate tied to a daily job. He'll take "very little time off from work" because of the nature of his profession.

"I might miss political appointments if a patient calls me," he says.

But Bell administration has been understanding and indicated as much leeway as possible "for which I'm grateful."

Mr. Sanders has 24 university credits from sociology to economics.

Among the issues he'll be emphasizing will be what he calls "the extreme poverty" of the Hastings area "compared with the rest of Ontario."

PC: No-party Bloc

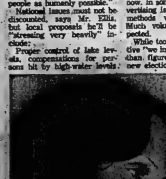
Jack Ellis, the seasoned campaigner in Hastings this election, has noticed a factor that might bear watching:

Many new people with no specific party connection.

It's been a growing change in a riding which has mainly been polarized between Liberal and Conservative traditions.

To these "many new faces" with "no particular party connection" Mr. Ellis will ask votes for re-election as Conservative MP on his record of "getting things done and a sympathetic ear" to constituency problems.

The Ellis campaign — in 1972 it netted a comfortable 8,000-vote edge over Joe Lebrasle — will see the candidate working on a "door-to-door basis" with "as many people as humanly possible."



National issues must not be discounted, says Mr. Ellis, but local prospects he'll be stressing very heavily" include:

Proper control of late levels, compensations for persons hit by high-water levels in the Belleville-Deseronto area; federal participation in renewing Bancroft uranium production; closer relationship with the province in developing resources and vacation areas; assistance in removing railroad tracks from south Belleville.

He won't suspend criticism of Unemployment Insurance Commission policies, which, he says, has led to attempts to remove some UIC administrators from Belleville. Local UIC employees have displayed "excellent" co-operation while dealing with a "particularly poor piece of legislation, Mr. Ellis also says his campaign costs rising. In 1972 his Conservative registered costs at $19,500 — almost on par with the Liberals. Material left over from that campaign is being recycled to cut costs now. In some areas where advertising is costlier, alternate methods will be searched. Much volunteer help is expected.

While too early to be definitive "we intend to spend less" than figures realized in the new election legislation.

Marie Kurchak for the Liberals

Kurchak Mainstreets

Marie Kurchak is a new presence in Hastings politics.

Until this week,when she announced her subsequent winning bid for Liberal nomination, the 35-year-old Toronto television journalist and communications expert was also unknown in the area. But she says she and her husband Bill have been seeking a move here from big-city style living for some time.

Her campaign style: "I'm going to be doing mainly main-streeting on a one-to-one basis."

She says she wants to get at "central issues" like political integrity; the mechanism by which people can affect government and bureaucratic decision-making. A specific issue: Food production.

In 1972 the Liberals ran a registered $18,300 to harvest 11,300 votes and lose by 5,200. Mrs. Kurchak's bid in her convention publicity she isn't rich and "one shouldn't have to be" to seek office in Canada.

She indicates party funding will turn for contributions from the general public — the response being a barometer of party chances. There'll also be much use of volunteers.

People "keep telling me this is a Tory riding." But she has an impression of many uncommitted voters. There's also the young — voting for the first time.

For them, she says, there's a need for "somebody they can identify with" and inform them on the voting process.

New CFB Commander Takes Over Officially

TRENTON — Col. J. C. Henry, of Kirkland Lake, took over command of Canadian Forces Base Trenton Friday.

This marks the 29th command change in the base's 43-year history.

Col. Henry's last posting was with NORAD Headquarters in Colorado Springs.

His predecessor, Brig.-Gen. Robert Husch takes over a new posting as chief of staff for Air Transport Command, also based at Trenton.

In his remarks to the ranks and local dignitaries, Gen Husch reflected over his year as base commander as "very busy, challenging and rewarding."

"I could not have asked for more support from my staff," he said.

Col. Henry said "many improvements have been made at the base recently ... there is much more to be done."

"We have a great responsibility," he said.

Pets' Clinic-on-wheels Due Here Next Week

The Ontario Humane Society's mobile clinic is coming to the Quinte Animal Shelter, Avonlough Rd., June 12.

The OSS operates the clinic on a charitable basis, asking pet owners to contribute what they can afford for the service.

Introduced in 1973, this is the first visit of the clinic to the Quinte district this year. It will return in the fall.

Surgery is scheduled from 10 to 12 a.m. Wednesday as spaying will be done. But the following procedures will be performed on dogs and cats. Neutering, tumor removal, wart removal, radical mastectomy, open-wound treatment and dentistry.

The shelter should be notified in advance of animals for surgery. Telephone number is 967-1623. Pet owners should be prepared to leave surgery patients at the shelter overnight.

Time between 12 noon and 1 p.m. will be devoted to diagnoses; inoculations will be given between 1 and 2 p.m.

Veterinarian with the clinic is Dr. Mark Szczepaniak.

Mishap On the Street

Ambulance crew and police rushed to East Moira St. Friday when motorcyclist was reported injured after his machine slid out of control. But Gary Hughes, 21, East Moira St., was later released after checkup at Belleville General Hospital. Police said he'd escaped incident with minor arm injuries.

Bigger Hastings Riding Proposed to Province

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The provincial riding of Hastings which now takes in all of the county except Sidney, Belleville and Trenton, would be enlarged by part of Peterborough under proposals for electoral boundary changes tabled in the legislature Friday.

The proposals, made by a three-man commission, would add six seats to the 117-seat legislature. It would eliminate 27 present riding names and add 33 new ones.

Under the proposals, the name of Hastings riding would disappear and would be replaced by a new riding named Hastings-Peterborough.

No mention is made of any proposed change for Quinte riding now represented by Correctional Services Minister Richard Potter. Neither is a change reported for Prince Edward-Lennox, held by Conservative James Taylor.

Clarke Rollins, Hastings MPP, said it is proposed that the Peterborough county townships of Dummer, Asphodel, Belmont, Methuen and Chandos, along with the villages of Norwood and Havelock be included in Hastings riding.

Mr. Rollins said public hearings would be held some time after July 12 for presentation of any objections to the proposed changes.

Mr. Rollins said the present Peterborough riding was "over-populated" and that transfer of part of its territory to Hastings would be logical move.

The fact that the name Hastings headed the proposed riding name indicated that little if any boundary change in the present riding was proposed, Mr. Rollins suggested.

The long-sought changes in Ontario electoral boundaries provide for more urban seats and more mixed urban-rural representation.

Based on massive population shifts since the last boundary changes in 1966, the proposed new electoral map would increase Metropolitan Toronto's representation to 29 from 26 seats, double the riding's Peel to the west to four from two seats; and leave Northern Ontario virtually unchanged.

The other ridings were enlarged or reduced, or consolidated, depending on the population balances.

The commission, headed by Mr. Justice Campbell Grant of the Ontario Supreme Court, attempted to define each riding so that it contained an average population of 85,000.

Other commission members are Roderick Lewis, clerk of the legislature and chief election officer, and Prof. T. Ross McKeachie of the University of Western Ontario.

Education Beat

Comeback For Moral Values

By LENNY WILLIAMSON

This shouldn't come as much of a shock.

Since Watergate, a new exportable commodity from Canada is in demand in the United States.

It's called moral values.

Don't snicker.

A formal program for the teaching of moral values in schools is under development in Ontario, chiefly through the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education in Toronto.

Ontario is in the vanguard in reintroducing moral values to the educational system.

And American educators are calling for the teaching of morals in their schools.

Harold Hotchkiss, a history teacher at Centre Hastings Secondary School returned for a conference in Milwaukee, Wis. with the information that, American social studies teachers want a values program.

"The influence of Watergate was apparent," he reported to the board and his fellow history teachers.

To Mr. Hotchkiss's surprise, one university professor termed Lieut. Calley, "the first war America lost."

"That was the first time I'd heard that one," commented Mr. Hotchkiss.

Despite the highest standard of living in the world the United States is reeling under the tensions of terrorism in the streets, inflation and corruption in high places, he adds.

"History teaching for the last few years has put the emphasis on content and on research skills," says Richard McLean, history department head at CHSS and a leader in the development of moral education.

Modern moral education isn't a return to school memorization of Bible verses or the presentation of a set of rules of social conduct.

"As the world becomes more complex, moral values are not applicable," says Mr. McLean.

"As history teachers, we try to present to the students situations they would meet in real life. We try to show them how to sort them through and recognize the moral principles and arguments and we show them how to evaluate those arguments.

A case in point is the expulsion of the Japanese from British Columbia during World War II.

Mr. McLean has already taught a unit on that topic, a topic designed to develop the skills of moral reasoning among his students.

"Moral reasoning is preparation for change, and the only constant factor in life today is change," he says.

"We changed the My Lai massacre and asked the students how they would have reacted if they had been Lieut. Calley," said Mr. McLean. "Would they have placed obedience to higher authority above all else, or would they have listened to the voice of their conscience? What is conscience?"

History teachers are taking on the responsibility for the teaching of moral values.

The history departments are the "natural dynamic parts of secondary schools today," asserts Mr. McLean.

Campaign Machines Are Warming Up

In Prince Edward-Hastings

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

The three political machines in the riding of Prince Edward Hastings have begun the warmup on the campaign trail.

Cadet Awards

Junior officers and senior cadets from the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps Quinte have received Prince Philip's Silver Award.

The awards were presented during the annual inspection recently of RCSCC Quinte.

The awards were: SLT Peter Lorimer, SLT Dale Jones, SLT John Stephenson, CPO Robert Reginald, PI Richard Hine, PI James McKenna, PI Kirk Morey, P2 Stephen Goode and P2 Fred Bardy.

Cadets receiving His Royal Highness's Bronze Award were: P 2 Brian Coughan, P2 Terry Connor, P2 Glen Edwards, P2 Michael Kreti, Pe Robert McGall, P2 Ross Rae, LC Shane Gardiner, LC Tim Sandale, LC George Elliott, LC John Secord, LC Lynn Simpson, LC Robert Sinclair and LC Larry Taylor.

Mall Helps

The Quinte Mall has come to the assistance of the Belleville branch of the Ontario Humane Society.

Fred Smith, mall manager, is now printing the monthly bulletins that go out to members to notify them of meetings and activities of the society.

The mall management has taken over the job as up aid to the fledgling branch, recently revived in the Quinte district.

For Conservative George Hees, the pre-election scurry began 18 months ago.

"I've been in a great burst of speed," said Mr. Hees. "I work 365 days a year. I don't know what to work this way. He has to be elected on the service he has done for the riding in the last term."

In 1972 Mr. Hees had 10,000 votes over Liberal George Cunningham.

Inflation — major plank in each national party campaign platform produced small business and "people generally," are the areas Mr. Hees says he is looking at. "I don't think there'll be any surprises," he says.

In addition to his busy local agenda, Mr. Hees is actively campaigning nationally — touring ridings across Canada.

It's the third campaign for Trenton high school teacher George Cunningham. As in 1972, the Liberal association here is shooting for campaign budget of about $15,000.

The Conservatives have stashed the 1972 campaign budget, from about $28,000 to somewhere around $19,000, according to campaign office manager Jack Robertson.

Key points for Mr. Cunningham are farm incomes and the urban dweller.

Streaking?

City Police allege a 16-year-old Trenton youth streaked in the nude at the A and W Drive-in on Dundas St. East early today.

A constable saw a nude youth getting in a car and — when stopped later — the youth was found fully clothed, police say.

He will appear in court Monday.

He says about 50 per cent of the people in the riding earn below $8,000 a year.

"There are no quick answers for inflation ... we must work to find the answer," he said.

For Prince Edward-Hastings' New Democratic candidate Harvey Goldfried, tactics have been lifelong interest.

He is a cousin of Manitoba premier Ed Schreyer.

Mr. Goldfried, a physics teacher at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, with political roots buried deeply in Manitoba where he was born, says "it is difficult to make inroads into a traditionally Tory riding."

The Prince Edward Hastings NDP organizers have raised about $2,000 in private donations to back campaign costs.

He says "the political tide eventually must change," referring to his riding that has traditionally backed Progressive Conservatives.

He points to inflation and controls on corporate power as prime areas for concern. He says these are common themes as he talks to voters across the riding.

Hits Rock, Car Airborne, 3 Injured

TWEED (Special) — Three persons were injured and property damage was $2,500 early Saturday when a car went out of control and struck a rock cut on the county Sioco Road, west of Highway 37.

Taken to Belleville General Hospital were the driver Garry Woods, 21, RR 2 Havelock; a passenger, Jeffrey Merew, Marlon and Charles Lafleceve, 20, formerly of RR 4 Tweed, car crashed into the wrecked vehicle.

Woods suffered a broken leg, Merew, cuts and head injuries, and Lafleneve head cuts.

Police said the westbound Woods car went out of control, skidded 242 feet before hitting the rock cut, struck a culvert and went airborne 36 feet before landing on its top in the middle of the road. The car was a complete write-off.

They're the Tops

There's good reason for happy smiles of these two graduates of Belleville General Hospital's medical laboratory technology school. Among class of '74 graduating Friday night, Ingeborg Matko (right), Belleville, won gold medal for highest marks, Audrey Karsk has award for outstanding practical achievement.

Smoke in Chicago, Kansas City Caused by Different Methods

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gaylord Perry was better than the Chicago fire Friday night. A blaze at a concession stand at White Sox Park did not affect a whole, but Perry didn't.

While the fire temporarily interrupted Chicago's 8-4 victory over Boston Red Sox, Perry was creating his own heat by pitching Cleveland Indians to a 3-1 decision over Kansas City Royals.

The four-hitter was his 10th straight victory.

"I'd take him over anybody in the league right now," said Kansas City manager Jack McCoon. "He's Cleveland's salvation. Without him, there'd be wins, where would the Indians be?"

While Perry was throwing smoke at Kansas City, the fans were seeing smoke in Chicago. Fire broke out in a right-field concession stand and delayed the Red Sox-White Sox game 70 minutes in the eighth inning.

Heavy clouds of black smoke poured across the playing area and the players left the field. About 1,500 fans went onto the field to escape the smoke in the stands, but remained orderly. The fire department had the blaze under control in about 15 minutes.

In the other American League games, Texas Rangers stopped Baltimore Orioles 5-3, Detroit Tigers nipped California Angels 5-4, Minnesota Twins nudged New York Yankees 3-2 and Milwaukee Brewers trimmed Oakland Athletics 8-4.

Perry hasn't lost since opening day and doesn't plan to lose before closing day.

Perry, 10-1, outpitched Paul Splittorff, 3-4, while getting late-inning offensive help. The Indians scored single runs in the last two innings on an error and Joe Lis' homer.

Before Lis blasted his first homer of the season in the ninth for an insurance run, the Indians scored the winning run in the eighth with the help of second baseman Frank White's error.

Leron Lee doubled and scored on Ken Berry's single against White's glove and the infielder threw wildly past first.

The Indians rally broke a tie that existed since the first inning.

Dick Allen blasted a three-run homer in the third inning and Chicago scored three more runs in the fifth without the aid of a hit to beat Boston.

Allen's 13th homer of the season, capped a four-run rally in the third. The Red Sox battled back to take a 3-4 lead with their own four-run uprising in the top of the fifth.

The White Sox picked up their winning runs in the bottom of the fifth as Roger Repoz walked the bases full. An error by shortstop Mario Guerrero set in one run. Moret forced in another with a bases-loaded walk and a third came in on a wild pitch.

Cesar Tovar singled home the tie-breaking run for Texas in the sixth inning, then scored on a hit by Alex Johnson that capped a three-run rally to give the Rangers their victory over Baltimore.

Jim Northrup provided the winning runs with a bases-loaded single in the ninth, giving Detroit its victory over California.

John Knox bunted for a base hit and went to third on a wild throw by pitcher John Cumberland. Mickey Stanley and Gary Sutherland were walked intentionally to load the bases.

Reliever Dick Selma replaced Cumberland and struck out Al Kaline before giving up Northrup's hit.

California's Dick Lange, who retired 16 of the first 17 batters he faced, lost a 4-0 lead when the Tigers scored four runs in the seventh.

Glenn Borgmann drove in two runs with a fourth-inning single and Bert Blyleven scattered eight New York hits, leading Minnesota over the Yankees.

The Twins loaded the bases in the fourth against loser Mel Stottlemyre when Tony Oliva drew a single to left and, two forceouts later, Craig Kusick singled and Eric Soderholm walked. Borgmann then lashed his single up the middle, giving Minnesota a 2-0 lead.

Milwaukee scored six runs in the first inning as Tommy John and Jim Colborn, making his first appearance since May 10, pitched 5 1-3 shutout innings for his second victory of the season with a decision over Oakland.

$125,000 Up for Grabs

106th Belmont Stakes Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Secretariat won the 1973 Belmont Stakes by 31 lengths. But after the grueling 1½ miles of the final race of the Triple Crown it barely managed to defeat Sunline a veteran.

The margin of victory in 18 of the last 25 Belmonts was one length or less.

Eleven three-year-olds were entered for today's 106th running of the $125,000 Belmont. Among those scheduled to go to the post at 5:46 p.m. EDT were Kentucky Derby winner Cannonade and Preakness winner Little Current.

The narrowest victory margin in the 10 closest Belmonts in the last quarter-century was the nose triumph by Jaipur in 1962. Jaipur, which did not run in the Kentucky Derby and finished fifth in the Preakness, got up in the final strides to beat Admiral's Voyage.

Neck victories were scored by Native Dancer in 1953; High Gun, 1954; Needles, 1956, and Hail To All, 1965. The margin was three-quarters of a length for Sword Dancer, 1959; High Echelon, 1961, and Pass Catcher, 1971. Ponder won by a half length in 1963, and Mr. Lee by a length in 1960.

Native Dancer, upset by Dark Star in the 1953 Derby, came back to win the Preakness and then held off Jamie K. to take the Belmont as the odds-on favorite.

The next year, High Gun, which existed the Derby and Preakness, defeated Native Dancer's neck victory by beating Fisherman, in the final strides.

Derby winner Needles' neck victory followed a second-place finish to Fabius in the Preakness. In the Belmont he withstood Career Boy to win.

Hail to All earned his neck victory by overtaking Preakness winner Tom Rolfe in the final strides.

Sword Dancer eased some of Brookfield Stable's Triple Crown frustration with his 1959 victory. Brookfield's Bold Ruler was the sire of Derby winner Bagdad, Sword Dancer had finished second to Tomy Lee in the Derby and second to Royal Orbit in the Preakness.

High Echelon took over for stablemate Personality in scoring by three-quarters of a length over Wesley N Pena in the 1970 Belmont. Personality had won the Preakness but was unable to compete in the Belmont.

A year later, the year of Can Nonero II, Pass Catcher won by the same margin. Sunline put much bigger price 17.2. Jim French finished second.

Capot's half-length victory gave him a dead margin over Ponder in the 1969 Triple Crown race. Ponder won the Derby with Capot second. Capot came back to win the Preakness with Ponder fifth, and the Belmont with Ponder second.

Secretariat's one - length victory over Light Up concluded a near-miss Triple Crown performance for the King Ranch colt which won the Derby but was second to Hill prince in the Preakness.

Warlocks Handed 1st Loss

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Owen Sound North Stars handed league-leading Windsor Warlocks their first loss of the Ontario Lacrosse Association Major series season Friday, posting a 16-13 before about 700 hometown fans.

In other games, Brantford Warriors defeated Fergus Thistles 10-8 and St. Catharines Braves dumped Toronto Shooting Stars 23-13.

In Owen Sound, the victory for the North Stars left them tied for second place with Brantford, three points behind Windsor.

Owen Sound got the jump on Windsor in the first period and led 3-2 going into the second.

The Warlocks tied the game 12-12 at the 11:21 mark of the third period but Owen Sound got on a sudden spurt for the win.

Terry Williams paced Owen Sound with four goals. Lachlan McArthur added three goals, Mike Dodge scored two and Dan Cross, Dave Lytle, Mickey Arnold, Jim McCrea, Archie Fisher, Murray Perkins and Dan Russell added singles.

Replying for Windsor were John MacDonald, with three goals, Tom Wright, Bill Hope, John Davey, and Norm Hope, with two each, and John Fletcher and Mike Smith, with one each.

At Brantford, Bill Magie, Al Thompson, John Clement and Ron Gemmell each scored twice for the Warriors while Tom Lockwell and George Chandler added one each.

Chuck Williams scored four goals for the Thistles. Doug Whitaley, Ted O'Brien, Bill Little and Walt Milchell got one each.

At Six Nations, Larry Green notched seven goals. Bill Squires got five and Roy Soulire four. John Boyle scored three Toronto goals, Brian Travers two.

Throws 25th Shutout Inning

Capra Spells Trouble for Expos

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The way Buzz Capra has been pitching, Atlanta manager Eddie Mathews seems a bit hesitant to admit that Capra was not in the Braves' starting plans this year.

"If Don Reed hadn't been hurt, I supposed Capra would still be our long relief man. That is unless someone else got hurt or we decided to go to a five-man rotation," Mathews said.

Friday night, however, Capra showed Mathews that he hasn't yet heard about the bullpen plan to keep him in the ballpark. Capra held Montreal Expos to three hits, struck out 10 while walking just one, won his fifth consecutive complete game and stretched his shutout string to 25 innings with a 5-0 triumph.

In other National League games, Los Angeles Dodgers edged San Diego Padres 4-3, San Diego Padres slapped St. Louis Cardinals 9-3, Houston Astros thrashed New York Mets 14-5, Cincinnati Reds topped Philadelphia Phillies 7-4, 4-1 and San Francisco Giants defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3.

Jimmy Wynn, who started the season like a house afire, led off the ninth inning with his 16th home run of the season. It was his third hit and third run batted in of the game, carrying the Dodgers to victory.

The Dodgers jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first two innings. Chicago came back to tie on a solo shot by Andre Thornton in the fifth, and a three-run, inside-the-park homer by Rick Monday in the ninth.

George Mitterwald got the Cubs in front with a homer in the seventh, but the Dodgers evened the count in their half of the inning.

Dave Winfield's eighth home run and six-hit pitching of rookie Dave Freisleben carried San Diego past St. Louis.

Freisleben and the Cardinals' John Curtis were pitching shutout until Winfield connected in the seventh inning. Freisleben gave up two more hits in the eighth and stranded a runner at second in the ninth to preserve the triumph.

Don Wilson turned Lee May's two-run homer into a Houston victory, contributing two of Astros' four hits.

Wilson held the Mets to six hits and stranded nine New York baserunners.

A controversial ninth-inning double by Johnny Bench scored two runs to break a tie, then Tony Perez singled to drive in Bench and score the Cincinnati decision over Philadelphia.

Bench's line drive with runners on first and third ticked off third-baseman Mike Schmidt's glove and landed in foul territory. Phils Manager Danny Ozark argued that the ball had been foul when it hit Schmidt's glove, but lost the dispute.

The Phils had come back from a 4-2 deficit in the eighth, getting one run when Bench committed a passed ball with the bases loaded. The tying run scored on a Dave Cash single.

San Francisco right-hander John D'Acquisto scattered eight hits and belted a two-run inside-the-park homer in the fourth inning to lead the Giants past the Pirates.

A two-run double by Ed Goodson in the first put the Giants ahead 2-0 and D'Acquisto's homer made it 4-0 before Pittsburgh could score twice in the fifth. But San Francisco put the game away with an unearned run in the fifth and an unearned run in the ninth.

Finley Says No More Fighting

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Oakland Athletics' owner Charles Finley told his players in a private meeting Friday he will tolerate no more fighting of the kind involving outfielders Reggie Jackson and Bill North in Detroit Wednesday.

Finley said he expressed his opinion in a 40-minute session with Jackson, North and manager Alvin Dark in the Athletics clubhouse prior to a game with Milwaukee Brewers.

Finley said he met later for 45 minutes with Dark alone.

"Jackson has been accused of starting the fight over North's not bunting. That is preposterous," Finley said. "Reggie feels very bad about being accused of criticizing North.

"That is not the case at all," he continued. "As a matter of fact, Dark only a few days ago commended North for his overall outstanding play. Reggie did not give that to the press—that they got into a fight because North was not bunting."

"Somebody put that in there," Finley said. The owner gave no reason for the outburst.

Texas Death Match Ends In Blood Bath

By MIKE BRADSHAW
Sports Staff

Over 1100 wrestling fans gathered at the Memorial Arena Friday night to anxiously await through three preliminary bouts to see Big Angelo Mosca and Archie "The Stomper" Goldie tear each other apart in a Texas Death Match.

In a Texas Death Match a wrestler may shoot the works, anything is legal, including kicks and punches to any part of the body. The only way of ending the match is to have the opponent concede or die in the ring.

It was winner take all in the mental meeting of the two hulks with the prize the North American Championship.

The Stomper has held the title for four years and after his performance Friday he could just stay on top for another four years.

In two weeks, though, when Big Time Wrestling returns to Belleville, Archie is going to have to defend his title again. Only this time it will be against the Madison Medican, Louis 'Arība' Martinez.

Friday, The Stomper lived up to his name in the Death Match against Mosca. Goldie had Big Angie on the mats for most of the bout and each time the challenger was down he was kicked into a complete frenzy.

The Stomper applied his boots to Mosca's upper back and head until Angelo was totally dazed. Then, Goldie crouched into his right boot and took out a set of brass knuckles.

Referee, Wil Jennings, tried to take the knuckles from him, but Archie baited him with them and knocked him right out of the ring. Jennings lay on the floor, haven't-a-clue, paralyzed by the blow of The Stomper as to blood seeped from a cut on the bridge of his nose.

When he had knocked every bit of sense out of Mosca with the knuckles he pushed Angelo out of the ring.

With Mosca at the brink of unconsciousness The Stomper climbed out of the ring and began smashing Angelo's head against the timekeepers table. The table and floor around Big Angie were covered in the blood pouring from a gash in his forehead.

Mosca was fatally stunned after 20 minutes at the hands of The Stomper.

Flustered in his own blood and only barely able to walk Angelo dragged himself into the dressing room, thus conceding the match to The Stomper.

It was all over for Mosca, but things just began to happen for Louis Martinez.

Louis watched the whole match from the sidelines. Then, as Mosca struggled past him at the end, Louis became enfuriated.

Martinez, noted for his clean wrestling, went after The Stomper. Louis tried to get the knuckles, but The Stomper smashed him in the head with them and immediately blood poured from the gash. The Stomper pounded Louis' head against the table until the little Mexican was covered in his own blood.

Martinez would not give up however, and finally succeeded in removing the knuckles.

It was then that The Stomper got a taste of his own medicine as Louis pinpointed a blow after blow to The Stomper's face with the brass knuckles.

Now Goldie was bleeding furiously, and realizing he was no longer in command fled from Martinez.

It was then that Louis Martinez took the announcers microphone and openly challenged The Stomper to meet him fair and square in the ring.

With the crowd on its feet in support of Louis, The Stomper was challenged to a Mexican Strap Match. The rules of a Strap Match are the same as those of a Death Match, except that the two wrestlers are tied together at the wrist by a leather strap.

Louis set the match for two weeks from Friday at the Memorial Arena.

In the preliminary bouts, Ron Donner upset the Wolfman in a 20 minute affair. Bo Bo Johnson conceeded his midget match to Billy the Kid and all in all tag team matches combined with Vic Rosaland in charge, on the Wolfman and the Wildman in a two out of three falls affair.

Along with Mexican Strap Match, the June 21 card will also include lady wrestlers and an eight man Battle Royale for $1,000. A Battle Royale in this case means that out of the eight men put in the ring at one time, there may only be one winner. Every man for himself.

Night of Surprises in BISL

Norm Lockhart has finally lasted defeat in the Belleville Industrial Softball League.

Lockhart, the ace pitcher of the Post Office, struckout 16 Brooks Bond batters only to have his team defeated 2-1.

In the second half of a doubleheader at Macville Park Friday night, Constellation finally got a taste of winning as they downed PUC 10-7.

Brooks Bond came up with the first run in the bottom half of the seventh inning to squeeze past the Posties.

With the score 1-1 and Ron Stratton at third base, Jack Walsh pinched a two out suicide bunt down the right side of the Post Office infield and Stratton scored to end the game.

Stratton and Walsh both had a pair of singles for Brooks Bond. Al Colden hit a double and Lou Rivers, Jim Goodfellow and Ross Geen each collected singles.

The Posties got a double from Lockhart, and a single each from Bill Leitch, Steve Cronkrite and Ken McCarthy.

Tom St. Jules went the distance for the Bonders striking out seven and walking nine.

Lockhart walked three.

Constellation banged out 15 hits to wrap up their 10-7 win over PUC.

Wayne May had three singles and Ron Mitchell a double and a triple to lead the winners at the plate. Mike Callaghan, Jim Thompson and Steve Gatcom hit two singles each. Ken Kerik a double and Bob Reid, Vern Boomhower and Bellis one single each to round out the hitting attack.

PUC had 11 hits.

Kerik pitched the win walking one and fanning seven.

Wilson Bulpit absorbed the loss issuing two walks and striking out seven.

Stomper Does His Own Thing

His name is The Stomper, and that's what he does most of his time, here in Angelo Mosca in last night's featuringFront at the Memorial Arena Card of wrestling. The Stomper put the stop on the former Hamilton Tiger Cat to retain his North American title by applying all types of methods in the Texas Death Match, including alleged brass knuckles. The Stomper has been challenged, however, to fight Luis Martinez for his title.

You're running out of time...

to get your name on the voters' list

If you live in an urban area...

If you live in a community of over 8000 you should be receiving shortly a copy of the voters list for your polling division. Check it. Make sure your name is on that list, is correct and that your address and occupation are listed correctly.

If there is any error in the listing of your name and you wish to vote in the July 8th federal election, now is the time to have it corrected. Call the telephone number listed at the bottom right of this ad. That way, you'll be sure the corrections are made so that you will be eligible to vote on July 8th.

The procedure for correcting the voters list is relatively simple. In urban polling divisions, the revising officer is a judge or an elector appointed by a judge. The revising officer is assisted by two revising agents, who are available to the Returning Officer and at your request, will visit your home to obtain the required information.

You can also go personally to the Revising Officer to have any corrections made. The address where the revising officer works and the days and hours of the revision, can be found on the top of the printed list of electors.

You can also find the information posted in most post offices or you can call the number of your Returning Officer at the right, who will give you the required information.

If you live in a rural area...

In a rural polling division, the enumerator who prepared the list carries out the revision. He is the person to contact.

Remember...you can't vote in an urban polling division unless your name is on the list!

20 TIPS TO BETTER GOLF

by George Knudson

Copyright 1974, Thomson Sun Syndicate

TIP NO. 6 FOOTWORK AND BALANCE

Footwork is simply a matter of weight transfer. You address the ball with your weight equally distributed on both feet. During the backswing your weight is transferred to the right foot, making the downswing it is transferred to the left foot. At the end of your follow-through 90 per cent of your weight should be on your left foot.

Balance should be uniform throughout your swing. You will fall forward if your weight is on your right toe at the backswing; you will spin backward if your weight carries to your left heel on the follow-through.

Balance keeps the path of the clubhead on the intended line of play.

POSITIVE KEY — Balance depends on correct weight transfer.

Guidolin Signs With KC

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Bep Guidolin, former coach of Boston Bruins, was named Friday as coach of the National Hockey League expansion Kansas City Scouts.

Guidolin, who resigned May 29 after coaching Boston Bruins to the Stanley Cup finals, brushed aside reports that Bruins managing director Harry Sinden plans to file charges with the NHL accusing the Scouts of talking to Guidolin while Boston had him under contract.

"There was no tampering," said the 49-year-old Barrie, Ont., native.

Guidolin spent almost 20 years in the Bruin organization as player, scout and coach. He had been seeking a five-year contract with Boston, and resigned after being told it was against club policy.

Terms of his Scouts contract were not made public, but it was described as "multi-year."

Guidolin began his professional hockey career in 1942 with the Bruins at the age of 16, the youngest player ever to compete in the NHL. He later played for Detroit and Chicago until his retirement as an active player in 1953.

Guidolin coached Oshawa Generals of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior A series to the Memorial Cup finals in 1966 and two years ago coached London Knights to the OHA title.

After coaching Boston Bruins, the Kansas City area can be will it's the acquire, Guidolin, pointing first to his stomach and then to his heart, answered:

"When an athlete puts on the skates, he's gotta have it here and here. If it comes to ballsetts, I think Kansas City will be proud of us."

Pair Dominate Tour

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — For the last two months, Johnny Miller said, "Hubert Green has been the best player on the tour."

That's because Johnny has been on a two-month vacation," Green said, laughing.

The two young men who have dominated the golf tour this season moved into a dominant position in the second round of the $150,000 Philadelphia golf tournament Friday.

Green birdied three holes in a row on his way to a five-under-par 67 and the lead at 137, seven under par on the 6,706-yard course.

Miller matched that 67 with an 11 one-putt greens. He moved into a tie for fourth at 139, just two behind.

In between are John Schlee, the first-round leader, and Tom Jenkins, tied at 138. Jenkins' event.

Schlee had to scramble to salvage a par-72. George Knudsen of Toronto carded a 74 for 143, six strokes off the pace. Ben Kern of London, Ont., missed the cut of 147 with a 76-76—152.

Mike Hill had a 70 and was tied with Miller at 139.

Defending champion Tom Weiskopf had another 71 for 142. Miller, a 29-year-old bachelor from Player went to a 74—145.

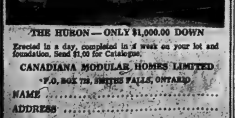
Tony Jacklin of England missed the cut with a 74—149. He was the victim of a triple bogey seven on the 396-yard sixth hole where he hit his tee shot out of bounds, later hit Bobby Cruickshank in the fairway and eventually had to make a 30-foot putt to salvage a seven.

Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino are not competing in this

Oshawa Crushes Kitchener 16-0

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Oshawa crushed Kitchener 16-0 in the only Ontario Football League game played Friday.

Oshawa, in running its season record to 8-4, combined two Kitchener pitchers for 16 hits.



The winners eliminated the win by chasing home nine runs in the final innings.

Paul Wannamaker held Kitchener to only four hits, one a double by Don Heffernan.

Keith Wagler was the starting and losing pitcher. He was relieved by Ron Robinson in the fifth inning after Oshawa built up a 7-0 lead.

INTRODUCING TEXACO'S NEW BOOK.
Now you can understand your car and your mechanic.
How to get along with your car
How it runs and how to keep it running with valuable information concerning safe, economical and trouble-free driving.

If there ever was a time when you should understand more about the operation of your car, it's right now. Especially when you consider that both buying and operating costs are rising. So, you owe it to yourself to know as much as possible about your car. That's why we have published a new illustrated book with over 54 pages dedicated to helping you understand your car and its operation. If you own or drive a car, our new book is 'must' reading.

Before you say, 'I don't want to tinker with my car,' let us explain. 'How to get along with your car' is not a do-it-yourself book. There is nothing that is frighteningly technical about it. In fact, even if you've never lifted your car's hood, with the help of our book you'll be able to identify most parts of your car from radiator to tail light. And you'll better understand the basic function of each part. All explained in simple, easy-to-understand language with colour illustrations and diagrams to help. And when you're right down to it, what our new book will do is make you a more knowledgeable, confident driver, able to communicate on more equal terms with your mechanic.

Our new book also tells you the basic car maintenance that should be performed, when it should be done (based on your type of driving) and what to look and listen for in order to avoid costly repair bills. Understanding what those 'clicks', 'pings', 'knocks', 'rattles' and 'squeals' are can alert you to take the appropriate action. And that may save you money.

'How to get along with your car' also gives you tips on automobile warranties, car insurance and grooming your car so it will be worth more when you do trade it. Most importantly it deals with driving safely and what to do when your find yourself in a difficult situation. There's even a section where you can rate yourself as a driver.

Last, but by no means least, we discuss gasoline mileage and how it can be improved seventeen ways. Even if you only read this one chapter, you'll be happy you picked up your copy of our new book.

To get your copy of 'How to get along with your car' simply drive into any participating Texaco Service Station and ask for one! There is a small charge but we're sure you'll think it well worth the price. And we think if we can bring a little more understanding and pleasure into your driving, that's worth it too.

THE UNEXPLAINED

by Allen Spraggett

Fiction Becomes Fact

By ALLAN SPRAGGETT

History written in advance? It can't be, of course. And yet . . .

Consider the story of Morgan Robertson and one of his novels. Robertson, a noted writer of sea stories, penned the saga of a huge, opulent Atlantic liner, loaded with rich and complacent people, which during an April voyage, hits an iceberg and sank with virtually everybody on board. The name of Mr. Robertson's fictional ship was the Titan and she had been declared unsinkable.

Besides the name of the ship and the circumstances under which she sank, there were other obvious parallels between the fictional vessel and the famous ship, the Titanic, which of course sank in the Atlantic in April after hitting an iceberg. Both ships, the Titanic and the fictional Titan, had too few lifeboats; the Titan had 2,000 persons aboard and 24 lifeboats, the Titanic 2,207 persons and 20 lifeboats.

Both ships had a top speed of 25 knots. In the novel, the Titan's displacement was 70,000 tons, while the Titanic's was 66,000 tons. The Titan's length was 800 feet, that of the Titanic 882 feet. Both ships had three propellors.

It would be comforting if Morgan Robertson's novel, The Wreck of the Titan, published by McClure's, New York was clearly a fictional re-write of the true story of the Titanic, and not a too imaginative one at that. The only trouble is that the theory is that the novel was published in 1898 — 14 years BEFORE the wreck of the Titanic and several years before the construction of that glittering ship was even contemplated.

Instead of the familiar fiction based on fact, which we're all used to, what we have here looks suspiciously like fact based on fiction.
